SADAT BEGIN

Nobel Prize For Sadat, Begin

OSLO (Reuter) — President Anwar Sadat of Egypt and Prime Minister Menachem Begin of Israel will share the 1978 Nobel Peace Prize, the Norwegian Nobel Committee announced here today.

The two Middle East leaders, for 11 months engaged in an often-difficult drive to end 30 years of Arab-Israeli hostility, had been prominently mentioned as likely candidates for the prize.

This year's prize carries a cash award of $165,000.

Ironically, the prize was awarded at a time when Israel and Egypt have once again hit a snag in their peace-treaty negotiations and prospects are uncertain for a treaty by mid-December, the deadline Sadat and Begin promised to meet after their summit conference at Camp David, Md., with U.S. President Carter in September.

The Nobel Committee said in its citation that by awarding the Peace Prize to Begin and Sadat "the committee wishes not only to honor actions already performed in the service of peace, but also encourage further efforts to work out practical solutions which can give reality to those hopes of a lasting peace as they have been kindled by the agreements."

Committee head Aase Lionaes issued a statement saying that "with the historic visit of . . . Sadat to Jerusalem last Nov. 19-21, 1977, a breach was forced in the psychological wall which for a whole generation has blocked understanding and human contact between Egypt and Israel."

Sadat, 59, and Begin, who will be 65 Nov. 18, are the first Arab and Israeli citizens to win the Peace Prize. Sadat is the second winner from the African continent. South African black leader Albert Luthuli won the prize in 1960.

Last year's Peace Prize winner was Amnesty International, the London-based human rights organization. Mairead Corrigan and Betty Williams, founders of the Peace People organization in Northern Ireland, won the 1976 prize, which was awarded a year late.

TALKS MOOTED

JERUSALEM (Reuter) — Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin may meet with U.S. President Carter in Washington next week to try to heal a widening rift between their two countries concerning Israeli settlements on occupied Arab land, Israeli government sources said today.

Begin is due to make unofficial appearances in the United States on his way to Canada for an official visit starting Nov. 6.

No Jail Terms For Defaulters

Persons unable to pay fines will not have to go to jail in default under a new program being set up by the attorney-general's ministry.

Called the Fine Option program, it will be launched as a pilot project this January in five Vancouver Island communities — Victoria, Duncan, Nanaimo, Courtenay and Campbell River.

Under the program judges will be able to sentence persons to community service work instead of jail in cases where there has been a default in paying a fine.

John Proudfoot, a program analyst for the corrections branch, said the program is modelled partly after similar schemes that have been operating in Alberta and Saskatchewan for several years.

He said the John Howard Society of Vancouver Island will run the program in the Nanaimo area while community service order officers will run it in the other locations, both on a trial basis to determine which is the more effective approach.

In Saskatchewan the program is exclusively run by community organizations.

Proudfoot said if the program is successful after nine months it will likely be expanded to other centres throughout the province.

'Judicial Pickup' Probed

VANCOUVER (CP) — Lawrence Goulet, British Columbia's chief provincial court judge, has ordered an investigation into a claim that a judge picked up a prostitute in Vancouver last week.

Making the claim is George Peden a downtown hotel security manager, who said he witnessed the pick-up while accompanied by two Canada Immigration officials who were watching for United States prostitutes operating in Canada illegally.

The officers refused to discuss the incident.

Asked how he knew the woman to be a prostitute and the man to be a judge, Peden replied that he has seen the judge in court and that the woman told him she was a prostitute.

Under the Provincial Court Act, the chief judge either dismisses the complaint or recommends an official inquiry by the Judicial Council which can recommend to the provincial government that the judge be removed from the bench.

Peden said he felt obliged to bring the matter to the chief judge's attention because of the high moral regard citizens must have for the judiciary system.

"I feel an incident like this could hamper the decisions that this particular judge could bring against a prostitute," he said.

RESEARCHER LETS SECRET OUT

'Most UIC Recipients Likely Don't Need It'

VANCOUVER (CP) — Surveys by Employment and Immigration Canada say up to 90 per cent of Canadians collecting unemployment insurance might not need it, researcher Michael Walker said Thursday.

Walker, of the privately-funded Fraser Institute in Vancouver, said the government figures, which have not been made public, show that most recipients of unemployment insurance do not need the money to survive.

The figures also show that a planned tightening of unemployment benefits will not put a heavy load on provincial welfare departments, Walker said.

The disclosure follows a report Wednesday by Auditor-General J. J. Macdonell which estimates that $142 million in unemployment insurance benefits were overpayed to Canadians under the current system in 1977.

A federal-provincial study group was established following an announcement last month that the federal government plans to cut the cost of the program by $580 million next year by making it harder to qualify and reducing payments to those who do.

"The task force has admitted that government figures show that only 10 per cent of people who become disentitled from unemployment insurance show up on the welfare roles," said Walker.

"That gives you a pretty good clue as to how many people need the benefits. They can go one of three ways when their unemployment runs out. They can go on welfare, they can find a job, or they find they didn't need the benefits at all.

"If you consider that the unemployment insurance benefits were their only source of income (which it usually must be to qualify), then clearly up to 90 per cent of those people were able to get along without it or they would have to go on welfare."

Walker said many unreleased studies have shown that most recipients are not in need but the studies have not been released because they put the federal government in a bad light.

"And as well they weaken the case for provincial ministers such as Bill Vander Zalm (provincial human resources minister) because they have been arguing that the cutbacks in the program will be a burden to the provinces' welfare plans.

Georgio Gaudet, provincial chairman of the study group, said in an interview from New Brunswick that

Trade Surplus $631M

OTTAWA (CP) — The merchandise trade surplus for September was $631 million, the best monthly showing since March, Statistics Canada reported today.

It brought the merchandise trade surplus for the third quarter of the year to $751 million — a 12 per cent increase from the second quarter surplus of $674 million, but only about half the $1.5-billion surplus recorded in the first quarter of 1978.

News of the surplus caused a jump in the Canadian dollar of nearly half a cent at New York this morning and took it over the 85-cent mark for the first time in weeks. At the same time the U.S. dollar declined further on news of a continuation in the American trade deficit.

The Canadian merchandise trade surplus for the first nine months of the year now stands at $2.88 billion. At the same time last year it was $1.81 billion.

The federal agency says the third-quarter showing, while small by comparison with the surplus for the January-to-April period is exceptional for this time of year by historical standards.

Both exports and imports rose sharply in September from August. Exports were up by 20 per cent to $4.7 billion and imports increased by 9.5 per cent to $3.9 billion.

The cumulative merchandise trade surplus for the year at the end of September was 60 per cent higher than the total for the first three quarters of 1977.

September's large surplus is attributed by the federal agency to increases in exports of motor vehicles and parts, especially trucks, forestry products, metals and machinery.

There were more imports of industrial materials, trucks, automotive parts, machinery and other equipment in September than in the previous month. Most of the imports were from the United States.

There was a drop last month in the import of passenger cars from above-aver-

NO WINNER FOR PUZZLE

With mail deliveries returning to normal, judging of the Prevue Prize Puzzle contest of two weeks ago has been completed — and there was no winner. Solution to the puzzle will be found on page 18 of today's Times.

Unfortunately the postal strike did not end in time for this week's puzzle to arrive but it is hoped that the contest can be resumed in next week's Prevue section.

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau said today he will not permit the McDonald royal commission to sift through confidential cabinet documents "in the hopes they are going to find some illegality."

But Trudeau told the Commons in reply to New Democrat Leader Ed Broadbent that he would permit publication of any cabinet document that shows evidence that cabinet ministers knew Mounties were breaking the law.

Trudeau was under pressure from opposition members to explain why government lawyers had refused to allow the McDonald commission on RCMP wrongdoing to see four confidential government documents.

The lawyer for retired RCMP commission W. L. Higgitt had argued Thursday the documents would back up Higgitt's statements earlier this week that former solicitors-general had been aware that Mounties were breaking the law in the course of their duties. (See also story on page 9).

Trudeau said the government lawyers had not received any specific instructions from him to withhold the documents from the commission. They had objected because Pierre Lamontagne, Higgitt's lawyer, had not given any advance notice that he wanted to produce the documents.

He said government lawyers had been "caught by surprise."

Pressed by Opposition leader Joe Clark for a "categorical assurance" that every government document would be made available to the McDonald commission, regardless of a secret or confidential classification, Trudeau said this had already been given "in a general way."

But he insisted that there could never be release "of any and all minutes" of cabinet discussions. The secrecy of cabinet discussions had to be maintained.

Higgitt, who has maintained that Warren Allmand and Jean-Pierre Goyer were told the force had opened mail, had his credibility called into question at the hearings Thursday.

Mail Floods PO

Times News Services

Post office spokesmen today reported the mail processing plant in Saanich has a crush of mail similar to the Yuletide season when the sorters handle about one million pieces of mail a day. See story on page 24.

Meanwhile, in Washington, the U.S. Postal Service announced it will resume mail service to Canada Saturday.

A spokesman said Canadian officials who requested the resumption say they will not be able to accept mail from the United States before that date because of the backlog caused by the walkout of postal workers that ended Thursday.

SHADBOLT

Shadbolt Charged For Tax

BURNABY (CP) — Jack Shadbolt, an internationally-known Canadian artist, has been charged with six criminal offences of evading taxes and filing false income tax statements.

The charges, relating to the taxation years 1970 to 1974, involve the alleged undeclared receipt of almost $42,000, mainly from the sale of paintings, and the alleged evasion of about $13,000 in federal taxes, says Crown counsel Michael Slater.

The six counts — one of evasion and five of filing false statements — each carry a maximum fine of double the tax owed, and a maximum two-year jail sentence.

Shadbolt, 69, is pleading not guilty to all six counts in a provincial court trial that began this week.

A resident of this Vancouver suburb, Shadbolt has represented Canada in exhibitions around the world and his commissioned works include murals in Edmonton International Airport and the CBC building in Vancouver.

Cominco Walkout

Ottawa Cuts Pension Index

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government introduced legislation Thursday that would put limits on cost-of-living increases in the pensions of former federal employees and their survivors in an attempt to get costs of the controversial plan under control.

Under terms of the legislation, introduced by Treasury Board President Robert Andras, pension increases for all former employees and their survivors, including the military, the RCMP and MPs, would no longer be indexed to rise automatically with the cost of living as they have since 1974.

Instead, increases to offset the effects of inflation on pensions would be given on an ad hoc basis beginning Jan. 1, 1979.

The size of the increase would be tied to earnings on the pension plan contributions made by the former employees as well as to the size of a special indexing fund to which all employees now contribute.

They say next year's increase will fall below the nine-per-cent that would have been received Jan. 1 by about 200,000 former employees and their survivors under the existing formula. Officials say best estimates are that the increases will be about eight per cent.

The increases now are received at age 55, when employees with 30 years' service can retire. The legislation would gradually raise to 60 the age at which the increases are received.

Beginning in 1979, ad hoc increases would begin at age 56 and be stepped up each year, reaching age 60 by 1983.

Another section of the bill would close a loophole in the pension plan that allowed an employee to retire Dec. 31 and collect his or her pension along with a full year's cost-of-living increase the next day.

The increases to help offset inflation now will be prorated by months of retirement. An employee retiring in June would get a six-month adjustment while the employee retiring Dec. 31 would get nothing.

Big Budget Profit Building

Half-way through the current fiscal year the B.C. government continues to build up large budgetary profits as it apparently heads towards a second record surplus in as many years.

Finance Minister Evan Wolfe, however, insists the current $114.4 million surplus will be eaten up by heavy second-half expenditures and the budget will balance as predicted.

The surplus at the end of September is again attributed to higher-than-expected revenues and lower-than-anticipated expenditures.

And last year's surplus eventually topped the $140 million mark, the largest in the history of the province.

Despite these figures and despite the fact no Social Credit government has ever finished a fiscal year without a surplus, Wolfe still claims his projection of a balanced budget remains unchanged.

Opposition MLAs have criticised such surpluses, pointing to the fact that governments are unable to make money and can only obtain it through taxation.

They argue that any government which makes a profit is simply overtaxing people.

Budgetary revenue for the first six months of the 1978-79 fiscal year was $2.1 billion, $32 million more than originally forecast. Higher-than-anticipated revenues came from sales tax ($24.5 million), forestry ($19.8 million) and water rentals ($11.8 million).

For the first time in several years, however, oil and gas revenues were lower than forecast ($17.9 million less than anticipated).

Such revenues once represented the single largest contribution to the budgetary surplus.

Wolfe said, however, this does not necessarily mean the boom is over, it only reflects a decrease in export sales from last year.

Revenue in the first six months was $187 million higher than in the same period of the previous year.

One of the main reasons for the jump in revenues was an increase in personal income tax (up $75.6 million) and corporation income tax (up $36.1 million).

SECOND LOOK URGED

Recreation and Conservation Minister Sam Bawlf has urged Victoria Mayor Mike Young to reconsider the city's rejection of a fish and wildlife branch proposal on water level controls at Thetis Lake.

Bawlf said he was disturbed when the city turned down a project last week that would have built new dams and spillways at the lake as a method to control water flow into Craigflower Creek.

The project was designed to protect cutthroat trout and salmon fry that are killed in the summer by drought and in the winter by flooding.

The fish and wildlife branch estimated it would cost between $15,000 and $20,000 to build the water control devices and had earmarked $20,000 for the project.

Young and other council members, however, expressed concern that the proposal might be detrimental to swimming at Thetis Lake.

Bawlf said that he has since discussed the matter with Young.

Capt. Scott Fish & Chip Founders Go Belly-Up

The company that formed the Captain Scott's Fish & Chips fast food franchise has gone bankrupt, leaving debts totalling nearly $600,000.

But the president of the company, Sy Mytting of Victoria, said today the action will have no effect on the operation of the more than 60 Captain Scott outlets throughout Canada and the United States.

Those franchise agreements, said Mytting, were sold earlier in the year to an eastern Canadian company, Available Projects Ltd., for $600,000.

The company later changed its name to Captain Scott Fish & Chips (1978) Ltd.

Mytting said the bankrupcy involves only Captain Scott Fish & Chips, a partnership formed in 1976 of Captain Scott Fish & Chips Ltd. and Century Foods, two Victoria firms.

Official receiver W.J. Parker of the federal consumer services department put down the cause of bankrupcy to a situation where the company has run short of ready cash.

A meeting of creditors was held in Vancouver Thursday at which time Parker appointed Coopers & Lybrand, a Vancouver chartered accountant firm to act as trustees.

Parker also appointed four inspectors, including Victoria lawyer Gary Tindall, who represents several creditors. The other inspectors are C.R. Hoekstra of Acts Enterprises, Phil Dubienski, representing Dubies Du-It-All of Winnipeg, and J.C. Boyce, representing Eatons.

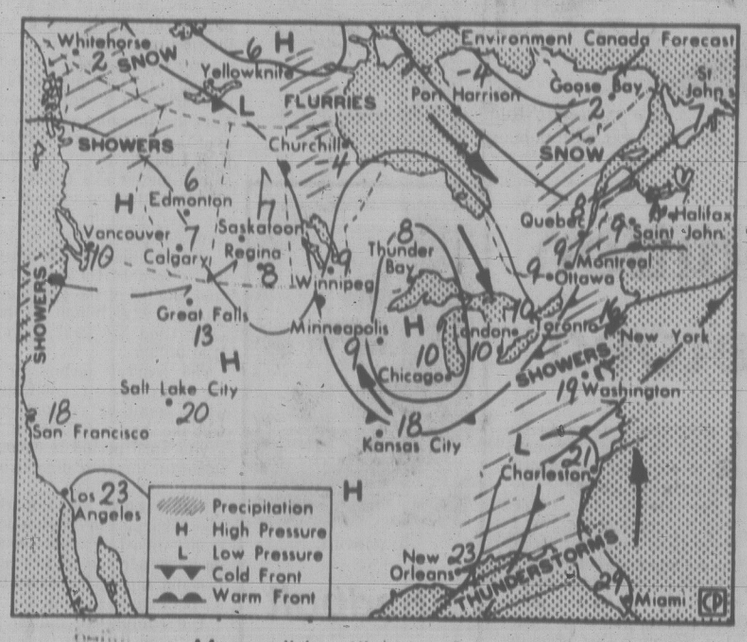

A spokesman for the consumer services department said the company declared liabilities of $593,285 and listed 185 creditors.

Among the major creditors are Ron Scott, of Saanichton, who declared a contigent liability of $230,000 against Century Foods; Sy's Chicken Shack, owned by Mytting, which claims $45,820; International Franchise Systems Incorporated, another Mytting company, claiming $13,064; Syvert Mytting claiming $13,448; Tarol Investments, $36,000 and C.R. Hoesktrsa, $31,950.

The spokesman said the company listed assets at a book value of $350,859, including $216,500 left to pay on a $600,000 loan due from Captain Scott Fish & Chips (1978) Ltd. in the sale of the franchises.

The spokesman said the company also listed about $74,000 in receivables it doesn't expect to collect. Among those is a $43,168 loan advanced to Mytting Investments Inc., another Mytting company. The loan is listed as a bad debt, the spokesman said.

Map valid until noon Saturday

A frontal system moving south produced a band of clouds with rainfall from the Kootenays to the coast. High pressure in the Cariboo kept night skies clear. A deep low off the Alaska shore and moist unstable air brought scattered showers from the west, the normal north coast fare. Temperatures were near normal although somewhat mild. Today will bring little change as each system is moving slowly. However, the front is forecast to leave B.C. tonight.

Driving Fines May Return

Major changes to Motor Vehicle legislation, including a possible restoration of fines and tougher measures for dealing with driver suspensions, are expected to come out of a provincial government task force study now under way.

Task force chairman Neil McDiarmid, director of criminal law for the province, said Thursday he hopes to have an interim report in the hands of cabinet by the end of the year.

He said the committee, made up of two officials from the Insurance Corporation of B.C., three from the Motor Vehicle Branch, three from the attorney-general's ministry, and the director of the provincial Counter-Attack program, have met about six times since the task force was formed in late June.

To date the committee has received 154 briefs from individuals and groups proposing legislative changes.

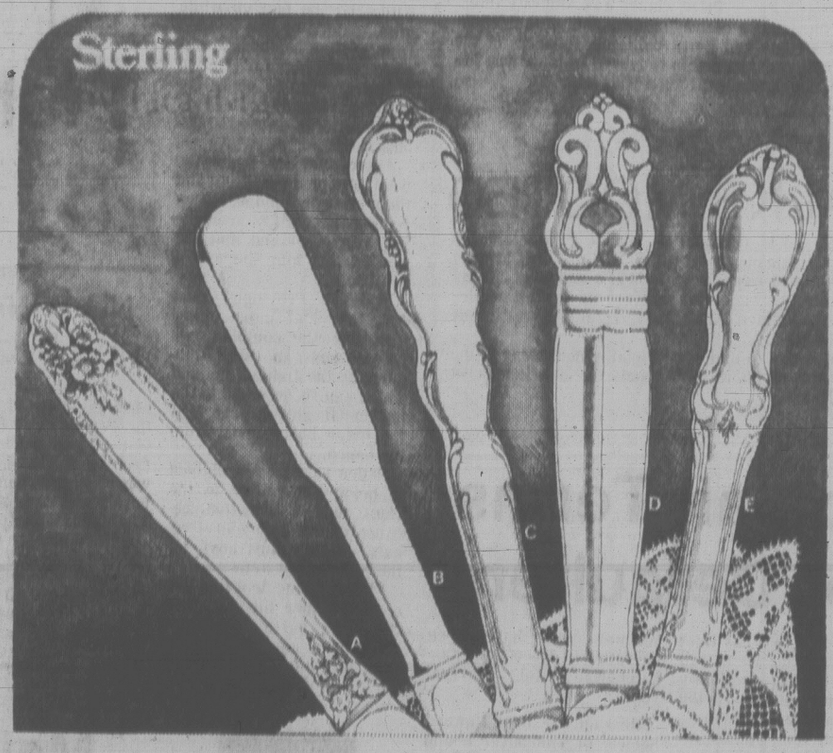

McDairmid called the response excellent.

He said public meetings will be held throughout the province between January and March, 1979, to review the briefs and accept other opinions from interested citizens.

The task force is charged with examining ways of dealing with drive)s in terms of enforcement and yet at the same time providing prompt and efficient sanctions for individual.

McDiarmid said the whole question of the demerit system for moving offences is being reviewed.

SEASICKNESS 'PILL' WORN BEHIND EAR

STANFORD, Calif. (UPI) — A dime-sized metal foil placed behind the ear has been developed to alleviate motion sickness, a drug firm has announced.

The device will be available in 18 months by prescription only, Alejandro Zaffaroni, president of Alza Corp., said Thursday.

The British government already has approved its sale as an over-the-counter remedy.

The main advantage of the paste-on button, from which a thin film of the drug scopalmine is absorbed directly through the skin, "is that the body gets a very low, steady dose, which very much eliminates side effects," said physiologist Dr. Jane Shaw, who helped develop the system.

Zaffaroni said the device is designed mainly to combat seasickness but may eventually prove valuable in suppressing nausea from a variety of sources, including powerful drugs used to fight cancer.

Once applied, the device will curb motion sickness for up to three days, Zaffaroni said. The foil already has been approved by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration, he said.

Brolly-Gun Killer Notched Up Eight?

LONDON (Reuter) — The assassin who killed Bulgarian defector Georgi Markov may have murdered as many as eight other victims in Europe, The Evening Standard said Thursday.

Commander Jim Nevill, chief of Scotland Yard's anti-terror squad, described the newspaper report as speculation and said police had no knowledge of other victims.

Markov, a broadcaster and playwright who defected from Bulgaria in 1970 and became an outspoken critic of its communist regime, died Sept. 11.

Since then, Scotland Yard has announced that a metal ball smaller than a pinhead was found in Markov's thigh. British police believe the pinhead may have contained a mysterious poison and are treating the case as a murder investigation.

In Paris, French police surgeons removed an identical pellet from the back of another Bulgarian emigre, Vladimir Kostov, who reported he had been the target of an assassination attempt on an escalator in the city's subway system.

The Evening Standard said detectives believed Markov's killer was recruited in Sofia several years ago, trained as an assassin and then handed a death list of Bulgarian defectors who were to be eliminated.

"Since then, he has been systematically working his way through the list, disposing of his victims, usually in circumstances so cunningly worked out that no one even suspected the killer was at work," the newspaper said.

The Markov and Kostov attacks were failures because they came to light, although the assassin's technique was to shatter the nerves of potential victims who saw friends and associates dying inexplicably, the paper added.

It said police are convinced there have been a number of other attacks over the last few years, mainly in West Germany and France. These included the death of an East European who died 18 months ago in a car crash in France, but on whose body police later found a tiny circular mark identical with that on Markov's thigh.

A criminal investigation has been started in Paris into the attempted murder of Kostov.

Magistrate Claude Hanoteau took the action after the British forensic experts' report that the tiny metal pellet found in Kostov's back is similar to the pellet that killed Markov.

Police say Kostov was stabbed with an umbrella, as was Markov, as he emerged from a subway station in Paris on Aug. 26. The umbrella in each case is thought to have fired the pellet through the skin.

French police said Kostov sought immediate medical treatment and had the pellet extracted from his back.

LOVE CANAL . . . $100M SUIT

NIAGARA FALLS, N.Y. (CP) — About 1,000 people living near the Love canal have filed a class action claim for $100 million for injuries they say they suffered as result of living near the former chemical dump site.

The city, its board of education and Niagara County are named as potential defendants in the claim filed Wednesday.

The U.S. government moved about 235 families from the area in August after revealing that chemicals from the dump were reaching homes and possibly harming residents.

Residents allege that the chemicals have caused such disorders as poor sight and premature birth.

The canal, a 16-acre site near the Niagara River, was used as a chemical dump between 1930 and 1953 by local industries.

Amin Bombs Tanzania

The Guardian

DAR ES SALAAM, Tanzania — Ugandan aircraft apparently bombed Tanzanian territory two weeks ago, but Tanzanian officials are playing down the incident, which they regard as a potential distraction from the problem of southern Africa.

"We are not going to allow Idi Amin to distract us from the important business of dealing with southern Africa," a government official said while declining to confirm or deny that Ugandan planes had attacked Tanzania at a time when Amin was claiming an invasion by a battalion of Tanzanian troops.

Tavelers from Tanzania's West Lake region report Ugandan war planes dropped several bombs on villages and roads near the town of Bukoba on the shore of Lake Victoria near the Ugandan border.

Casualties were apparently minimal in the attack.

An undetermined number of Tanzanian troops stationed in Dar es Salaam have been transferred to the Ugandan border in recent weeks, according to well-informed sources. The border area is said to be tense following the Ugandan raid.

Tanzanian officials have made no comment on the attack.

The Ugandan claims of an invasion were quickly denied by Tanzanian President Julius Nyerere, who criticized the British Broadcasting Corp. for playing up Amin as a way of discrediting serious African leaders who are concentrating on ending white minority rule in southern Africa.

Well-informed sources say that the Tanzanian government is not seriously concerned about the possibility of a major attack by the Ugandan army, which they believe is currently in a state of disarray. But they do concede that troublesome incidents such as a bombing run by a Ugandan plane or two could take place and they are therefore keeping Tanzanian troops in the border area in a state of alert as they have been for the past six years.

An indication of Tanzanian concern about the mercurial Field Marshall Amin is the recent deployment of a newly acquired squadron of Soviet-built MiG fighter-bombers to Mwanza, just across Lake Victoria from the Ugandan border.

Putting the Pieces Together

Most Canadians reacted with relief to the news that the inside postal workers were going back to their jobs. They had tried to defy the will of Parliament and predictably had been defeated. It was a contest that the government could not lose — could not afford to lose — without tumbling the country down the slope to anarchy.

The Canadian Union of Postal Workers' capitulation does not end the troubles of the post office, however. Some workers, though probably not as many as their union would like the public to think, are returning in a truculent frame of mind. There is ugly talk of slowdowns and working to rule. (Why is it that "working to rule" in industrial disputes always means less work gets done than during normal times?)

If such dire prophecies are fulfilled it can only lead to a reenactment of the grim, almost brutal scenario of the last week and further deterioration of a postal system that is already on the verge of collapse.

The public is prepared to accept that much of the blame for this state of affairs must fall on the government. The Liberal administration was in almost an obscene hurry to end the postal workers' legal strike (Canada survived a 43-day postal strike in 1973 without any permanent damage to the national economy). Was it motivated by the demonstrated necessity of the mails to keep the Canadian economy moving? Or, at rock bottom in the political popularity polls, did the government want something to distract attention from its own failures? Probably large parts of both went into the decision to bring the sledgehammer down on the CUPW.

Many Canadians must have noted the irony of having the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, itself under investigation for various unorthodox police practices, including the interception of the mail, raid the union's offices and lay criminal charges against several dozen CUPW members and officials.

Union propaganda aside, there have been serious deficiencies in management which must be corrected if any semblance of efficiency is to be restored. Definitely not the way to go about repairing tattered union-management relations is what apparently happened at the Victoria mail sorting centre out at Glanford. When some supervisors rubbed it in about their being forced back to work by Parliament half of the union members just turned around and went home after booking in Wednesday night.

Another example of how the post office won't be put back together again was the Senate's ludicrous debate on alleged communists in the CUPW. From some of the aging Conservatives in the Senate we might have expected the bizarre charges that the mail strike was a communist plot; some of the fossils interred there probably believe all strikes and student protests and women's liberation agitation are KGB plots. But to have the government leader in the Senate, Ray Perrault, announce that the federal government is "investigating" the CUPW to determine if there was communist infiltration is is disturbing indeed.

Is it unlawful to be a communist in Canada? What do a postal worker's politics have to do with whether he goes on strike or not? Can the government believe that its employees have no genuine grievances and that labor unrest is created by communist agitators? Is this evidence that the Canadian government is reverting to the 19th century attitude that union activities and strikes were unlawful conspiracies and contraventions of the combines laws?

Better the government might ask itself what is going on inside the post office to have created such a sour state between unions and post office management? rather than hunt for imaginary communists.

Both sides in the dispute should strive to make the coming 90 days a period of constructive truce, during which steps can be taken toward a new contract. The union and its members will have a chance to demonstrate their sense of responsibility. So will the government.

A Plague of Fools

If she had worn a jester's cap and bells on her toes, Simma Holt couldn't have made a bigger fool of herself than she did at the Canadian Radio-Television and Telecommunications Commission hearing in Vancouver.

And if he had had leaped into the air with gills flapping, commissioner Roy Faibish couldn't have done a better job of going for the Liberal MP's bait than he did during the juvenile clash between the two at Tuesday's session.

Never hesitant to favor a public splash — whether through demanding death for marijuana vendors or talking of 10-year-old hired killers — over reasoned debate, Holt clearly knew what she was asking for when she tried to pin an anti-CRTC button on the lapel of commissioner Faibish. And the commissioner too must have known and should have refrained from throwing the button into the audience and engaging Holt in a screaming match, which allegedly included some crude suggestions concerning where the pin might eventually be placed.

As a result of this slanging match, we know little more than the fact that Holt, as always, has no use for the CRTC and likes Faibish even less, and that Faibish is not likely to invite the MP to his next dinner party.

Thanks, Jubilee

At a time when there seems to be a great deal of adverse criticism of everything and everybody, I would like to express my sincere thanks to all of the third floor south at Royal Jubilee Hospital.

From the time I arrived at emergency to when I left after major surgery, they did everything humanly possible to make me comfortable.

The food was appetizing and nutritious, nicely served and plenty of it. I cannot praise them all enough.

Thank you one and all from the bottom of my heart. — J. H. (Budd) Brown, 12-630 Gorge Road.

It's a Myth

The postal strike will probably nourish the rightist mythology that the power of unions rivals that of the state. Union members are possibly closer to reality on this point but they too overestimate the power of their defensive organizations against the ever-encroaching advances of capital against wages and conditions.

The biggest cause of the myth of union power is organized labor's attempt to keep money wages up to the rising cost of living caused by government devaluation of currency. Which means trying to prevent erosion of real wages.

While wages, as a relative component of capital investment, tend to diminish generally, they fall more slowly during boom times than during a business recession, when, with the pressure of unemployment as an additional lever, government and industry tighten the screws a few more turns.

The postal workers are showing courage in their striving for wage parity, but not surprisingly the situation has come to include the related issue of the right of "public service" workers to strike. One CUPW spokesman remarked that if this right were removed, they would be nothing but slaves. He is not alone in his confused definition.

If the workers generally were aware that involuntary work, the prostitution of their life force on the market place, producing surplus values for an idle owning class, is actually wage slavery, they would realize the relative impotence of unions beyond maintaining the price of their energy at its value.

Postal workers would not then be handicapped by thinking that they serve the public, instead of the approximately 10 per cent of the population who monopolize the means of life and who require a postal service as a segment of the whole profit-making economy. Indeed, if it was thought that the profit motive had given way all this time in favor of providing a relatively minor consideration such as mail delivery solely for the use of humanity, then why does it not defer to something as important as starving people in third world countries? A UN figure has about 10,000 children dying daily from disease and starvation. Basically because it is not profitable to produce food for them, (they can't pay for it).

Union activity merely prolongs the insecurity problem. Extending one's knowledge of the nature of current society, and intelligent political action to reorganize it through the Socialist Party of Canada is the only solution. — J. G. Jenkins, 1090 Lodge Ave.

RCMP: Who's telling truth? Former commissioner Higgitt, or Trudeau and ex-solicitors-general?

By RICHARD GWYN

A member [RCMP officer] is within his rights to refuse to do any unlawful act. Such a refusal may be given with impunity. Though no disciplinary action would be taken, a transfer may be indicated.

Memorandum prepared for signing by RCMP Commissioner W.L. Higgit, July 30, 1970.

OTTAWA — Cast your mind back eight years. Urban terrorism is starting up. Watergate hasn't happened. No one yet has said a rude word about the RCMP. As an officer you are ordered to do an illegal act. Would you, then, have done it without thinking, or would you have gone off with your principles to a new posting — in Tuktoyaktuk, say?

As he told the McDonald commission this week, commissioner Higgitt never signed the memorandum . He just scribbled on it, "Under no circumstances should anything of this nature be circulated in written or memorandum form." The RCMP officers who had worried what would happen to them if they were caught were to be told, but verbally only, "the force will stand behind you."

Like dull history books, commissions of inquiry deal with text, not with texture. They dig out, if they are done well as the McDonald inquiry is being done, all the relevant pieces of paper and descriptions of conversatons. They don't, though, weave around these strings of words the context of attitudes and of standards and of behavior prevailing at the time, which alone can give meaning to these words.

JEAN-PIERRE GOYER: force was wary of him. He asked for monthly wiretapping reports

The commission now is at a critical juncture. It has to decide who is telling the truth — not the whole truth but the greater part of it. On the one side, ex-commissioner Higgitt, as well as other RCMP witnesses; on the other, at least two former solicitors-general, Jean-Pierre Goyer and Warren Allmand.

According to Higgitt, he warned Goyer and Allmand, as well as their predecessor, Sen. George McIlraith, that the RCMP, "to function effectively," might have to commit illegal acts, and that specifically the force opened letters and made surreptitious entries to plant bugs. Goyer and Allmand have denied they were told this.

Further, says Higgitt, it is "absolutely inconceivable" that he did not tell Goyer about the 1972 break-in at the offices of a left wing Montreal group. Goyer has denied he was told this.

You have to pick your side — a couple of burnt-out politicians or a 36-year veteran of the RCMP.

Perhaps perversely, the account of the politicians seems to me to be the more credible, even though Higgitt says the discussions took place "orally and in written form," which means that supporting documents must exist.

Go back to the context which the paragraph cited at the start of this column is intended to recreate. At that time, junior RCMP officers asked their instructors what will happen to them if they get caught in an illegal act. The instructors can't come up with a satisfactory answer. They ask their superiors for guidance.

For a month, memos fly inside RCMP headquarters, from the security branch to administration to the legal branch, and on up through assistant and deputy commissioner to, at last, the desk of the commissioner. He, Higgitt, rules that nothing should be done.

Amid the mass of words in the internal RCMP correspondence made public by the McDonald commission, the most revealing ones are the ones that are left out. No one, at any rank, suggests that maybe the illegal acts ought to stop. No one suggests that the politicians be told. Instead, the correspondence ends with the scribbled note: "Put away this in secret envelope."

A classic example of an institution applying the two cardinal rules for bureaucratic success — never put on paper anything you don't want to be read back to you one day, and, to get along, you go along, unless you want to go to Tuktoyaktuk.

There's a bit more than guesswork to my analysis. The as yet unpublished documentation, I'm told reliably, will show that McIlraith was told all he needed to know while the record of information transmitted to Goyer and Allmand is thin.

Again, go back to the context. Do you suppose that it is entirely coincidence that McIlraith admired the force, and championed it, while Goyer and Allmand both were disliked and mistrusted by the RCMP. Goyer, for instance, infuriated the RCMP by requiring a monthly report on wire taps, and by insisting that his top civil servant sit in on meetings with the commissioner.

Mind you, the RCMP had good reason to be suspicious of the politicians. The government took eight years to pass legislation to regularize wire taps, and has yet to do this for opening of mail. Some Liberal politicians led the RCMP to believe that Quebec separatists were almost indistinguishable from terrorists.

LESTER PEARSON: 'murky' activities sometimes inevitable

A good guess at what really happened isn't that hard to make. The politicians didn't hear what they didn't want to hear; the RCMP said as little as it could, but just enough to be able to claim later that it had said it. The texts of these events won't prove any of this, only the texture of the times will, and it is how the McDonald commission and Canadians will have to make their choice in the end.

By W. A. WILSON

OTTAWA — In the dispute that has arisen between the government and the former head of the RCMP it is inevitable that greatest attention should be paid to the question whether the prime minister and ministers have been frank with Parliament and the public.

Not all the evidence is in yet and the question stands there until the McDonald commission, which has been slow-moving, hears and probes the testimony of former solicitors-general. If the former commissioner, W.L. Higgitt, can substantiate his statement that he did inform three former solicitors-general in a general way that the duties of security service officers could involve them in transgressions of the law, political careers will be greatly damaged.

W.L. HIGGIT: said he told three solicitors-general of Mounties' dilemma

If the ministers can disprove Higgitt's statement, which involves the great difficulty of proving a negative, his credibility will be sorely damaged.

These are the elements of drama that arise from this week's testimony but they are not really the most important issue. That remains what it has always been from the first in the long series of disclosures of the ways in which the service operated over the years.

The government brought into existence years back a powerful and necessarily secretive service quite capable of significantly affecting the lives of a good many citizens; having done so, did it maintain proper supervision of the ways in which this service operated and exercised its powers, which were completely real whether or not they were always legal?

One former prime minister, the late Lester Pearson, once indicated in a private conversation with this writer that he had at least a general knowledge that the security service at times had to engage in some murky activities, although I have no recollection of the words "legal" or "illegal" being used.

Trudeau takes a radically different approach. He has not merely denied any government knowledge of the murky side of security work, he has insisted that ministers ostensibly responsible for the force should have no right to know of how it carries out its duties. That is a total divergence from the long tradition of the parliamentary system that ministers are responsible for the actions of those below them.

It seems to me that Higgitt's testimony this week and the prime minister's previously stated position pose the proper question for the Canadian people: should the ministers officially responsible for the RCMP be informed of its problems and in general of the way in which it performs its duties, and be genuinely responsible for this pattern, or should reliance continue to be placed upon the commissioner as the safeguard against improper use of power.

If the prime minister has been correctly informed his by ministers of what they did and did not know, and if they have been properly truthful with Parliament, then it follows that at least under the Trudeau government it has been left to the commissioner not only to control the force's operations but also to be the watchdog for the public, guaranteeing against abuse of powers.

No matter how the disagreement between Higgitt and former solicitors-general turns out, he has been remarkably frank with the commission on some of the points about which we badly need to know if future operations of the security service are to be on a basis that public and government know and approve.

He has told the commission that, while there were some incidents of which he had no knowledge, he and other senior officers were well aware that security service and some criminal investigation duties could put officers at risk through breaking the law. They were so well aware of this that the problem was fully discussed in a memorandum and a policy developed to meet it: if an officer found himself in trouble by acting with the knowledge of or under the orders of his superiors, he would be as fully protected as the force could manage. If he acted on his own, he might be fully protected but not necessarily. If he refused an order because transgression of the law might be involved, he might be transferred.

That would only be a satisfactory official position if another step had been involved. If the RCMP brass had fully explained their problems to government and been told that they must meet their duties but that their powers could not be enlarged, then this position would be understandable, whether or not it would be approved.

No matter which way this policy was accepted, by the force on its own or with government acquiesence, it makes the operational and administrative duties of the commissioner incompatable with the role of watchdog against abuse of power. To expect both of him is to expect more than most human beings can possibly deliver. That brings us back immediately to the issue at the heart of the prime minister's approach to this whole problem: ministerial responsibility and the right of solicitors-general to know the ways in which the RCMP operates.

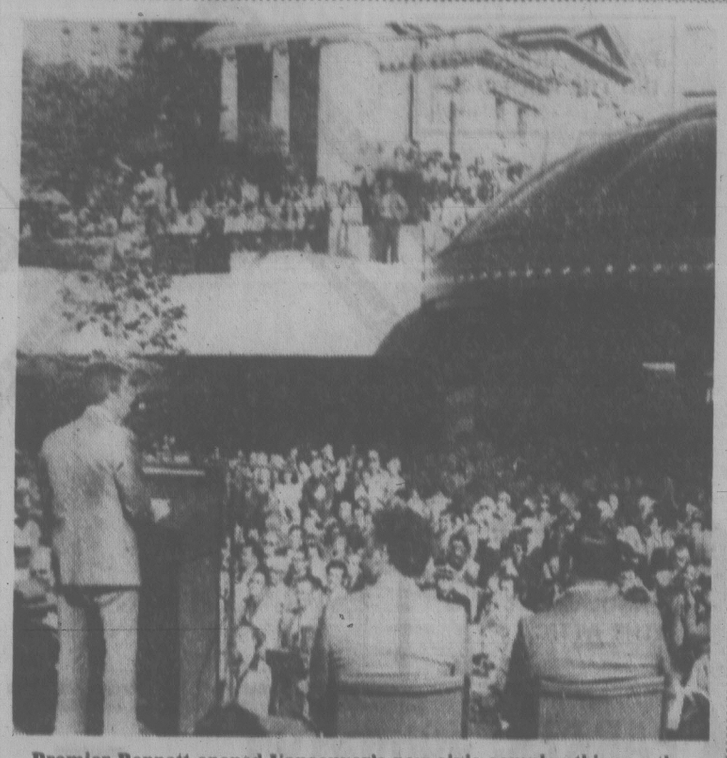

It must by now be evident that official ignorance is the worst approach to a difficult problem.

Robson Square: Will the People Come?

By JOHN CLARKE

VANCOUVER — It's hard to know whether it was the ceremony or the free 1,250 sesame chicken wings, 300 tacos, 1,500 pierogies, 100 pounds of hot corned-beef sandwiches, canapes and French pastries that brought out hundreds of people for the official opening of Vancouver's newest architectural landmark, Robson Square. But the city will find out soon enough.

Indeed, to a lot of people, including government officials, architects and environmental psychologists, Robson Square is a bit of a gamble. It is an Arthur Erickson work of art, a marvellously conceived complex of public square and ice rink ringed with cafes, just under street level, combined with a low-rise office block for provincial government departments and a slightly higher courthouse building replacing an existing archaic and woefully inadequate courthouse at the north end of the complex.

An artificially constructed miniature hill covered with shrubs and small trees lines one flank of the public square. The whole thing has been described by Dr. Gordon Shrum, who managed the $120-million project, as greater than the Taj Mahal. This may turn out to have been an unfortunate analogy, for the Taj Mahal is, after all, a mausoleum. The key question now is whether the crowds will come back to Robson Square.

Certainly before those official opening ceremonies the square was not a noted gathering place, day or night, sunshine or shadow. Compared with the vitality and the busy sidewalks of nearby Robson Street, the square has been relatively deserted, despite the fact the cafes and government offices have been open for some months.

Mayor Jack Volrich has said, "We have been searching for a heart for our city, a civic square that would provide a respite, and we find it here in this place with its two acres of shrubs and flowers, its reflecting pools and its waterfall."

Maybe it will be what Volrich hopes. But it will face competition from Robsonstrasse, which because of its cosmopolitan character has become known as Vancouver's Little Europe. Erickson's projects undoubtedly have beauty and a quality of graceful space that few other architects can match. But they are sometimes criticized as lacking the human characteristics in which people can feel comfortable.

Yet this project was commissioned by the former NDP government as a replacement for a 55-storey monument of a building envisaged by former Socred Premier W. A. C. Bennett. The comparison test between this clinically clean complex and grimy, traffic-clogged Robsonstrasse will be interesting.

Robson Square may beg the question as to whether architects and the people who commission them should really test the claims that such projects are really what the people want. Some environmental psychologists are suggesting it would be worthwhile periodically stationing investigators in projects such as this one to ask people what they think about them, to see whether, in fact, they measure up to the claims of being people-oriented.

But the provincial government has invested so much money, energy and prestige in Robson Square that it may not want to know what the people really think about it.

The Globe and Mail

BAYARD WEBSTER
New York Times

One group of people laughed at a radio tape of Don Rickles, but another group did not find the acid-tongued comedian so funny. Why did the two groups, made up of people with the same socio-economic background, react so differently?

To find the answer, a serious-minded University of Tennessee psychology professor has conducted a series of scientific experiments that have left some of his subjects — human animals — laughing and others sombre.

Dr. Howard Pollio, who has been studying the nature of humor for the past six years, carried on his observations in local playhouses, movie theatres and in his own laboratory on Tennessee University's campus in Knoxville.

He found that humor was a more serious subject that was commonly thought and was not easy to analyze, either. And he determined that laughter, ranging from chuckles to belly-laughs, depended not only on the source of amusement but also on the mind of the laugher, the environment he finds himself in, and the company he's with.

Pollio's research, published in a recent issue of the British scientific journal, New Scientist, included some early experiments at a Knoxville movie house. There he noticed that 8 p.m. movie audiences did not respond to a humorous movie in the same way as an audience at a 10 p.m. showing responded. Jokes that earned guffaws at 8 p.m. sometimes bombed out at 10 p.m., and vice versa.

He then decided to move his experiments to his laboratory. But before enlisting laymen as his subjects, he tried out his experimental comic material — a radio routine by Don Rickles — on laboratory personnel and then on randomly selecid individuals. He got an unexpected response.

He found that records of comic performances that some laboratory personnel found hilarious often produced little or no response when played for the randomly selected audience. This puzzling finding, he reported, suggested to him that a collection of strangers would not laugh at abrasive comic material until they had a chance to know each other better and thus feel more relaxed.

COSBY . . . the nice guy

RICKLES . . . vitriolic

Pursuing this theory, the psychologist solicited groups of friends and strangers and played them taped radio routines performed by the vitriolic Rickles and the more benign comedian, Bill Cosby. The former had achieved fame by insulting both his co-workers and his audience, while Cosby focused on creating a world of the nice guy ruminating about the misadventures of his childhood.

After evaluating the videotaped reactions of the different audiences, Pollio determined that the groups of friends and strangers showed only slight differences in their reactions when listening to Cosby and vast differences in their reactions when listening Rickles. Of those who listened to Rickles tapes, the group of friends moved and laughed a great deal, while the strangers remained immobile and scarcely, if ever, laughed.

Pointing out that the entertainers had two different comic styles, the researcher noted that Rickles is considered to be a comic — one who focuses the audience on its own immediate situation — and Cosby is a humorist — one who leads his audience to experiences outside his present environment.

In an audience of strangers — those who don't know each other and what kinds of people the others are and how they feel — there is a tendency to under-react to the more acid, and personal, humor of Rickles. They would be more apt to respond, without fear of being laughed at, to the more removed and gentle humor of Cosby.

Pollio found that an audience of friends who know each other and feel relaxed with one another and thus have a stronger group structure and solidarity than the group of strangers, is more apt to respond without inhibitions to the Rickles type of humor.

As a result, he concluded, one way to analyze humor is to analyze the audience. "We've found that the meaning of humor to an audience and their reaction to it," he said in an interview, "depends almost entirely on the context of the audience — the type of person he is, the kind of environment he's in, and the person or persons he's with.

"And as a student of humor," Pollio said, "I've also found that people expect me to be funny when I talk about it, and when I approach it scientifically, they say 'how can you be serious about humor?' But humor is an important subject," he added. "There is no existing society in which people don't laugh or smile."

Chaos in the Kitchen

By TOM SHALES

TUCKERTOWN, Vt. — Officials in this tiny, pasteboard, backlot American village are still trying to sort out the details of a wanton and destructive riot that left the city's landmark, and only building, Tucker Inn, laying in ruins last week.

According to eyewitness accounts, all was well at the inn until the end of the evening meal, when guests were told that the proprietor, Sarah Tucker, had run out of a particular brand of creamy whipped topping and that desserts would be served without it.

At this revelation, the crowd became enraged and turned into a howling mob.

Tucker was dragged from the inn and hanged from an artificial tree, witnesses say, before the guests turned their wrath on the building itself, which sustained only one or two swift kicks before it collapsed.

The rioters then left the area but were later seen in the vicinity of Cora's General Store, where, when they learned she was out of a particular brand of coffee, they again became incensed and burned the store to the ground. Lovable old Cora and her percolator are still missing, police say . . .

MEDIAN INCOME, N.M. — The mad rippist has struck again. Ida Mae Makegood of South Nielsen Street told police yesterday that a nattily dressed man sporting a Los Angeles tan burst into a laundromat, grabbed a blouse she was about to presoak and tore it to shreds while onlookers watched in help-less astonishment.

"He offered me $50 for the blouse," sobbed Makegood, "but my mamaw made me that there blouse and I didn't want to sell it to no swish from Hollywood. Then he just grabs it and rips it right down the middle. I guess he likes to wear torn clothes or somethin'."

Police say the man struck earlier in the week at another laundromat, ravaging a silk shirt and a pair of imported underpants before absconding. They believe he may be the same fiend who is tormenting women in other laundromats by threatening to take the whitener out of the fabric softener they use.

MONOSODIUM GLUTAMATE, Okla. — A federal district judge here has ruled that men can sue their wives for divorce if, while in the shower, the wives pour dandruff shampoo into their husbands' palms and claim it to be baby shampoo.

"This kind of callous deception strikes at the very heart of the marital bond," declared Judge Oliver Wendell Niles. In a related ruling, also expected to be a landmine, Judge Niles ruled that if a wife refuses to serve her husband Stove-Top Stuffing instead of potatoes, even after the husband has publicly stated his preference for Stove-Top Stuffing at a supermarket, the husband has grounds for separation.

However, Judge Niles added, wives who mistakenly tell television announcers that their husbands are not concerned with the softness of toilet paper, and are subsequently proven erroneous in this assumption, cannot be held liable for damages . . .

CARCINOGEN, Ill. — Mrs. Olson's reign of terror has come to an end. Federal agents, on her trail for months, finally apprehended the aging Swedish immigrant and booked her for breaking and entering as she made her 423rd unannounced appearance in an American kitchen.

Protesting that "I vont only to help mit de marriage," the blonde-haired intruder was carted off to a paddy wagon, her hands still gripping a Mr. Coffee by its spout.

Authorities say the woman was under the delusion that she had improved the sex lives of dozens of couples by reforming their coffee-making procedures and steering them to the richest and most aphrodisiacal brand. They also charged her with being too old to wear her hair in braids.

It is believed that "Drip Grind" Olson, as she became known, was operating in cahoots with the notorious Mr. Cholesterol, arrested last week when he surprised a couple on their honeymoon by popping up between them in bed . . .

TEST MARKET, Ariz. — Little Freddie Demograph was the ideal child. He patiently endured the senility of his lemonade-addicted Grandpa. He chewed the only gum his mother let him chew. He used the toothpaste that his bossy and insufferable babysitter tricked him into using.

But yesterday morning, little Freddie was gone, perhaps never to return. Through her tears, his mother told the tragic tale.

"It's my fault, all my fault," she wept. "I should have listened. He told me, over and over, that I was buying the wrong brand of English muffins. He said my brand didn't have little nooks and crannies for the butter to melt in. He told me all the other kids got to eat the kind of English muffins they wanted." She collapsed in a puddle.

Apparently, however, little Freddie's case was not an isolated instance of child abuse. At lest 24 other toddlers in this diminutive American hamlet also have toddled off in the past month, all of them reportedly in protest over the muffins in quesion. It is believed the children have formed a commune on the outskirts of the city, and passersby say they have noticed the aroma of warm butter wafting from a nearby house. They believe it could be melting into nooks and crannies . . .

FINE CORINTHIAN LEATHER, Calif. — A man claiming to be actor Karl Malden was arrested here today for terrorizing tourists at an airport with portents of doom about their impending vacations.

The man, who police said wore a huge putty nose and a large putty hat, approached people at departure gates and horrified them with rantings about the possible loss of their wallets. Children began to cry, wives to shudder and husbands to perspire at these displays of alarm, airport officials said.

Hauled off to the calaboose, the unidentified man was heard by reporters to cry out, "What will I do? What WILL I do?" . . .

NO FRILLS, N.J. — Ronald McDonald, the renowned clown, suffered a broken nose and acute whiplash today when he fell off the roof of a fastfood restaurant where he had been dancing.

Children, watching the scene from inside, gave Ronald the biggest laugh of his career. It was also the only laugh of his career.

McDonald's fall was broken when he landed on a man dressed as a giant cheeseburger with everything on it. When the man's cheese-burger was removed, one passerby gasped that he bore a striking resemblance to labor leader Jimmy Hoffa, but the man vanished into the crowd before a positive identification could be made.

Children were assured that the clown's activities would not be interrupted by the fall and that he would be up and around in no time. This news caused several of them to cry, while others were content merely to curse and murmur to themselves. . .

Hot Chase Over Hot Jewelry

VANCOUVER (CP) — Stolen jewelry and watches worth $10,000 almost got stolen again the man who recovered them said Thursday.

Bhagwant Singh Dhahan, a Vancouver man who owns apartments in Cloverdale, said he was showing a suite to prospective tenants Wednesday when he found more than $10,000 in jewelry and watches in two bedroom drawers.

On his way to the police, Dhahan said the prospective tenants attempted to rob him and chased him to the municipal hall where he called police.

Dhahan said he was pulling open drawers in one of the bedrooms to make sure things had been cleaned out, when he came across 22 watches, 69 gold necklaces and 70 rings, some of which were diamond rings.

"The watches were still in their boxes and the necklaces were still mounted on cardboard," Dhahan said. "There were prices on some of them — one watch was tagged at more than $200 and a few of the rings were worth more than $200 each."

Dhahan said he put the valuables in a plastic garbage bag and left for the RCMP station — only to find his three prospective tenants considered him a prospective victim.

"They tried to rob me," he said. "They followed me real close in their car and tried to ram me a couple of times.

"I got really scared and turned into the municipal hall. I parked in the mayor's slot."

He said he called the RCMP from there and turned over the valuables.

"They said it was worth at least $10,000 — some of the prices might have been wholesale."

CBC Asks Permit to Beam Vancouver Program Here

VANCOUVER (CP) — The CBC asked the Canadian Radio-Television and Telecommunications Commission Thursday to allow it the use of a television channel in Victoria, even though the CBC had shelved plans for a Victoria station earlier this year.

Federal government spending cuts put in limbo the Victoria television station, designated as Channel 10. The CBC, however, is still seeking to renew its broadcasting licence for the Victoria station.

CBC spokesman Ron Fraser said the Crown corporation would like to start up its Saturna Island transmitter in the Gulf of Georgia in November and rebroadcast CBUT Vancouver on Channel 10 Victoria.

He said this would provide the full CBC service to the Sunshine Coast northwest of here and allow tests to determine if Vancouver's Channel 10, the community cablevision station, would be impaired by the Victoria CBC signal.

If it is, Channel 10 would have to move to a clear channel, he said. That would mean transferring a United States channel to the mid band on cable which only viewers with convertors could receive.

The issue of deleting a U.S. station from the regular dial has sparked the strongest protest from television viewers here.

Fraser said he could not give the commissioners a firm idea on when CBC's budget would allow the Victoria station to begin providing Victoria and Vancouver Island-oriented programs.

Daryl Duke, president of Western Approaches which operates CKVU, an ultra-high frequency channel that is also carried on cable, said the CBC should be denied the licence renewal because it isn't living up to the requirements of its licence.

He also said his company is willing to manage or operate a CBC affiliate station in Victoria.

The Association of Lower Mainland Cable Operators suggested both power reductions and changes in transitting patterns be made at the Saturna Island transmitter to prevent Channel 10 being moved and a U.S. channel bumped to a converter service.

The association also said a new antenna might be able to reduce the radiation of the Victoria station's signal on the Vancouver area to cut the interference on the Vancouver community channel.

Meanwhile, CHEK-TV of Victoria said its service should be extended to the Vancouver area to provide an improved, alternative service to CKVU.

Ray Peters of British Columbia Television Broadcasting Systems Ltd., which owns CHEK-TV, said the CKVU request to restrict CHEK to Vancouver Island on cable systems would only benefit the Vancouver independent station.

Peters said the move would deprive viewers of an improved, alternate television source. He also said CHEK-TV is well established and does not represent any new threat to CKVU.

☆ Stations Battle For Air

VANCOUVER (CP) — The battle between an independent AM radio station and two broadcast chains over the licence for a new FM outlet here could set a precedent, the Canadian Radio-Television and Telecommunications Commission (CRTC) was told Thursday.

Don Wall, manager of radio st tion CJOR, told commission hearings that he feared a decision here in favor of a chain could result in future anti-independent decisions by the CRTC.

He said this could discourage independents from getting involved in the broadcasting industry in future.

CJOR, owned by Jim Pattison Industries, is facing its major competition for the FM licence from CHUM Western Ltd., which owns CFUN, and CKWX Radio Ltd., part of the Selkirk Holdings chain.

Allan Waters mf CHUM and Dalt Elton, manager of CKWX, said chains are a good thing in broadcasting and are able to provide better understanding between Canadians.

BCR, Unions Talking As Williams Mediates

VANCOUVER (CP) — Contract talks between the British Columbia Railway and its joint council of unions were to resume today under the mediation of Labor Minister Allan Williams.

The minister met with both sides from late Wednesday until early Thursday when the talks were adjourned.

Williams first became directly involved in the protracted negotiations last week when he arranged a new round of talks between the two sides under mediator Fred Geddes.

The joint council represents seven unions representing 2,000 members employed by the B.C. Railway.

Strike Cuts Class

CASTLEGAR (CP) — Classes were cancelled Thursday at Selkirk College here and schools in the Nelson school district were operating on a reduced schedule after non-teaching workers went on strike.

The workers, members of the Canadian Union of Public Employees (CUPE), are involved in a contract dispute along with CUPE members in the Castlegar, Trail and Grand Forks school districts.

A total of about 250 CUPE members are involved. All have been without a contract since the end of June. The expired contract had been reached following strike action earlier this spring.

Negotiations in the current dispute broke down last week.

Crash Kills Pilot

A 26-year-old pilot has died in the crash of his single-engine Piper-Cherokee aircraft which went missing Oct. 23, search and rescue officials said Thursday.

Volrich Faces Six

VANCOUVER (CP) - Incumbent Jack Volrich was one of seven candidates to file papers Wednesday to contest the mayorality race in the city's civic election Nov. 15.

Volrich, elected two years ago as a member of The Electors Action Movement (TEAM), will run as an independent as he seeks a second two-year term.

Running against Volrich will be Alderman May Brown of TEAM, David Ingram of the Vancouver Independents Association, Bruce Yorke of the Committee of Progressive Electors and independents Danny Baceda, Donald Burdeny and Eric Lee.

A total of 117 candidates filed nomination papers. In addition to mayor, also to be elected are 10 aldermen, nine school trustees and seven parks commissioners.

All other British Columbia municipal elections will be held Nov. 18.

Threat to Forests

VANCOUVER (CP) — Canada's forest industry could be buried by the United States if quick changes are not made in federal government policies on research and development spending, Dr. Robert Kennedy, head of the Western Forest Products Laboratory, said Thursday.

Kennedy said recently-announced federal budget cuts are scandalously short-sighted in view of the forest industry's contributions to the gross national product and a favorable balance of trade.

He said the U.S. is pouring more money than ever into research and development.

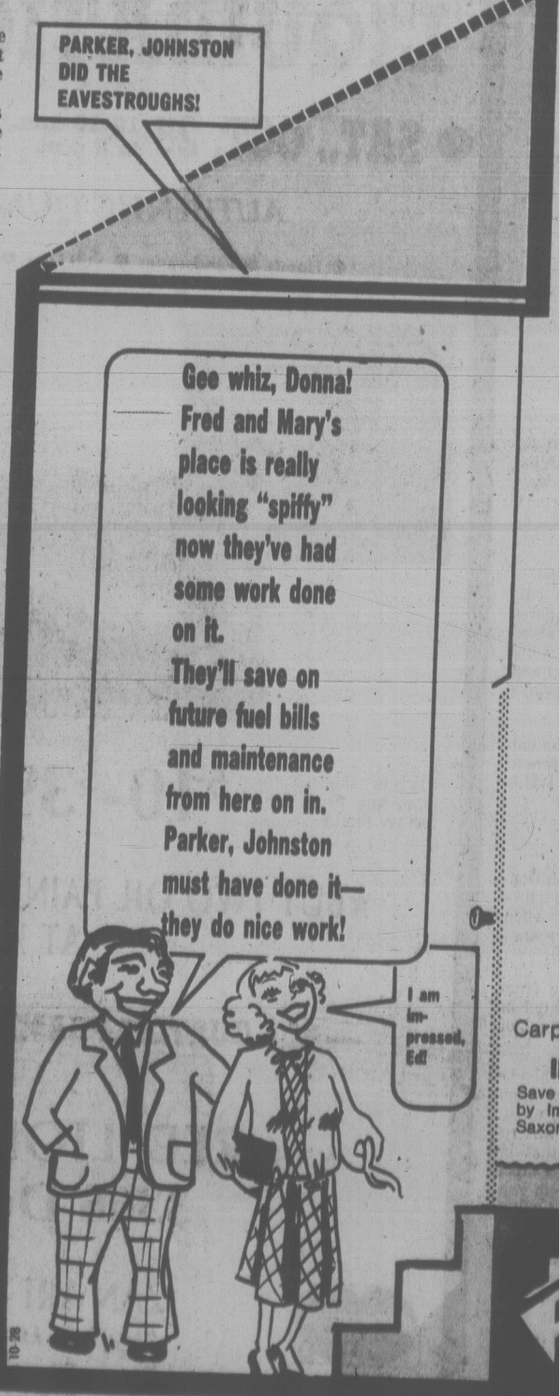

However, Ottawa allocated only $34 million this year for research and development, which they have since decided to slash, Kennedy said.

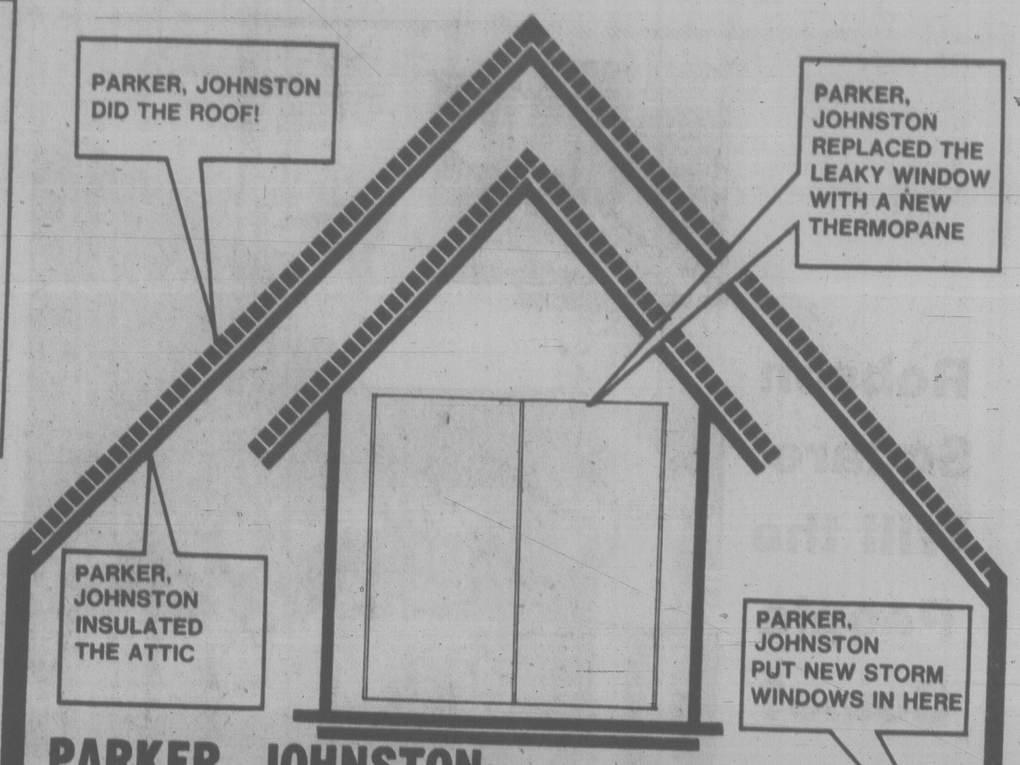

Included in the $1.5-billion budget cuts announced Aug. 16 was a $5.3-million cut for forest services, with $3.3 million to come from the Western Forest Products Laboratory and its counterpart in Ottawa.

Kennedy said this represents about 45 per cent of Western's budget.

He said Canada's forest product shipments last year totalled $8 billion and represented 18 per cent of Canada's total export sales.

Despite this, said Kennedy, the federal government continually shortchanges the industry on research allocations.

Chiefs to Boycott 'Gimmicky' Council

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Union of B.C. Indian Chiefs, which speaks for about half the province's status Indians, said Thursday it will boycott an all-tribal conference designed to form a council to bargain native land claims with Ottawa.

The conference begins today in Prince George.

George Manuel, UBCIC president, said the meeting, paid for by Ottawa but organized by three other native groups, will result in a negotiating body that will "undermine the existing and developing Indian governments."

Bill Wilson, president of the United Native Nations, one of the organizers, said both status and non-status Indians will have the chance to weld themselves into a strong negotiating unit.

Manuel said the bargaining council will be undemocratic because it would not be required to take any land claims settlement back to band members for ratification.

The council is a gimmick to stampede B.C. Indians into an agreement against their long-term interests, Manuel said in a news release.

'Burglar' Was Son

PARIS (Reuter) — A man shot and killed his eight-year-old son during the weekend because he mistook him for a burglar, police said Monday. Jacques Golisset, 29, was disturbed at night by noises from his kitchen. He grabbed his hunting rifle and opened fire on the apparent intruder. When he switched on the light he found his son.

SLIT THROATS TEACHER FEAR

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — John and Gina Duckworth say they closed the native Indian school at Ingenika, about 400 kilometres north of here because a small group of young native persons was threatening to burn down their house and slit their throats.

"We just got to the point where we couldn't handle it any more," Mrs. Duckworth said. "We were fearful for our children after a while."

She said their three children were verbally abused and threatened by the group of about eight 15 to 22-year-olds.

The department of Indian affairs said earlier this week the band-operated school was closed because of its isolation and lack of community support.

Duckworth said the native education committee told them to keep details of the school closure quiet so new teachers could be found.

Mrs. Duckworth said it was not just the white teachers who were being harassed.

"They terrorize the whole village, not just us," she said.

Solution Seen On Gas Export

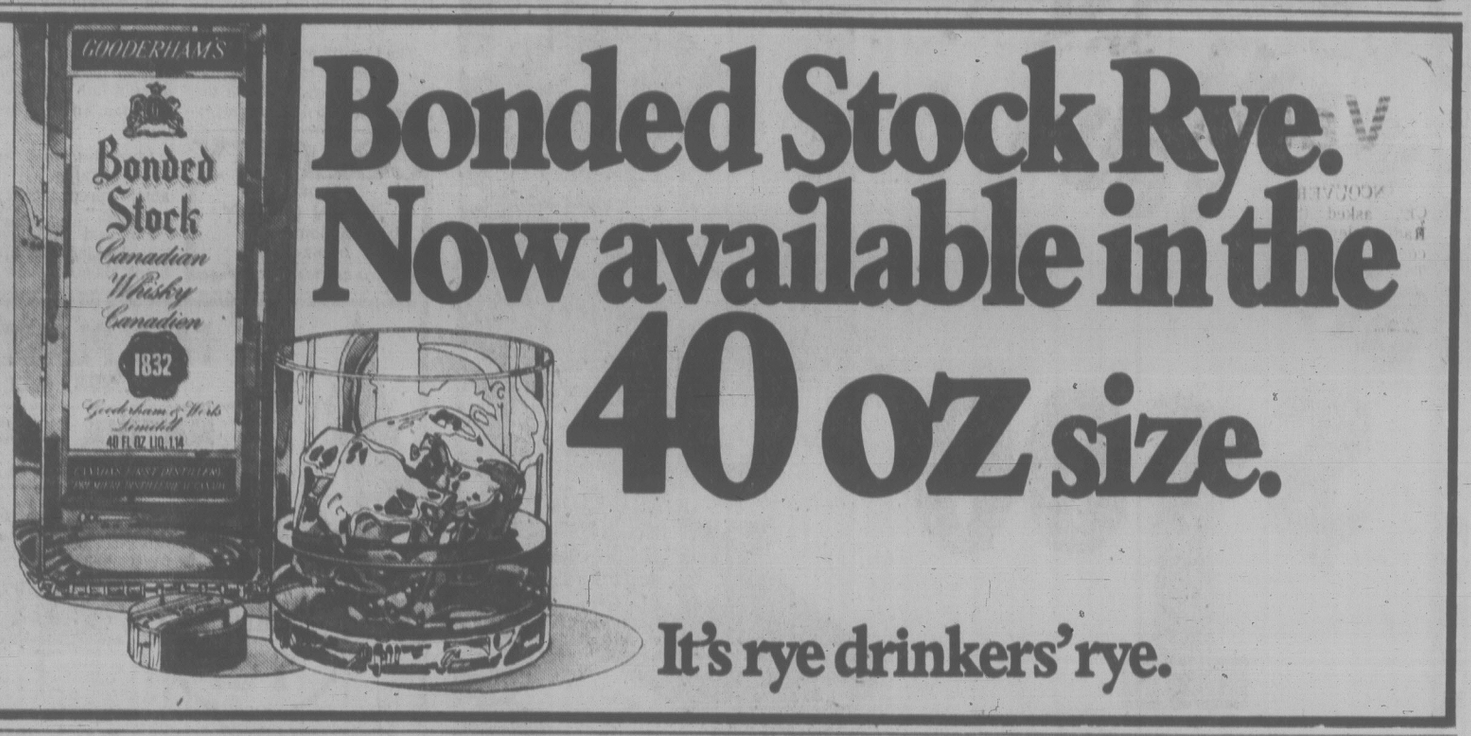

VANCOUVER (CP) — Westcoast Transmission Co. Ltd. has told National Energy Board (NEB) hearings here that it may have a partial solution for B.C.'s dwindling natural gas export market.

The company told the hearing this week that approval is expected soon from the U.S. Federal Energy Regulatory Commission for two new contracts to U.S. companies through Westcoast's only export customer, Northwest Pipeline Corp.

But the B.C. Energy Commission also said in a submission at the hearings that the contracts — which are without a stipulated minimum purchase — are no substitute for what it says is an NEB contractual obligation to assure Westcoast of certain minimum natural gas exports.

The government said it wants the NEB to resurrect a take-or-pay provision in its export contract which was taken out in 1974.

The province said it is losing about $200 million a year without the provision and said Westcoast, the company that moves the gas, can go through feast or famine without an assurance of minimum export sales.

Gov't Shaves $10 Billion From Loan Authority Bid

OTTAWA (CP) — The government gave in to Conservative demands Thursday and said it will scrap plans seeking immediate authority to borrow $17 billion.

Instead it will seek approval for borrowing only $7 billion for the current fiscal year.

In return for this, Deputy Prime Minister Allan MacEachen secured an opposition promise to speed passage of amended legislation that contains the new borrowing authority.

The Commons has been debating the borrowing legislation for a week. Under it the government asked authority to borrow $7 billion this year and $10 billion in the year starting next April 1.

The entire opposition said the government had no business asking Parliament for $10 billion in borrowing next year without providing any information about federal spending and revenue plans for that year.

Opposition Leader Joe Clark called for a change in the legislation Wednesday just after Finance Minister Jean Chretien had moved to limit debate.

Clark said the legislation calling for $17 billion should be split into two bills, one for $7 billion and one for $10 billion.

Clark described the $17 billion legislation as "unbelievable, unprecedented an unacceptable."

He said the government was looking for $10 billion blank cheque.

Under MacEachen's proposal, the Commons gave second reading, approval in principle, to the $17 billion bill. When it gets before a Cofmons committee for detailed study it will be amended to change the figure to $7 billion.

The opposition agrees to return the amended bill to the Commons for third and final reading by Nov. 10. The debate on third reading is limited to five hours.

MacEachen indicated that he will introduce a new bill to cover the $10 billion borrowing authority the government wants for next year.

MacEachen assured Conservatives that Finance Minister Jean Chretien will attend at least three meetings of the committee.

After the agreement had been outlined the Commons gave second reading to the $17 billion bill. The vote was 118 to 72 with only the Liberals in support.

Marion Won't Recover: Doctor

MONTREAL (CP) — Charles Marion will never fully recover from his 82-day kidnapping, his psychiatrist told a Quebec Superior Court jury Thursday.

"Mr. Marion is suffering from gross stress reaction, something from which he will never fully recover," said Dr. Roger Carle.

Testifying at the kidnapping trial of Claude and Jeanne Valence, he said he has been treating Marion since Oct. 31, 1977, four days after the Sherbrooke credit union employee was released from an underground hiding place.

"When I first saw Mr. Marion he was very wary of talking to me," the psychiatrist said. "He often asked me if he was crazy or abnormal."

Carle said Marion's symptoms were like those of former concentration camp inmates, or rape or hijack victims — he has difficulty adapting after a period of intense stress.

Carle testified that when he first met Marion he looked older than his 57 years and had difficulty expressing himself logically.

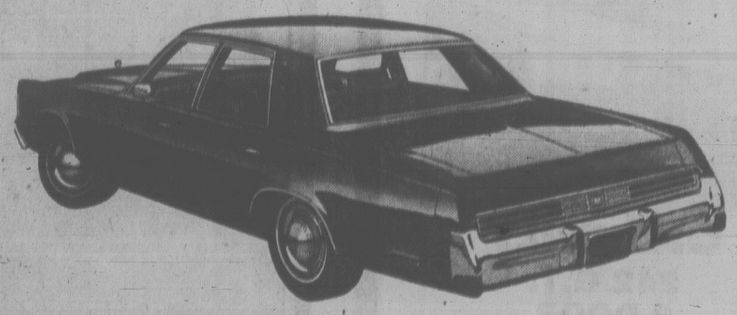

"Sometimes when I would ask him a question he would take a long time to answer . . . and his emotions varied — he would cry at one point or just stare out the hospital window in wonder."

Marion was hospitalized in Sherbrooke immediately after he was found.

PRISONER GOT LUXURY CARE?

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — Prison officials say they will investigate claims that Toronto underworld figure Domenic Anthony Racco was allowed to take driving lessons in a luxury Lincoln Continental while a prisoner at Frontenac institution.

Art Trono, Ontario regional director-general of prisons, said Thursday he was unaware that Racco received any special privileges, but he was calling an investigation to look into the possibility.

The Whig-Standard quotes an unnamed source as saying Racco, 27, was allowed to keep the 1975 car in the prison parking lot.

On Oct. 12, the he drove with a prison employee from 6 p.m. to 10 p.m. The next day, they drove to a downtown clothing store, went to a restaurant for two hours and then to an Italian grocery store, the newspaper says.

"The bottom line is that Racco got special treatment because of the influence he wielded," the source is quoted as saying.

Racco left prison shortly after midnight Tuesday night, released on parole after serving two-thirds of a 10-year sentence for shooting three Toronto youths in 1971.

In 1976, a report prepared for the federal solicitor-general said some politicians had used considerable influence to obtain early parole for Racco.

But John Wilson, a senior official with the national parole board, said Racco's release was automatic because he had served two-thirds of his sentence.

Blais Puts PC Query On Hold

OTTAWA (CP) — Solicitor-General Jean-Jacques Blais sidestepped Progressive Conservative Elmer MacKay in the Commons Thursday when asked if he was aware of a 1973 conversation involving former solicitor-general Warren Allmand.

MacKay (Central Nova) said later in an interview he wanted to know if Blais was aware that journalist Peter Newman had told Allmand of extensive RCMP wiretapping activity.

MacKay said Newman came by the information from former RCMP corporal Jack Ramsey, who had contacted Newman after hearing then RCMP commissioner W. L. Higgitt tell a Commons committee the force undertook no such wiretaps.

Higgitt's Memory Questioned

OTTAWA (CP) — Warren Allmand and Jean-Pierre Goyer got a break Thursday as retired RCMP commissioner W.L. Higgitt's credibility was called into question by a royal commission into RCMP wrongdoing.

Higgitt has maintained that he told the ministers the force opened mail and did other illegal or barely-legal things.

But under cross-examination Higgitt acknowledged he had been wrong last Feb. 1 when he testified under oath he was almost positive the RCMP had not drafted an Allmand letter in 1973 denying that the RCMP tampered with personal mail.

That testimony was given a Quebec commission of inquiry under Jean Keable and it helped feed suspicion that Allmand and other solicitors-general had covered up for the RCMP.

However, Higgitt testified Thursday, he had since learned that the RCMP had drafted the letter Allmand sent to Allan Lawrence (PC—Northumberland-Durham).

He said his strong reply to the Keable inquiry had been based on a momentary glance at a letter he had never seen before. It didn't look as if it had been written by the RCMP, he said.

Mr. Justice David C. McDonald, the commission chairman, asked whether Higgitt had drawn a similar inference when he insisted he must have told Goyer in 1972 that the RCMP security service had helped break into a news agency office in Montreal and had taken away the office files.

Higgitt admitted that he had no memory of a conversation on the subject with Goyer, who denies Higgitt told him anything. Logic dictated that he must have informed the minister, he maintained.

McDonald confronted him with reasons he might not have informed Goyer — embarrassment to the force, the fact that Jerome Choquette, then Quebec justice minister, had denied police — including RCMP — involvement in the break-in.

He asked why Higgitt hadn't told Choquette he was mistaken. Higgitt replied that it wasn't his responsibility to talk to the Quebec justice minister.

Yves Fortier, representing Goyer, said the RCMP lawyer Pierre Lamontagne was trying to muzzle them this week by forcing the cross-examination behind closed doors.

Lamontagne threw the inquiry into a procedural fight by surprise introduction of 14 documents, four of which government lawyers refused to allow the royal commissioners even to see.

He indicated the papers would support Higgitt's contention that he had informed ministers of law-breaking.

Government lawyer Michel Robert said the four documents were confidential government papers and he would have to get clearance from the government before they would be produced at the inquiry.

Amnesty Granted As Guns Called In

OTTAWA (CP) — Unwanted or outlawed guns can be handed over to police forces next month under a special nationwide amnesty program announced today by Solicitor-General Jean-Jacques Blais.

Police forces are gearing up for the amnesty which means no criminal charges will be laid against those turning in prohibited or restricted weapons, Blais told a news conference.

But officials have no idea how many weapons will come out of attics, closests and summer cottages although an unofficial campaign in Quebec last year resulted in 2,000 guns being handed over to police.

Blais said all guns turned in will be destroyed except valuable pieces which will be given to museums.

Owners of restricted weapons will be able to apply during November for the police permit needed to possess such weapons without any penalties.

The government is preparing to launch a $350,000 advertising program on television and in newspapers and magazines to encourage the turning in of guns.

Persons with hunting or sport weapons are not expected to hand them in but if they have guns too old or unsafe to use, it would be a good time and way to dispose of them, Blais said.

Prohibited weapons include unregistered fully-automatic fire-arms, sawed-off shotguns or rifles with barrels less than 18 inches long or an over-all length of less than 26 inches; switchblade knives; various martial arts weapons and devices using chemicals or electricity to immobilize or incapacitate.

Restricted weapons, for which owners require a police certificate, include pistols and other fire-arms designed to be fired by one hand, centre-fire, semi-automatic weapons with barrels less than 18.5 inches or which are designed to fire when reduced to an over-all length of less than 26 inches by folding, telescoping or other means, as well as fully-automatic fire-arms which were registered to a collector prior to last Jan. 1.

Expanding the two categories meant many weapons, possibly in homes for decades, now were illegal to possess. The amnesty was designed to encourage their disposal along with guns no longer in use or safe to discharge.

The gun laws say that owners whose weapons are stolen through inadequate storage and then used in the commission of a crime, can be taken to court in a civil action.

Making citizens aware of this provision could add to the number of guns turned over, officials say.

Blais said it is impossible to determine how many restricted and prohibited weapons now are in Canadian homes. This would make it hard to determine how successful the turn-in campaign will be.

One example would be the M1 rifle, an automatic weapon of which only 10 per cent of the 30,000 thought to be in the country are registered.

A 1976 survey indicated 2.5 million gunowners had not used their weapons in the last 12 months. Many of them were improperly stored, increasing the risk of accidents or theft.

Ottawa Fields CSB Queries

OTTAWA (CP) — Taxation officials, after receiving numerous requests from Canada Savings Bond holders to clarify whether they can defer paying income tax on maturing bonds by purchasing new Canada Savings Bonds, issued a statement Thursday declaring such interest taxable income.

"Rolling over or reinvesting interest payments on cash bonuses will not defer or reduce the tax liability on such payments," Revenue Canada said.

The department said taxpayers can defer paying taxes by not cashing their regular interest coupons or compound interest certificates.

The department said some taxpayers choose to defer cashing these coupons until a year when they expect to be in a substantially lower income tax bracket.

DOG RUN RAGGED

TORONTO (CP) — Beatrice Hynes will work 30 hours for the Toronto Humane Society for her unorthodox method of exercising her dog. She did it from a moving car.

She was charged with recklessly and wilfully causing pain and suffering to a dog. She was given a suspended sentence, 12 months probation and the work order in provincial court Thursday by Judge J. J. Belobradic.

The dog was tied to a chain held out of the passenger window of the car by Mrs. Hynes's granddaughter.

Mrs. Hynes testfied that she had been exercising the terrier for about 20 minutes and she was driving slowly enough to let the dog run behind the car.

She said she was unaware the dog was in trouble until she passed a baseball diamond and two girls called to her, at which time she stopped the car and put the dog inside and drove home.

The dog's paws were badly scraped and bleeding and the claws were worn off.

The dog was treated for 10 days by a veterinarian before it was returned to Mrs. Hynes.

Mayne Heads Council

T.W.(Tommy) Mayne was elected to replace retiring president Allan M. Purdy at the annual general meeting of the Community Arts Council of Greater Victoria.

Mayne is a retired secondary school teacher and was for many years closely identified with drama activity at Victoria High School and in several capacities with the Greater Victoria Schools Drama Festival.

Other officers elected were: Erika Kurth, first vice president; J.F.K. English, second vice president and Sylvia Skelton, honorary secretary. Purdy will continue to serve the CAC as immediate past president.

New directors elected to the board were Trish Alexander, Wally Lee, Philip Kitley, Harvey Mickelson, Maureen Eastick, Carol Wootton and Sheila Blake. Directors whose terms were renewed were Eva Schaefer, Jean Bain, Anne Adamson, Nancy Ferguson and Greg Blundell.

Jobs Increase

OTTAWA (CP) — The average number of jobs available on a daily basis in the third quarter of this year was 50,000, a rise of 10 per cent from totals for the second quarter but a drop of five per cent from a year ago, Statistics Canada reported Thursday.

For every 1,000 existing jobs in the third quarter there were five vacancies nationally, the federal agency said. The rate a year ago was six.

Highest vacancy rates among the provinces were 12 per 1,000 existing jobs in Alberta and six in Manitoba. The lowest rate of three was in Newfoundland, the province with the highest unemployment rate.

Blind Upset By Rock Offer

TORONTO (CP) — A benefit concert to be given by Rolling Stones guitarist Keith Richards will set back attempts to improve the public's attitude toward the blind, says a spokesman of an organization for the blind.

Mike Yale, a representative of the Blind Organization of Ontario with Self-help Tactics (BOOST), said in an interview Thursday that the concert, ordered by a county court judge as part of Richards' sentence for a heroin-possession conviction, was designed to aid the poor blind people.

He said his 200-member organization believes such an approach is condescending.

Earlier this week, Judge Lloyd Graburn sentenced Richards to perform a benefit concert for the Canadian National Institute for the Blind (CNIB) as a condition of his one-year probation. Money raised at the event would go to the CNIB.

Harold Ballard, owner of Maple Leaf Gardens, has offered the 18,000-seat arena free of charge as a site for the concert.

Yale said his group attempts to help blind persons integrate into the community.

Pilots' Strike Settled

MONTREAL (CP) — The first legal strike by pilots in Canada ended early today after four days, following an agreement reached late Thursday between Nordair and the Canadian Air Line Pilots Association (CALPA).

Nordair vice-president Jack Hughes said in a telephone interview that pilots were returning to work at one minute after midnight today.

"The strike is over," Hughes said, but would not give details of the agreement. He said only that the union and Nordair had agreed on a two-year pact retroactive to Nov. 1, 1977, and extending to Oct. 31, 1979.

Hughes said Nordair's Arctic and northern Quebec operations would resume Saturday, but that other services would not be back to normal until Monday morning.

Thursday's bargaining session was arranged at Calpa's request, after the regional carrier rejected a series of modified union proposals presented on Tuesday. The 130 Nordair pilots walked out Monday.

Nordair had been insisting on a one-year contract with a six-per-cent wage increase, the maximum allowable under federal anti-inflation board guidelines which still applied to the pilots.

The pilots are currently paid between $12,000 and $50,000 a year.

The company had laid off its 350 flight attendants and ground service employees, keeping a skeleton crew to handle inquiries and to keep planes maintained.

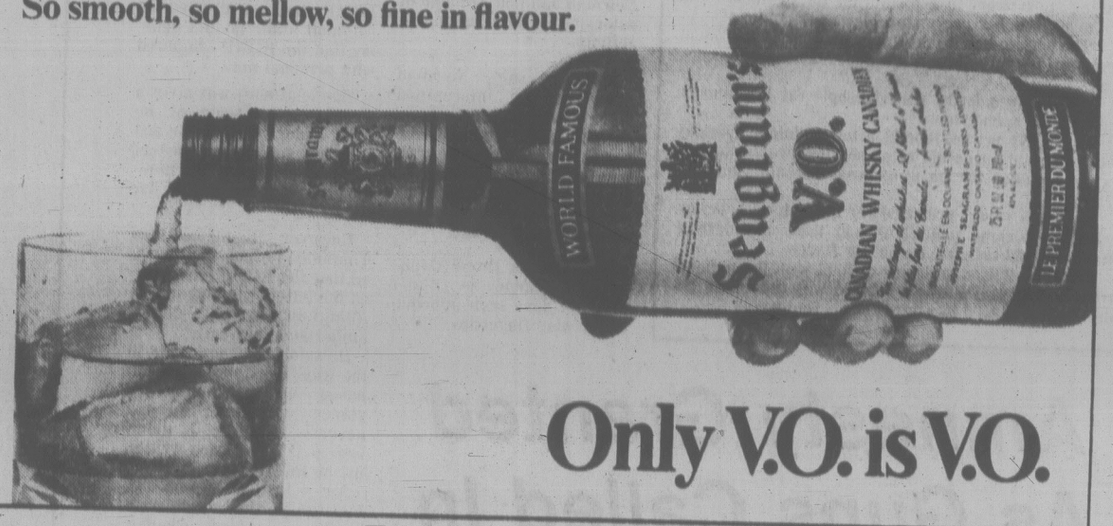

The airline provides a vital service to communities in northern Quebec and the Arctic. To maintain a supply of provisions to these communities Nordair had rented a plane each from Austin Airways in Timmins, Ont., and Northwest Territorial Airways in Yellowknife.

The carrier also operates 40 other flights daily, including regular service from Montreal to Ottawa, Hamilton, Ont., Windsor, Ont., and Pittsburgh.

Province of British Columbia
Ministry of Highways and Public Works

The fourth in a series of MB reports.

Good jobs & good times. The forests we're planting will be big enough for both.

The best of both worlds: the forest.

The forests are British Columbia's most important source of jobs. But they're also a great natural playground—made to order for camping, hiking, boating, nature study or just unwinding. At MacMillan Bloedel, we're managing the forest with both needs in mind.

The renewable resource.

We know how you feel when you see a newly harvested area. It's not a pretty sight—but it will be beautiful again before many years. What you're looking at is just one phase in the life cycle of a forest crop.

In a world of dwindling natural resources, you may be glad to know there's one that's renewable.

Trees: our number one crop.

We farm trees just like any other crop. Right after the harvest, we prepare the land for replanting or seeding. In a few years' time, a healthy young forest will be growing there. It may not be ready to harvest in your lifetime, but while it's maturing it will be ready to receive visitors.

Welcome to the woods.

The new forest soon becomes a home for animals—and a haven for people. In all our logging divisions, MacMillan Bloedel keeps roads open to the public except when safety considerations intervene. You're welcome to visit almost any time.

At MacMillan Bloedel, we were concerned about the environment long before it became fashionable. And we've been doing something about it. Our reforestation program has continued since 1938. In that time we've planted more than 100 million trees in B.C. to give a helping hand to nature. It's a partnership that means good jobs and good times for generations to come.

Federal Payments To Rise

OTTAWA (CP) — Finance Minister Jean Chretien said Thursday equalization payments to the poorer provinces will increase next year. He did not forecast by how much.

The minister said in the Commons there is no intent of reducing the payments made to have-not provinces to bring their economies closer to those of the rich regions.

Former Conservative leader Robert Stanfield (Halifax) raised the point, saying the government had indicated a cut in one of its restraint announcements.

That announcement was the one in which the government said certain money will be moved from payments made to provinces for a variety of purposes to areas.

Payments to the provinces, for everything from welfare to equalization, are called transfer payments.

The government hopes to reduce these payments by $220 million which would be spent on other things.

Chretien said the whole question will be discussed with provincial finance ministers next Thursday.

Technology Screen Urged

OTTAWA (CP) — The government must begin screening out harmful foreign technology if this country is to have any hope of rescuing its industrial sector from the deterioration of the last two decades, says a report released by the Science Council of Canada.

The report calls for the transformation of the four-year-old Foreign Investment Review Agency into a regulator of technology imports from abroad.

The study, entitled The Weakest Link: A Technological Perspective on Canadian Industrial Underdevelopment, is a background paper prepared for and released by the science council, but does not represent the views of all members.

Authors John Britton and James Gilmour have made it clear they do not believe foreign technology imported into Canada need be harmful. The study says merely that certain high technology imports prevent the country from developing its own strong, independent technological base.

It says the government cannot afford to wait until it finishes its long-awaited industrial policy to remedy the sickness of its manufacturing sector. It calls for the following immediate remedial action:

—Review of all proposed technological imports.

—Government incentives to encourage mergers, the formation of consortia and joint business ventures to make Canadian companies large enough to compete better.

—Preferential treatment of Canadian firms in government purchasing.

—Government incentives to help finance high technology investment projects.

"For an industrial nation, our capability to design and engineer new products is at a distressingly low level," the report says.

"Canadian secondary manufacturing finds itself faced with the threat of extinction except in the production of goods protected by high transportation costs."

It says Canadians should take no comfort from those who say the country never was industrial and never will be.

Historic Trains Merge On Cross Canada Run

MONTREAL (CP) — The Super Continental and the Canadian, Canada's most famous long-distance trains, will be integrated starting Sunday as part of Via Rail Canada's takeover of Canadian National and CP Rail passenger service.

The Super Continental will travel between Montreal, Ottawa, Capreol, Sioux Lookout, Winnipeg, Saskatoon, Edmonton, Jasper and Vancouver along CN lines, but will no longer serve Toronto, Via announced Thursday.

The Canadian will connect Toronto, Sudbury, Thunder Bay, Winnipeg, Regina, Calgary, Banff and Vancouver along CP Rail lines, but will no longer serve Montreal or Ottawa.

The two trains will meet at Winnipeg both eastbound and westbound to allow passengers to make connections. Sleeping cars will be exchanged between the two trains, while coach and "dayniter" passengers will have to switch trains in some cases.

Via said the most important changes are in the western transcontinental service, which is being cut slightly because of rising deficits. A plan recommended by the Canadian transport commission which would have entailed deeper cuts in service has been shelved, at least for the time being.

Power Sells Argus Interest

MONTREAL (UPI) — Power Corp., one of Canada's largest conglomerates, has signalled the end of all attempts to gain control of another major company and sold out its interest in Argus Corp. for $80,478,000, it was announced.

Power Corp., which made a spectacular but vain takeover bid for Argus in 1975 giving it a majority equity interest but a minority voting position, said the sale was made to Ravelston Corp. Ltd. "acting on its own behalf and for others."

Ravelston is controlled by Toronto millionaire Conrad Black, who once vowed publicly to block any effort by Power Corp. president Paul Desmarais to take over Argus. Desmarais, who held a 26 per cent voting block in Argus, failed to gain a seat on the board.

Power's sale of its Argus interests gives the company $65 million in cash, with the remaining $15,000,000 to be paid through a note, for a total equalling the amount Power spent trying to gain Argus control, according to A. Frank Knowles, Power vice-president for finance.

"It's a straight money deal, with no strings attached," Knowles said.

Knowles said Power was not at this stage shopping for another acquisition with the cash infusion. He noted Power owes $52.5 million on an income debenture carrying increasingly heavy interest charges, along with another $11.5 million debt.

"We'll try to pay down at least part of that debt," Knowles said.

The Mortgage Rate Battle Begins in Victoria

WestCoast Savings Credit Union has launched a mortgage rate war by holding its five-year rate at 10.75 per cent while most Victoria firms are charging 11.25 per cent.

"We have been preparing all year for this," said Gordon Proctor, business development division manager.

"We foresaw a rate increase and we've been building up a surplus of funds."

The announcement was only a minor surprise to lending firms. All companies have surplus mortgage funds and a rate war was expected.

Companies have been trying to avoid this by holding mortgage rates as low as possible while all other rates were increasing.

Competitors said they will review their rates in view of the WestCoast decision but no immediate reduction is likely.

Under normal market conditions, the mortgate interest rate now would be in the range of 11.5 to 12 per cent but no company can raise it that high because of low demand for mortgage funds.

Proctor said WestCoast has $11 million earmarked for mortgage loans in November at the 10.75 per cent rate.

The company will decide in December how long it can afford to continue the rate war.

"We are definitely committed to holding the rate at 10.75 per cent at least until December, barring a further increase in the prime lending rate."

On Dec. 16 the Bank of Canada moved its rate to 10.25 per cent, pushing the prime lending rate for chartered banks to 11 per cent.

Normally this would have pushed mortgage rates to about 12 per cent but companies went up only to 11.25 per cent, because of the continuing surplus of funds.

Proctor said this would be the first time mortgage loans had gone out to the public under the prime bank rate.

Proctor said WestCoast began to assemble large amounts of deposits in January and February at rates ranging up to 9 per cent at a time when interest rates were low.

The company absorbed costs of having to pay money on these deposits without getting offsetting interest by sending the money out in loans.

But now it is is a position to offer mortgages at less than the competing rates, Proctor said.

He said the company was determined to continue its lower rate for as long as possible.

The 10.75 per cent rate applies to standard five-year term mortgages. A special mortgage offer allowing prepayment with no penalty is at 11.25 per cent. Normally this mortgage is a quarter point higher than the basic rate.

Proctor said WestCoast expects interest rates will decline in 1979 to a level more acceptable to large numbers of customers.

He said the company would like to be able to freeze its present rates until that happens but it is not possible to foresee whether this would be possible.

"All rates are topsy-turvy right now and this makes forecasting difficult. We are determined to keep our rates down as low as possible. If there is another increase in the bank rate, however, we will have to make an upward adjustment."

Airlines Negligent

NEW YORK (AP) — A federal court jury has found Eastern Airlines negligent and liable in a 1975 crash that killed 113 persons at John F. Kennedy International Airport.

The suit was filed by lawyers representing 36 plaintiffs, many of them relatives of the crash victims.

The action by the jury of four men and two women only determined liability. Any damages would have to be set by another jury.

The jury found that Eastern was liable for the accident because it neglected to act after pilots on one of its jets detected powerful wind shears near the landing surface and notified the control tower they were aborting a planned landing.

Wind shears— powerful swerves and surges of wind — slammed the second airliner to the ground as it tried to land on arrival from New Orleans on June 24, 1975. There were 11 survivors from the crash, which occurred seconds short of the runway.

Lawyers for Eastern argued unsuccessfully that its pilots had received inadequate instructions from the control tower.

Bursary Shared

The first $750 bursary, jointly provided by the Capital Regional District and the Canadian Union of Public Employees, Local 1978, will be shared by two students.

Presentation of the awards was made Wednesday by regional district board chairman Jim Campbell and Clement Cunningham, president of Local 1978 and senior building inspector of the Langford building inspection office's engineering department.

The recipients were Cunningham's son, Robert Dean Crawford, and Ann Marie Knapik, daughter of senior public health inspector Michael Knapik of the community health service's Langford office and a member of the bursary committee.

A Capital Regional District spokesman said Knapik excluded himself from final decisions on the awards by the bursary committee.

A total of seven applications were received.

Crawford hopes to obtain his bachelor of science degree from the University of Victoria in 1981 and as a member of the university's rowing crew has no time for a part-time job during the university year. He was employed as a welder's helper at Quesnel this summer.

Knapik, who wants to become an elementary school teacher specializing in music instruction, is in her second year at the University of Victoria. She works part-time at the Classic Car Museum.

JOE CLARK'S FACE NO TRICK, OR TREAT

Wes Green, a Charlottetown merchant who sells Halloween masks with caricatures of politicians, says masks of Prime Minister Trudeau sell well. But he cannot even find anyone who makes a mask of Clark, leader of the federal Progressive Conservatives.

Also, sales of the Trudeau mask are down this year, while the Rene Levesque mask is moving briskly.

Richard Nixon is also a big seller, but Green says the prime factor when buying the masks seems to be size.

Could this be a way to judge the political tides? Green doubts it.

"I don't sell enough to come up with a Gallup poll," he says.

A local Liberal official says the drop in sales of the Trudeau mask is related to its price — to $17 from $12.

Simpsons, Sears Merge

TORONTO (CP) — Simpsons Ltd. announced details Thursday of its planned merger with Canada's largest non-food retailing company, Simpsons-Sears Ltd., on a share-for-share basis.

The merger would leave Simpson-Sears' United States affiliate, Sears, Roebuck and Co. of Chicago, with a controlling block of shares.

In a joint statement, G. Allan Burton, chairman of Simpsons Ltd., and Jack Barrow, chairman of Simpsons-Sears Ltd., said Sears Roebuck would hold 30.8 million or slightly more than 33 per cent of 92.5 million shares of the merged company.

"This could be construed as control," Barrow said. He added that Sears would not try to increase its holding unless control was threatened.

The merger is subject to approval of Canada's Foreign Investment Review Act and by all shareholders of Simpsons and Simpsons-Sears. Shareholders' meetings will be held during December.

Both Burton and Barrow emphasized that the new company — which will be known as Simpsons-Sears Ltd., will not become an American company.

"Both Simpsons and Simpsons-Sears are thoroughly Canadian companies both in employee and managerial content, and we have no operation outside Canada," Burton said.

Under the terms of the merger, shareholders of Simpsons Ltd. will receive one newly-issued share of Simpsons-Sears Ltd. for each Simpsons share. As a result, Simpsons Ltd. will become a wholly-owned subsidiary of Simpson-Sears Ltd. At the time of merger, the existing Class A, Class B and Class C shares of Simpsons-Sears will be converted into a single class of voting common shares.

Burton will be chairman and chief executive officer of the company, Jack Barrow the vice-chairman, and John Taylor, president of Simpsons-Sears Ltd., will be president of the new company.

The plan calls for existing Simpsons and Simpsons-Sears stores to retain their identity. C. Richard Sharpe, vice-president of merchandising of Simpsons-Sears, will be president of Sears division, and Edgar Burton, president of Simpsons, president of Simpsons division.

The merger, Burton said, would mean financial strength, better market coverage and more career opportunities for employees.

Barrow said that during the 12 years he has been chairman of Simpsons-Sears, the company has been run entirely by Canadians, and said he could foresee no interference by Sears Roebuck.

He said that although any expansion will be a combined effort, there will be no store closings nor will there be layoffs where Simpsons and Simpsons-Sears stores duplicate services as a result of the merger.

There are 63 Simpsons-Sears retail department stores and 21 Simpsons stores in Canada.

Indian Salmon Threat Seen

EDMONTON (CP) — A national sportsmen's group says treaty Indians could deplete the supply of British Columbia salmon in two years if proposed amendments to the Indian Act become effective.

The amendments would mean treaty Indians would apparently be exempt from the Migratory Birds Convention Act and the federal Fisheries Act, says Gordon Peel.

Peel is chairman of the Native Affairs Committee of Provincial Fish and Wildlife Organizations, formed in February to counter what it sees as unfair hunting privileges for Indians.

Peel says he recently received a leaked copy of a discussion paper dealing with the proposed amendments. Details were not spelled out, he says, but the intent is to give Indians more control over hunting and fishing on their reserves.

It also suggests increased controls for Indians off the reserves. The migratory birds and fisheries acts might no longer apply to treaty Indians living off the reserves, he says. Indians might also be exempt from other acts such as the National Parks Act and fire-arms legislation.

Peel's group says Hugh Faulkner, federal Indian affairs minister, secretly gave British Columbia Indians immunity from the Fisheries Act this summer.

The group fears that amendments to the Indian Act will give that immunity the force of law.

MD Cited for Negligence

A coroner's jury Thursday night found negligence on the part of a physician who attended to a 72-year-old man admitted Sept. 17 to the emergency ward of Royal Jubilee Hospital with a suspected heart attack.

But the jury declined to elaborate on the form of negligence involved in Dr. Jacob Sturmwind's treatment of Galliano Giovanni Piccoli of Victoria.

Piccoli died about two hours after being admitted to hospital.

Sturmwind had testified at the inquest Sept. 25 that because of a mixup over syringes he had inadvertently injected into Piccoli about 10 times the intended dosage of Xylocaine, an anesthetic used to restore normal heart rhythms.

Pathologist Dr. Jack Cotton had also testified that in his opinion death was caused by a heart attack and not the drug overdose, and the jury, in their verdict, reached the same conclusion.

SCHOOLBOYS SCALE PEAK

Seven Grade 12 students from Shawnigan Lake Boys School recently climbed the 7,219-ft. Mount Golden Hinde, the highest peak on Vancouver Island.

The party flew by float plane from Campbell River to Burman Lake, at the base of the Golden Hinde. The climb to the summit from there is 3,800 feet.

300 Jobs Chalked Up

A job creation program funded by surplus provincial revenues has opened up 300 new jobs in the mining industry, Mines and Petroleum Resources Minister Jim Chabot said Thursday.

The program assists labor costs of mining companies which increase exploration and expand development of their existing sites.

There have been 13 major projects approved under the accelerated mineral development program and several dozen smaller projects are in the process of being funded, Chabot said.

This Chaw Of Gum 'Jez Dumb'

"We got a shipment of various flavors of gum and we didn't notice one was tobacco- flavored. I've never heard of such a thing. We removed it from the shelves as soon as it was brought to our attention."

It was on sale here only a matter of days, he said.

The gum, which has no nicotine content but is flavored to taste like tobacco, created a controversy in Ontario and Quebec when the Consumers Association of Canada said it was not suitable for children.

The association said the gum could lead children to take up smoking.

Zeller's Canadian headquarters in Montreal agreed to remove the product from all its stores.

Golden said tobacco-flavored gum is not the sort of product he would have ordered.

"It seems like a peculiar flavor to be selling to children. This isn't like the candy cigarettes they used to sell; this gum actually has the flavor of tobacco."

Zeller's got the flavor when it bought a large assortment from Canada Gum Ltd. which had gone bankrupt.

It was sold under the brand name of Klikkers.

Golden said all Zeller's stores in Canada have stopped selling the tobacco-flavored gum effective immediately.

The Consumers Association of Canada expressed concern the gum might have been widely distributed as Halloween treats by adults who did not notice the tobacco flavor printed on the label.

Administrators Get 'Peanuts'

Salaries paid public school administrators in both Canada and the U.S. are "peanuts," a U.S. government education adviser said here Thursday.

No matter how small the school, no principal in Canada or the U.S. should make less than $30,000 a year, said Owen Kiernan, who was formerly education commissioner for Massachusetts, a position similar to the cabinet status of Education Minister Pat McGeer.

Kiernan, the executive secretary of the National Association of Secondary School Principals (NASSP), said he told Congress recently school administrators are worth far more than they are getting.

Kiernan was speaking to members of a convention of B.C. principals and vice-principals at the Empress.

He said he disagrees with remarks made at the opening session of the conference Wednesday night by McGeer.

McGeer said his ministry will not support any request by school administrators for higher pay because they already make enough money.

Kiernan said the highest paid school principal in America lives in New York and makes $50,000 a year.

If that principal occupied a comparable position in industry, his salary would be between $175,000 and $200,000.

In contrast, Kiernan said in China the highest paid principal makes $45 a month. The highest paid teachers in that country receive $25 a month.

During his hour-long speech, Kiernan frequently contrasted conditions in China with the problems faced by Canada and the U.S.

China's education problems are completely different, he said.

The Chinese, with a population hovering near the one billion mark, do not have a declining enrolment problem.

"They believe in the stuffed-duck approach to education."

Classrooms hold as many as 75 students at a time, who sit two to a bench and memorize what is taught them without saying a word, he said.

In a recently completed survey U.S. principals indicated that attendance, not discipline is now the No. 1 problem.

A push by federal and state legislators to get more women into administrative positions has failed, he said.

In 1965, women occupied 10 per cent of the administrative positions; last year the figure was seven per cent.

Kiernan said women are their own worst enemies because even the most highly qualified refuse to leave the classroom.

The threat of litigation is also a growing problems. So many principals are being sued today that the NASSP now covers each member with a $300,000 liability insurance policy.

And costs of liability insurance have skyrocketed from $37,000 to $500,000 annually.

Ryan Casts Tie-Breaker On Dallas Apt. Project

Victoria Ald. Larry Ryan, going to bat for the developers, won approval Thursday for one controversial project and reconsideration of a second that was rejected by council two weeks ago.

Ryan, who wants to see more jobs for the construction trades in the city, cast the deciding vote on a proposal for a five-storey residential-commercial building on Dallas Road.

Until Ryan swung the balance, council was split on a proposal by Foster Isherwood to build a 70-foot high building, containing 16 apartments and lower floor commercial space, at 104 Dallas.

Ald. Bill McElroy, Robin Blencoe and Murray Glazier were opposed to the project, saying its height was not compatible with the waterfront location.

Ald. Bob Wright, Ron McKenzie, Bill Tindall and Ryan supported the project.

Ryan said he didn't think the building was too high, but had little other comment.

Approval for the project came despite strong representation from neighborhood associations.

Muriel Mixon, acting chairman of the James Bay Community Association, said the Isherwood building didn't fit in with what residents want for the community.

She said her organization had been fighting for 10 years to maintain the quality of life in James Bay and had consistently pressed for low-density housing and family homes in the area.

Mixon said she was sympathetic "with work-human unions" but felt the long-term aspirations of local residents was more important than short-term employment.

Charles Ball, of the James Bay Residents' League, said his organization is opposed to the proposal and prefers to see the house that now occupies 104 Dallas fixed up.

He said it was Isherwood's fault that the house had become somthing of an eyesore.

Council also heard from some individuals who said the proposed building was "lovely ... beautiful .... very badly needed."

On another development issue, Ryan won approval to have a council decision of two weeks ago reconsidered.

At question was a Daon Development Corp. townhouse project on a 1.5-acre lot at Boyd and Luxton.

Council originally rejected the plan to build 23 townhouse units after neighborhood residents had packed the chambers and strongly objected to the project.

Resident after resident had appeared before council to say the proposal was too dense.

But subsequent to council's decision William McCreery Architects, of Vancouver, won an award for the Daon design.

The Canadian Architect, a magazine published in Toronto by Southam Business Publications Ltd., will announce an award for excellence to McCreery in its December issue.

Ryan said that award, plus the high unemployment rate in the building trades, made it necessary for council to take a second look at the project.

Ryan said it is better to have people employed rather than on welfare or unemployment insurance.

Wright supported the call for a review saying that Daon has offered to add an adjacent piece of property to the development, thereby reducing the over-all density.

It is understood Daon is planning to add about 30,000 square feet to the project.

A new public hearing will be held at city hall on Nov. 9 at 7:30 p.m.

CITY CHANGES CONSULTANTS

A national consulting firm will be hired by Victoria city to find a replacement for its personnel officer who was fired on the recommendation of another consulting firm.

To give an added twist, it was Ald. Larry Ryan who recommended at Thursday's council meeting that the firm of P.S. Ross and Partners be hired to help fill the vacancy created by the termination of Terry FitzPatrick, fired because of a report by G.H. Newhouse, a Vancouver management firm.

Ryan fought over the last few months to have Newhouse dumped, saying the consulting firm had no business advising the city on personnel matters.

Ryan told council, however, that although he'd been opposed to having consultants in, he now feels differently.

Ryan said the search for a new personnel officer should be extensive and a national firm like P.S. Ross should be hired, even though the company will charge $6,000 compared to the $4,000 Newhouse wanted.

He added he does not want to see Newhouse conduct the search because the firm is Vancouver-based.

Ryan said the reconstruction job shouldn't be given to the same firm responsible for demolition.

That comment sparked an outburst from Ald. Bill Tindall who said: "We didn't hire Newhouse to do a demolition job."

Newhouse conducted a review of the city's personnel department, but before completing his final report apparently verbally advised Mayor Mike Young that FitzPatrick should be fired.

The Newhouse report was officially tabled with Young on Thursday.

The mayor said he intends to release the document because if he doesn't it will probably be made public anyway.

Young tried earlier to block all details surrounding the firing of FitzPatrick matter but some of the information leaked to the press.

Mott Runs For Seat As Trustee

Winfield Mott, Capital Regional District long-term care administrator, is the first non-incumbent to declare candidacy in the Greater Victoria School District trustee election on Nov. 18.

Mott, who feels the board is suffering from lack of direction, said trustees spend too much time fighting parents, community groups and each other.

The 41-year-old Mott, who holds a masters degree in history, said he believes in long-term fiscal, curriculum and community planning.

Wild Rivers In B.C.?

Following a decision by the U.S. government to declare the Skagit a wild and scenic river, the B.C. Wildlife Federation may revise its efforts to have wild river legislation introduced in B.C.

Earlier this week President Jimmy Carter signed a bill which will make the Skagit and three tributaries part of the National Wild and Scenic River System within a few days.

A river with wild and scenic status cannot be damned or otherwise developed and is protected for all time.

The Skagit, which originates in B.C., is blocked by the Ross Dam on the U.S. side of the border. The impoundment backs up into Canada. It is the river below the Ross structure that has been given protective status.

Five years ago the Wildlife Federation launched a campaign to have some of B.C.'s wild rivers given protection before damming, river bank logging, or other industrial-commercial development encroached upon the natural environment.

Bill Otway, executive director of the Wildlife Federation, said today that although all provincial parties had supported the concept of wild rivers legislation, nothing has ever happend.

"Everyone supported it but since then the silence has been deafening," said Otway.

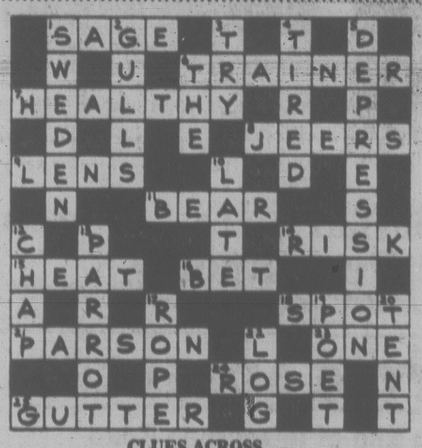

"It gives one a real sense of frustration. If all sides of the house are supportive and you still get nowhere how are you going to accomplish anything when you get some opposition?"

He said that his organization would like to revitalize the wild rivers campaign but may not be able to because of a shortage of funds.

"Unfortunately it's got put on the back burner — we just don't have any money right now," he said.

CLUES ACROSS

6. TRAINER not trainee. A TRAINER is more the sort of person viewed in the sense of having his critics, rather than a trainee (who is simply accepted to be inexpert).
8. JEERS not leers. That which one has to "face" is an overt affront — JEERS, rather than leers.
9. LENS not legs. A LENS links up aptly with the idea of "interested persons" (e.g., interested in photography, or optics, etc.). Beautiful legs are admired for ordinary human reasons.
11. BEAR not beat. As the clue implies, the fact that you "can't BEAR" a fellow tends to make you disinclined to praise him. Being unable to beat him gives every reason to praise him.
14. RISK not rise. The tone of the phrase "no more than one should expect" suits something that is simply natural or inevitable, e.g., RISK. Rise is less apt since, presumably, one welcomes, or tries for, increased business.
15. HEAT not heal. "Treat" or "alleviate" are words that fit the clue better than "heal." HEAT on the other hand, is quite specific.
16. BET not beg. While men who BET "may be quick" to bemoan their "luck" in the general manner suggested, men who beg are apt, rather, to tell you a hard luck story (as a definite ploy).
[illegible]ON not pardon. A PARSON might possibly be [illegible] to help a prisoner spiritually in the manner suggested. "Pardon" is hardly apt, since there is no such thing as "his punishment" (to be feared or not) for a man who has been pardoned.
24. ROSE not hose. ROSE is more invariably apt. With a hose, it tends to be a matter of circumstances (e.g., whether you are actually watering with it at the time).
25. GUTTER not cutter or putter. A putter is not in itself "ineffective"; it's just that maybe the player can't use it effectively. "Cutter," as a vague term for a blade of some sort, is a less clear and convincing answer than a GUTTER.

CLUES DOWN

2. GULLS not gills. "Nature's scheme of things" is a broad conception in which the various animals, birds, etc., play their part. "GULLS," therefore, is a more suitable answer than gills (parts of fishes).
3. TRY not fry. To TRY new things shows imagination. Cooks are not characterized by the sort of things they may or may not fry, specifically.
4. TIRED not hired. TIRED is more directly apt. Its being hired does not, in itself, handicap a horse in any [illegible]
[illegible]SION not repression. The expression: "suf[illegible]lies typically to ailments, etc., e.g., [illegible]pression, rather, is the sort of [illegible] suffer (not "from") at the hands of [illegible]authority.
10. LATE not lame. The idea of being "too LATE to enter" is quite apt. Since a lame runner simply cannot race, it's not a question of being "too" lame.
17. ROPE not robe. ROPE is more directly apt. Most would not tackle cutting off a robe.
22. LOG not low. One visualizes a "LOG cabin" (rather that a "low cabin," so regarded) as being a typical variety of simple cabin.

Rites Set For Pastor

Funeral service will be held at 2 p.m. Monday at the Hope Lutheran Church for Rev. Carl Christian Janzow, a well-known Victoria minister who died Tuesday. He was 91 years old.

He was appointed minister of the Hope Lutheran Church in 1952, retiring in 1961 to become a hospital chaplain until 1975.

Prior to coming to Victoria, he served as a Lutheran minister at Claresholm, Alta. He graduated from Concordia Seminary, St. Louis, Mo.

He is survived by his wife, Adeline; a son Kenneth, of Edmonton, and daughters Esther (at home) and Margaret Buchenauer of Vernon.

City Curbs Float Planes

Float plane traffic in the Inner Harbor should be restricted to its current level, Victoria city council decided Thursday.

In approving a report by Mayor Mike Young on air commuter services between Victoria and Vancouver, council agreed to an amendment regarding the current level of frequency.

In an early draft of his report Young had stated that scheduled float plane operations should be limited to substantially the current level and preferably to one carrier.

Young asked to amend that, however, dropping the reference to a single carrier and tightening up the wording so that it was clear he didn't want to see any more float planes in the harbor.

The report also recommends that the city encourage other means of air commuter service between the two cities and that consideration be given to a direct air bus service.

Ship Robbed

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — Five masked bandits broke into the home of a U.S. Navy paymaster Thursday night, beat him and forced him to reveal the combination of a safe aboard the U.S.S. Dixon — then boarded the ship and stole $180,000.

Cost of City's Courts Now $6,000 a Day

Administrative costs for the operation of the supreme, county and provincial courts in the Law Courts building on Burdett, and the family division of provincial court on Cameron Street, run about $1.5 million annually.

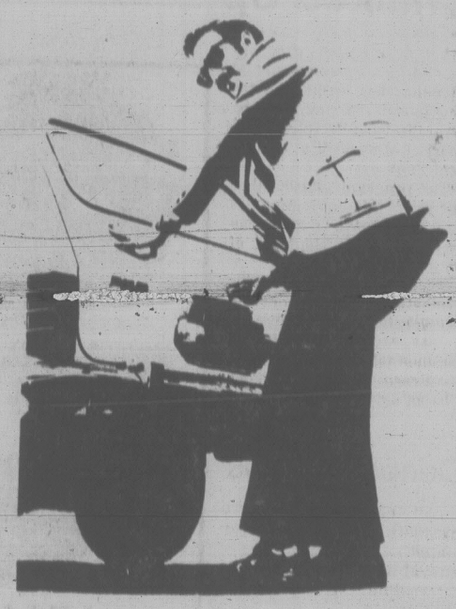

The entire budget for the attorney-general's ministry for the current fiscal year is set at $186.6 million to cover such areas as Crown counsel, police services, corrections, the judiciary and court services.

Court costs are paid through the $28.9 million alloted to court services and is the cost of running all courts in the province.

The $1.5 Victoria portion includes court reporters, recorders and clerks, administrative support staff and deputy sheriffs as well as supplies, furniture and equipment.

CEILING OFF MORE RENTALS

A second group of rental units has been exempted from the seven per cent rent increase ceiling.

Consumer and Corporate Affairs Minister Rafe Mair said Thursday that bachelor, studio and one-bedroom apartments renting for more than $300 a month and two-bedroom units renting for more than $350 will be removed from the controls effective Feb. 1, 1979.

Mair said he was making the announcement at this time because landlords must give three months notice of any rent hike.

Phase One of the lifting of rent controls came last Aug. 1 when all units rented for more than $400 a month were exempted.

Mair said since that time, there have been no complaints or problems and that the principle of supply and demand seems to be working.

If there are any complaints, however, tenants must appeal within 30 days of receiving notice to the Rent Review Commission.

They must offer what they feel to be a fair alternative which will be considered with the landlord's requested increase through a "fixed choice arbitration process."

One figure — the landlord's or the tenant's — will be picked which means that it is in both parties' best interest to propose reasonable amounts, the minister said.

Vander Z Re-Heats Policy On Welfare for Transients

Employable transients will be cut off welfare if they refuse temporary work, Human Resources Minister Bill Vander Zalm said Thursday.

The minister was outlining what he said is a new policy which divides transients into three categories — unemployables, employables and children.

However, a check of past comments by the minister relating to welfare and transients indicates Vander Zalm has said substantially the same thing several times in the past.

He said that until now the government has not had any policy dealing with transients anywhere in B.C. and individual offices have been dealing differently with them.

"So what we've done is pulled together a policy which will be applicable in all areas of the province in the hopes that we can provide for those people not only in the Vancouver and Prince George but in other areas of the province as well," the minister said in an interview.

"For the employables we would only provide food vouchers and a three-day stay unless they could prove they in fact have a job they could go to — in which case we could make separate arrangements."

The minister said his ministry will also make available to employables transportation services if they are in a community where temporary employment is nearby.

"In areas where there is temporary employment, for example in the Okanagan during fruit-picking season, they would have to pick up their food vouchers at the farm labor or some such office so that employment might be offered them first.

"And, if they refuse, then, of course, there would be no assistance to them."

The minister said the unemployables are perhaps handicapped in some way, "and we would give them all the social services and income assistance available."

Vander Zalm said the policy in the case of children is to make immediate contact with their parents.

"We require the parents to compensate us for the cost incurred in repatriation or providing for them while we straighten things out between them and a home."

He said for children under 17, the superintendent of child welfare would step in and repatriation would be mandatory or they would become temporary or permanent wards.

"For children 17 to 19 years of age we would make contact with the parents and we would give temporary assistance."

Annapurna Claims Two

KATMANDU, Nepal, (AP) — Two members of an all-women American mountaineering expedition climbing the 8,096-metre Annapurna main peak have died, an official of Nepal's tourism ministry said Thursday.

He said the ministry did not have identifications or other details about the deaths. The U.S. embassy here had no immediate comment.

Road & Track's opinion:

"After 48,000 miles (80,000 Kilometers) and 15 months of living with Le Car GTL, we still find it a fun car to drive and one that we will miss now that our test is completed.
The ride and directional stability are remarkable for a car of this size.
We think Le Car is a very good automobile. It does so many things well and without fuss. We would not, and have not, hesitate(d) to recommend Le Car as an economical transportation car."

Motor Trend's opinion:

"In the area of comfort, Le Car excels, delivering a ride that would do credit to far larger, more expensive cars in the luxury category... Le Car will glide smoothly over the surfaces that, in cars of lesser ability, would become tools to clacking and vibrate the screws out of your sunglasses.
Le Car is practical, supremely comfortable, agile and fun... Le Car will afford the customer more than sheer, dull economy. If your into economy cars, you can't ask for a more pleasant one than Le Car."

Cold Start, Hot Finale

His troubles apparently started because there was no hot water for his shower that morning.

Crown counsel Robert Mulligan said Boel kicked and broke a window at the Bank of Nova Scotia, 702 Yates, at 9:10 a.m. and was apprehended.

Boel told city police he did it because he was in a bad mood.

He explained that the water in his shower was cold that morning and he was late for work.

Judge William Ostler fined Boel $50, placed him on three months probation and ordered him to make pay $60 to the bank within two months.

Before the Judge

Judge William Ostler ordered a pre-sentence report Thursday for a 19-year-old man who persisted on Oct. 18 in seeing a female acquaintance.

David Norman Hollywood, no fixed address, pleaded guilty through defence lawyer Jasper Bomhof in provincial court to possession of a dangerous weapon.

Crown counsel Robert Mulligan said Hollywood first entered the Queen Victoria Inn, 655 Douglas, at 12:40 a.m., forcing his way in to see a woman employee there.

Mulligan said Hollywood was upset because he couldn't see her alone due to another male employee being asked to stay. Victoria city police had to be called.

Police returned twice more that morning and finally arrested him for possession of a large knife.

Mulligan entered a stay of proceedings on an assault charge.

The report is expected to be ready when Joseph is scheduled for sentencing Nov. 23.

Ostler released an 18-year-old on bail with one or two sureties in the amount of $1,500, but ordered him to obey a 9 p.m. curfew until the case is resolved.

Christian Eric Richard Hurn, 820 Fisgard, was charged with theft of an electric guitar from a parked vehicle Sept. 19 and two counts of possession of stolen property.

Mulligan had opposed Hurn's release on the grounds he was on two probations at the time of the alleged offences.

However, legal-aid lawyer James Main argued that Hurn had full-time employment and was also a part-time counsellor at the Metchosin Camp operated by the corrections branch.

A 26-year-old man who couldn't pay for a meal he ate was given a suspended sentence and 50 hours of community service work.

Mulligan said Garrison went to Don Mee's Restaurant, 538 Fisgard, at about 2:20 a.m., March 19, and ate a $6.05 meal before informing staff he had no money.

Garrison told arresting officers he was hungry.

Ostler also placed Garrison on six months probation.

Fined for drinking-driving were: John Robert McCush, 28, of 917 Hudson, $500; William Henry Ebel, 52, of 1165 Yates, $500; Edwin James Rooke, 33, of 2413 Amelia, $500; Lindsay John Whyte, 22, of 1243 Bay, $500; and Tyrone Richard Joseph, 26, of 903 Esquimalt, $50.

In addition, Joseph was ordered to perform 125 hours of community service work.

More Time Needed On Coroner

The Public Service Commission wants to extend the deadline for applications for the position of chief coroner for the province, a spokesman said Thursday.

The deadline was Wednesday but the attorney-general will be asked to extend it one week because of the postal strike. So far, 18 people have applied for the job including doctors, lawyers and coroners.

SING A SONG OF SIXPENCE?

HARTFORD, Conn. — The singing bus driver who was fired for allegedly swiping $8 in fares had a song in his heart Thursday as community leaders mobilized to get his job back for him.

Benford "Benjie" Stellmacher, 25, an employee of the state-owned Connecticut Transit Bus Co., was dismissed last week when two company "spotters" gave him $8 worth of marked $1 bills. The money did not turn up in his day's receipts.

The company management said Stellmacher, who preaches the gospel on Sunday in the Mount Olive Baptist Church, "mishandled funds." Stellmacher said he was just being friendly by giving change to passengers who didn't have the exact 50-cent fare for the Hartford to New Britain run.

"I'm moved and I'm touched," said Stellmacher when the city's Human Relations Commission told him it had received 100 or so signatures from sympathetic passengers.

The father of two walked out of a commission meeting, his eyes welling with tears.

Atop Peak

YOSEMITE NATIONAL PARK, Calif. — Bruised but triumphant, the first woman to climb alone to the top of 1,200-metre-high El Capitan — a gigantic granite mass that rises unbroken from Yosemite Valley—says: "It just seemed like a different thing to try."

Meanwhile, Nepal's ministry of tourism has released the names of the two women climbers who fell to their deaths Thursday during their final assault on the summit of Mt. Annapurana. They are Vera Watson, 44, of Stanford, Calif., and Alison Chadwick 25, of Leeds, England.

VATICAN CITY — Pope John Paul II began his shake-up of the Vatican bureaucracy today by removing Cardinal Pericle Felici, a noted conservative Italian cardinal, as chief of a commission on liberal church reform.

HELSINKI — A 14-year-old Finnish girl hid for 30 hours in a sealed crate in a vain attempt to reach Los Angeles and see guitarist Eric Faulkner of the Bay City Rollers rock group.

HADLEY, N.Y. — A man who was angered when the family cat urinated on the floor and tried to swat the animal with a loaded shotgun was killed when the gun discharged, state police said.

Bruce Jay Weiss, 28, the father of two children, died of wounds to the throat following the mishap.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Billy Carter, brother of President Carter, has been hired to act in a CBS movie, Flatbed Annie and Sweetiepie: Lady Truckers.

LONDON (AP) — Prime Minister Dom Mintoff of Malta was awarded unspecified but substantial damages and costs in the High Court in London on Thursday as settlement of his libel action over a newspaper article that suggested he abused his power.

He had complained of an article in The Daily Mail in August, 1977, and sued Associated Newspapers Group Ltd., and Daily Mail editor David English.

ACT WORKS TOO WELL

KITCHENER, Ont. — Mike Mandel, 25, a mentalist, was performing at Connestoga College when he neck was sprained by a young woman overcome by the power of his suggestion.

During his act, Mandel said he would point to a woman in the audience and she would believe she had just won the Miss Universe contest.

When he pointed at a woman, she became so excited that she jumped up, leaped onto his back and wrapped her arms around his head before both tumbled to the floor.

Rita Toll Mounts

MANILA (AP) — Typhoon Rita killed at least 13 persons in the Philippines and the death toll is almost certain to rise, relief officials said today.

Most of the victims drowned, but some were electrocuted by fallen wires or crushed by trees pushed down by 150-kilometre-an-hour gusts as the storm passed through the country's rice bowl, central Luzon.

Duplicate Digits Bared

HALIFAX (CP) — Two recent purchasers of group tickets sold by Loto Canada are wondering why their tickets bear the same three or four digits at the end of each number.

Ray Warner of Halifax said he purchased one of the special group packages of 10 tickets at a local Loto-Canada kiosk.

"When I checked the numbers, I found that four of them had the same last three digits and two other groups of three had the same three or four digits.

"It definitely reduces the chances of my group to win because if we don't win the $1 million prize, we have little or no chance to win smaller prizes."

Grant Hamblen of Halifax says the same thing happened to him when he picked up a group-of-10 package.

Warner said he has been told by the Loto Canada office in Ottawa there had been a "programming error." Computer programmers were instructed to make sure the first two numbers on each ticket were different but had failed to consider the remaining sequence of numbers.

City Man Guilty of Murder Try

Jeno Robert Lipcsei will be sentenced Nov. 24 by Mr. Justice James Macdonald who requested that a pre-sentence report be prepared.

The jury deliberated two hours and 20 minutes, returning once to ask Macdonald to give them the second part of the definition of murder.

He had told the jury that murder is when someone means to cause death. But it includes a situation where a person means to cause bodily harm that he knows is likely to cause death and is reckless whether death ensues or not.

He instructed the jury to consider the charge of attempted murder first but if the jury considered Lipcsei not guilty of this charge, then the lesser included offences of wounding with intent, intent to endanger life and assault causing bodily harm must be considered.

He also told the jury that provocation is not a defence to a charge of attempted murder.

Lipcsei said in part of his testimony that he went to the office of Stevenson, Doell and Company, where his wife, Martha, was a bookkeeper, to "get even" for a beating he claimed he received that day from three strangers, one of whom said "that's for Martha."

The prosecution said Lipcsei struck his wife three times with an 18-inch metal bar causing a three-inch cut to the top of her head, a two-inch cut of the upper lip, two broken teeth and four damaged teeth, a bruised left shoulder and a broken finger.

Mrs. Lipcsei, who said they separated in June, testified she didn't know why he attacked her.

Father in Shock After Bones Traced

A man living in a Surrey nursing home was in shock Thursday after being told the bodies of two teen-agers found in an abandoned coal mine near Nanaimo were those of his sons who had been missing for 10 years.

A spokesman at the home said Donald Brown, 56, was not well enough to talk to reporters after he was notified by RCMP the bodies had been identified. Brown is in the nursing home recovering from an industrial accident.

Daryll Wayne Brown, 18, and Terry Lee Brown, 16, left their Nanaimo home for a weekend outing in March, 1969, and never returned.

Their bodies were discovered Saturday in the abandoned Furnace Portal mine by three boys exploring its maze of tunnels.

A spokesman for the provincial coroner's office in Vancouver, where the bodies were examined, said there was no evidence of foul play and the pair likely died of exposure and starvation. He said a coroner's inquiry will be held in Nanaimo, but no date had been set.

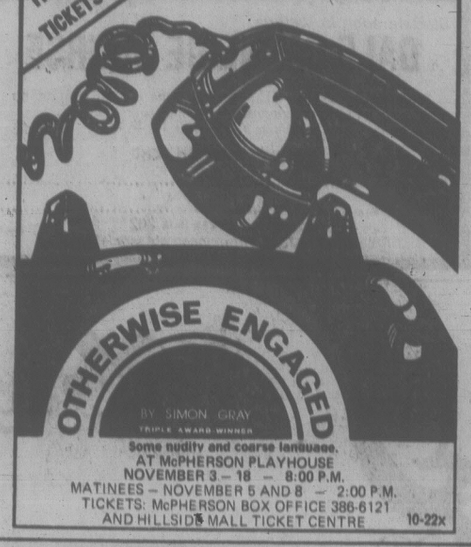

Contract Let For Overpass

A $113,000 contract has been awarded by the highways ministry to Dura Construction of Saanich for partial demolition and reconstruction of the B.C. Cement Co. overpass on the Trans-Canada Highway near the Mill Bay turn-off.

Highways Minister Alex Fraser also announced awarding of a $628,000 contract to Manning Construction Ltd. of Vancouver for widening of the Ioco overhead crossing of the Barnett Highway near Port Coquitlam.

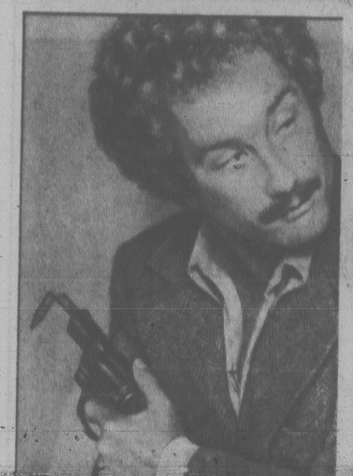

Fraser said a $311,000 contract was awarded to Kingston Consruction Ltd. of Burnaby to build a new bridge 43 kilometres west of Tatla Lake Junction on the Chilcotin-Bella Coola Highway.

'Most UIC Recipients Likely Don't Need It'

federal government surveys have shown that only "10 to 15 per cent of people who have exhausted their benefits" need to go on welfare.

Asked if he thought Walker's conclusions were valid, Gaudet said he thought that was a good possibility.

"But we're looking specifically at what alternatives are open to exhaustees and whether they avail themselves of the alternatives. And also what happens in regions where the alternatives aren't available."

In Ottawa, Employment Minister Bud Cullen denied opposition charges Thursday that incompetence and mismanagement were the reasons his department paid out $142 million too much in unemployment insurance benefits last year.

Under attack in the Commons, Cullen said his department will crack down on error and fraud.

However, Cullen insisted the overpayments were not a large percentage of total benefits. He challenged opposition MPs to find another program which paid benefits directly to the public and had a better record than the unemployment insurance program.

age levels during July and August.

For the three-month period ending Sept. 30, major imports included transportation equipment, meat, processed materials and computers and other office equipment. There was a decline in the import of chemicals, trucks and certain types of equipment.

Statistics Canada also reported that the largest decline in durable goods manufacturing since January, 1975, offset substantial gains in production for several other major industries in August.

The result was a marginal increase in over-all production in the economy of less than one-tenth of one per cent.

Mail Flood 'Like Yule'

It's like Christmas in October for inside postal workers.

Post office spokesman Buzz Sawyer said today reports from the mail processing plant in Saanich say there is a crush of mail similar to what happens during the Yuletide season when the sorters handle about one million pieces of mail a day.

He said there is a backlog of 500,000 pieces of mail.

"We are really getting a lot of mail now," Sawyer said, explaining that a lot of businesses held off during the postal strike and are now stuffing everything into the system.

He said all the cheques will either be delivered today or Monday and the normal flow of mail should return some time next week.

Sawyer also said the working atmosphere at Victoria-area post office operations is terrific, even better than it was before the national strike.

He agreed the situation was a little delicate when the members of the Canadian Union of Postal Workers first came back to work Wednesday but added that the climate has improved considerably.

"Everything is good," he said. "Everybody is working hard and doing a terrific job."

Peter de Belle, recording secretary for CUPW's Victoria local, reserved comment on his members' attitudes now that they are back on the job.

He said a better idea of the feelings of the workers will become evident at a meeting scheduled for 1 p.m. Sunday at the Quadra Street Union Centre.

He said the meeting was planned to assess the members' situation and report on any problems that have occurred since the return to work.

De Belle said the CUPW members were heartened by the support they received locally from such unions as the International Woodworkers of America, Local 118, the United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union and members of Local 1311 of the Canadian Union of Public Employees.

De Belle said he for one does not agree with those who say CUPW should break away from the Canadian Labor Congress because of disatisfaction with the support the postal union got from the national labor body.

BCFP Profits Doubled For First Nine Months

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia Forest Products Ltd. reported Thursday that it virtually doubled its profits for the first nine months of this year to $45.6 million or $2.99 a share.

Company profits for the same period last year were $23.1 million or $1.50 a share.

Sales were $503.2 million compared with $330.8 million.

Third-quarter earnings were $17.5 million or $1.15 a share on sales of $172.2 million compared with $8.2 million or 53 cents a share on sales of $120.6 million in the third quarter last year.

The company said the main reasons for the improvement in earnings were increased sales of wood products, the inclusion of earnings of Blandin Paper company of the United States which was acquired in August last year, and the favorable exchange rate on the Canadian dollar.

The exchange rate on sales to the U.S. contributed $16.4 million or $1.09 a share to profits, compared to 45 cents a share in the same period last year.

CanCel's Plummet

VANCOUVER (CP) — Canadian Cellulose Co. Ltd. reported today sharply-reduced profits of $1.7 million or 14 cents a share for the first nine months of 1978, compared with $11.4 million or 93 cents a share in the same period last year.

Sales were $129 million compared with $119.5 million for the first nine months of 1977.

In the third quarter, the company reported profits of $494,000 or four cents a share a compared with $2.2 million or 17 cents a share in the third quarter last year. Sales for the quarter were up to $39.9 million compared with $37 million.

Donald Watson, president and chief executive officer, said the favorable exchange rate of the Canadian dollar and strong lumber markets were offset by depressed prices for kraft pulp.

Volunteers Can Strike It Rich

By CAROL SPELLER
Times Staff

Volunteers.

Not necessarily so, says Dot Roberts, executive director of the Victoria Volunteer Bureau.

"There's more to it than that."

The reasons for volunteering are as varied as the volunteers themselves, and many discover the work pays off richly in a variety of ways.

"All kinds of people volunteer," Roberts says waving both arms. "Men, women children, transients, professionals, unskilled laborers, the unemployed.

Many people do volunteer work to get job experience.

"There's heavy competition for jobs and this gives an extra edge over a person who has never volunteered. Employers now are putting a space on application forms for volunteer work."

And for people who have graduated from university and still don't know what they want to do, volunteering is a way of sampling possible careers.

There's a choice of about 30 different areas in which to work, so people who visit the bureau and say: "Well, I'd just like to volunteer," will have their memories prodded and probably rediscover a long-forgotten interest or skill.

She says volunteering is also a good way to meet people, to get to know the community and to establish a place in life.

☆

Projects co-ordinator Margaux Finlayson agrees.

"In volunteering you get a mix of people, whereas in a job you tend to gravitate toward people who are like you."

"The increase in self-esteem and self-worth is a real payoff.

About 25 per cent of Victorians are active volunteers and a study done in 1976 shows that half the people in Canada have done volunteer work.

About 700 people a year visit the bureau's home at suite 204 in the aging Central Building on View Street.

And Roberts says that's only the tip of the iceberg because most people go directly to the agency they're interested in working for.

But the bureau's attitude is everyone has something to offer and for those who aren't sure where their talents lie, the staff will find them.

With only a paid staff of three — Roberts, Finlayson and office manager Lynne Shields — the bureau acts as a referral agency and information centre.

Volunteers work with the physically or metally handicapped, help with after-school programs, provide transportation, work in day care centres, organize recreational programs, assist the elderly, lend needed hands at hospitals, act as community group directors and planners, sponsor probationers or prisoners, become foster-grandparents for single-parent families, assist physiotherapists, help with environmental programs and become Big Brothers or Sisters, just to name a few.

☆

Finlayson says emphasis is placed on communication skills which are important when dealing with other people.

The group also discusses volunteering, share experiences, are shown slides on different agencies who use volunteers and "they get to meet other people to see what they're doing."

About 80 per cent of the bureau's funds come from the human resources ministry, the rest from United Way and donations.

When 21-year-old Barb Hetherington visited the bureau three years ago she wanted to work with children.

"But there were so many jobs. I didn't believe all the different things you can do."

She volunteers at the volunteer bureau doing promotion and public relations work, supervises social evenings at Laurel House for the Canadian Mental Health Association, is a part-time psychology student at Camosun College and holds down two part-time jobs.

She has also worked for the United Way and the Crisis Line.

She volunteered because "I was dissatisfied with groups and organizations when I was in college. I wanted to do something different."

Will she keep on volunteering?

"Definitely. I enjoy the things I've been doing so much."

Everybody has something to offer says executive director Dot Roberts

United Way

We're at 60% and Counting

The United Way campaign has collected 60 per cent of its $926,500 objective.

A spokesman said today $551,000 has been donated.

He also said that federal employees have contributed $95,000 of their $100,000 goal.

Residents' Suit Seeks To Disqualify Paterson

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

A petition was filed in B.C. Supreme Court Thursday seeking a declaration that Saanich Ald. David Paterson should be removed from office for disqualification through an alleged conflict of interest.

The petition is part of a legal action by the Cadboro Bay Residents Association designed to overturn the recent Saanich council decision approving the Minnie Mountain residential development project at Ten Mile Point.

Paterson has seven days in which to indicate his intentions in the case.

He said today he cannot comment on his plans until he has had an opportunity to obtain legal advice.

The alderman voted in favor of the development proposal by Broadmead Farms Ltd., following last month's public hearing and when council gave the bylaw final approval earlier this week.

On both occasions the vote margin of approval was 5-4. If the Cadboro Bay association's legal fight succeeds the Broadmead project would be killed.

The alleged conflict of interest involves Paterson's position as an alderman in relation to his professional role as an employee of a firm associated with solicitors Pearlman and Lindholm, which has acted for the developers.

Paterson said earlier he was satisfied, from legal advice he had received, that there was no reason why he should have been disqualified from voting on the Minnie Mountain issue.

Accompanying the petition filed Thursday are affidavits signed by several members of the residents' association.

They seek a declaration that Paterson be "disqualified from continuing in office as an alderman" and that he be "removed from office as an alderman . . . by reason of his having become disqualified from holding office as an alderman for the corporation of the district of Saanich since his election to that office."

DEPARTMENT OF TRANSPORT

Vancouver on Station Papa; Camsell, Quadra and Douglas in port; Racer undergoing refit in Victoria, Ready in Sand Heads patrol area, Rider in Jervis Inlet patrol area.

It's Now Official: Weatherships Stay

Federal Environment Minister Len Marchand made it official today: the weatherships Quadra and Vancouver will be in business after next April 19.

Marchand said the two ships will stay in service at least until April, 1981, because he has not been convinced that an adequate alternative service can be provided.

The minister said the weather data provided by the two ships is vital to West Coast mariners and fishermen.

The two ships were to have been phased out next April as part of the federal government's cost-cutting measures.

Are Legs Being Polled?

All fall there were rumors of a phantom election and now a phantom province-wide political poll is making the rounds.

Or are they perhaps related?

Opposition leader Dave Barrett feels they are.

A secretive outfit calling itself the Canadian Polling Institute carried out an intensive opinion survey of B.C. householders asking a series of questions about taxation and the efficiency of the provincial government.

The Canadian Polling Institute, however, doesn't seem to exist. No company of that name is registered in Canada and no one has ever heard of it before.

None of the province's four main political parties will admit to commissioning any poll under any name.

Barrett, however, says he is convinced the poll was conducted by the Social Credit government of Premier Bill Bennett and the results were so disastrous for his party that he dropped all thought of a fall election.

Then there was that gathering the other night to officially launch the new NDP association in the proposed new provincial riding of Esquimalt-Port Renfrew.

You remember — that's the one where hometown policeman Sgt. Frank Mitchell and his supporters are calmly carving up the faction that's trying to parachute in party bigwig Andy Brewin as the candidate in the next provincial election.

At the meeting, the Brewin backers proposed a new-look executive to the faithful and saw their slate rejected by a more than 2-1 margin.

A cog must have slipped in the University of Victoria Computing and Systems Newsletter.

Ordinarily the publication is merely hard to understand, being filled with stuff like, "regression model validation" . . . "expanded batch execution" . . . "STATLIB EXEC procedure," and "the simplistic interface."

The latest edition looked more bizzare than usual and we really puzzled over contributions made by A.C. Bre::, D.C. Gille:: and D. S:o:hard, in phrases consisting of:

"new da:a :o :est . . . :he : se:s have similar s:a:is:ical proper:ies . . . files crea:ed during ba:ch execu:ion and the :yping of excerp:s from :he console log . . ."

Then we realized the print-out equipment on which the newsletter is run off is just as fallible as the old fashioned mimeograph when the "t" gets clogged.

★ ★ ★

There's something Catch 22-ish about that scheme approved Thursday by Victoria aldermen.

The two-bus free downtown shuttle system is to become a temporary one-bus affair.

The idea is to increase the number of passengers using the service.

By using only one bus, the city will save cash.

The money saved will be used to advertise the bus service and hopefully, attract new passengers.

Ald. Bill McElroy, chairman of council's transportation committee, says the whole exercise is self defeating and one of the silliest things he's ever heard.

The name's Jim Mainguy and civil servants in the know say that's just what he was for most of his 37 years as a provincial civil servant.

Mainguy calls his lengthy career quits at the end of this month and his knowledge and quiet expertise will be missed around the legislature, particularly in the health department.

Mainguy, who bows out with the rank of deputy health minister, grew up in Duncan and attended the University of B.C. before joining the government.

In 1972 he became assistant deputy minister in charge of hospital insurance and in 1975 he was appointed deputy minister of the ministry.

★ ★ ★

Only the computer knows for sure and so far, it ain't telling.

Seems Victoria General Hospital expects a year-end deficit of $500,000 and the board's finance committee reports the deficit is hidden somewhere in the hospital's new computer system.

Somebody should write a doctoral thesis on the love-hat relationship between elected officials and headgear. Seems politicians are always trying on Indian war bonnets, Stetsons or as in this case, a fireman's hat. Premier Bill Bennett became the latest to succumb when he was made an honorary Saanich fire chief. He is shown shaking hands with Fire Chief Art Fryer while Saanich Mayor Mel Couvelier, right, seems to think whole thing's hilarious

TOWN TALK

The indications are however, the deficit is beyond the hospital's control.

Reasons for the deficit could be rising costs in areas such as energy, medical and surgical supplies.

The talk at the University of Victoria these days is all about how the the campus will be the site of B.C.'s second medical school.

As the demand for more B.C.-trained doctors grows, UVic will be the logical choice because it has enough space for a medical school to complement existing facilities at the University of B.C. That's the optimistic reasoning.

But when?

Maybe next spring, maybe five years from now, says Fairclough. Petch, however, is not as optimistic.

Ald. Bill McElroy's traffic committee on city council has been warning of the accident hazard posed by utility poles placed too near the curb on city streets — and has worked to improve some streets, especially the Bay-Cook intersection.

One Mouth Too Many In Lafleur's Business

In Guy Lafleur's shoes, I would take the money and skate.

German money, Swedish money, Finnish money—whatever. I'd wave goodbye to Montreal Canadiens and the slash-and-hold artists of the National Hockey League, accept that mysterious European offer of 400,000 tax-free dollars plus a car and a villa and head off into the sunset where seasons are 35 games long, the rinks are wide and endless and the skies are not cloudy all day.

He has the offer. It is legitimate and standing. The Canadiens could take him to court if they wished but when the shouting was done he could sit in his villa and laugh. Would the International Ice Hockey Federation take a firm stand on an issue that would bring Guy Lafleur to Europe? Don't be silly.

He is a bundle of nerves — a chain-smoking hyper who's been found in the dressing room five hours before a game, in full gear, waiting to play. The pressures of being an idol are sawing away at those already-taut nerves. He has weathered adulation and survived an abortive kidnap plot. He is not and has never been a secure person. And the European offer is dangling out there in front of him.

In the Oct. 16 issue of Maclean's, Roy MacGregor produced perhaps the finest look at Guy Lafleur to appear anywhere in the English language prints. It ends thusly:

"I still haven't said no . . . The offer came too late for this year, but maybe next year. The other thing is, you have to live sometime."

★ ★ ★

This week, a player agent named Jerry Petrie, who represents Lafleur, issued an ultimatum to the Canadiens: either they come to terms regarding the renegotiation of Lafleur's current contract, or Wednesday's game against Toronto Maple Leafs would be Lafleur's last as a Canadien.

It was tough talk. Twenty four hours later Petrie was talking again. This time he didn't sound quite so tough.

Lafleur had no plans to leave the Canadiens.

"Basically what we are saying is that we shouldn't have made the remarks," he added, slipping into the royal plural. "I had a pact. I had a discussion with the Canadiens that I certainly would not talk to the press. OK. And I violated that pact."

He opened by reading a prepared statement from Lafleur who said, among other things, that certain remarks had been made to "certain members of the press which are regrettable and as a result the matter has been blown slightly out of proportion."

That's the press for you. We keep taking notes when agents make statements. If we'd ignore them maybe they'd all go away and not waste all that time mumbling retractions around the shoes in their mouths.

There were certain misconceptions in stories out of the east on the Lafleur affair, which sounded as though poor Guy had to sell pencils in the street to stay alive.

True, he is now entering the fifth season of a 10-year contract offered by Sam Pollock as a confidence booster going into Lafleur's third pro year. That contract was, indeed, for $1 million.

But he is not earning a paltry $100,000 per season from the Canadiens. That contract has been renegotiated once already to boost his current salary to roughly double that — reportedly with two more rights-of-renegotiation clauses to go, including the one currently in progress, and maybe already agreed upon.

And it was not a story on players' salaries, published last summer, that solidified Lafleur's determination to battle for wages more in line with proven worth. It was testimony in the Dale McCourt vs the NHL compensation case, now before the courts, in which Montreal goalie Ken Dryden's salary was listed as $325,000 per season.

That's the trouble with sport in court. When you throw the laundry into the legal washer you don't get a choice of what dirt comes out.

Lafleur has been told that he is the finest winger, perhaps the finest player, in the game today. Three straight scoring championships, four straight all-star selections and two straight most-valuable player awards would seem to back it up.

And he is working for a salary that would not place him among the league's top 20 wage-earners.

It is, in short, a matter of pride.

The money is academic. He could retire twice on royalties from his line of men's cosmetics alone. Endorsements are there for the taking. If he quit now he would quit rich.

But his own team won't pay him as the best. Dryden has been believed to be the highest paid man on the team, which is fine. But is he worth $125,000 per season more than a Guy Lafleur? Butch Goring makes $200,000 with Los Angeles Kings. He is a good hockey player, but he is seldom mistaken for Lafleur.

So Guy has gone to the mat with the Montreal brass, and the only unfortunate thing about it is that Petrie went public and made a threat he really wasn't in a position to back up — and got his knuckles rapped.

It will be worked out, because Lafleur isn't the only one under pressure. The Canadiens' new management, already on trial in the hockey press for butchering the Pierre Bouchard case, risks the ungodly wrath of the Montreal hockey fan should Lafleur be allowed to slip away.

Still, if I was Lafleur, I'd think Europe. A villa, a car, $400,000 tax-free bucks per year for a 35-game schedule, and a game and rinks suited to his flashing style—with all that, does he really need road games in Pittsburgh?

U.S. Questions Insurance Deal

LAKE PLACID, N.Y. (AP) — The federal government is withholding payment of $400,000 on an insurance contract for construction for the 1980 Winter Olympics because of a possible conflict of interest by the insurance salesmen, it was reported Wednesday.

Ottaway News Service reported that Olympic organizers awarded the $800,000 contract to a hastily formed insurance company, whose two principals are employees of a company owned by their uncle, one of the most powerful members of the Olympic Organizing Committee, Jack Wilkins.

Such a contract could bring the salesmen as much as $200,000 in commisssions. Ottaway said the contract had not been put out to bid.

But Olympic organizers denied there was any conflict of interest and said the contract had been put out to bid.

"Fifteen insurance companies were asked if they wanted to handle the insurance. None of them wanted to touch it," Ed Lewi, spokesman for the committee, said Wednesday.

In a copyrighted story, Ottaway identified Edward and Robert Damp as the principals of Placid Management, Ltd., a company formed in April, 1977. It holds the contract for liability insurance covering contractors working on facilities for the 1980 Games.

The Damp brothers say it is the only insurance business the firm has.

Besides being salaried officers in Wilkins Agency, Inc., the two are also nephews of Wilkins and unsalaried members of the Olympic Organizing Committee, the story said.

SHIFTING OFFENCE PAYS DIVIDENDS

Vikings Rip Cowboys

DALLAS (AP) — Minnesota Vikings looked like Dallas Cowboys with their multiple shifting offence Thursday night. They also managed to accomplish something else the Cowboys have done their share of — win.

The Vikings, who somehow installed a tricky shift into their split formation despite a short work week, ripped the defending Super Bowl champions 21-10 to stay alive in the National Conference Central Division with a 5-4 record.

For the miscue-prone Cowboys, now with a 6-3 record, it knocked them out of a first-place tie with Washington Redskins in the National Football League's Eastern Division.

"I like multiple-play formations," said Tarkenton. "We had used it against Tampa Bay, but we didn't use the shift. I like to have something different every week.

"(Dallas Coach) Tom Landry is a genius. Why do you think he has a shifting offence? Well, it's to confuse the defence. But we didn't beat them on a new formation. We beat them by playing well."

Landry admitted the Cowboys were surprised.

"They came out in a spread formation that we had not seen," he said. "Tarkenton is a master at that kind of an offence."

Vikings coach Bud Grant was all smiles, saying: "This was the first time we used this offence. Our offensive coaches deserve a lot of credit. We only had two days to work out and the guys worked hard. It's basically the same plays we use except we just spread out more."

Dallas safety Cliff Harris admitted the Vikings hoodwinked the Cowboys' defence.

"We obviously weren't playing them to do what they did," said Harris. "They came out and completely caught us off balance early, and we stayed off balance the entire first half. We didn't figure it out until they got 14 points on us.

Tarkenton completed a four-yard touchdown pass to Chuck Foreman after Dallas fumbled away the opening kickoff. Rickey Young scored on a four-yard run, and Tarkenton winged a 12-yard scoring pass to Sammy White as the Vikings ran away to a 21-3 halftime lead.

Dallas's only touchdown after Rafael Septien's 25-yard field goal was Robert Newhouse's one-yard run following an 18-yard Roger Staubach-to-Tony Hill pass.

Foreman gained more yards on the ground — 101 on 22 carries — than the entire Cowboys rushing total — 92.

Tony Dorsett, who regained his starting halfback job at midweek by apologizing for missing a team practice, was booed heavily by the 61,848 fans in Texas Stadium and watched closely by the Vikings, who permitted the breakaway threat just 38 yards on 11 carries.

"I don't understand these fans," Dorsett said. "Our fans are funny. After the first half, you expected them to be geared up and help fire us up. But it's like they're at a funeral unless something happens. I'm not shooting them down, they are great fans. But our fans expect at times too much."

Ticats Juggle Roster For Clash With Argos

Hamilton Tiger-Cats coach John Payne fired two players Thursday and made several lineup changes in preparation for Saturday's Canadian Football League game against the eastern conference champion Ottawa Rough Riders.

In the wake of two disastrous losses (35-1 to Calgary Sampeders and 22-7 to Toronto Argonauts), Payne released kicker Nick Jambrosic and wide receiver David Quehl.

Canadian wide receiver Brock Aynsley, recently acquired from Montreal Alouettes, was put on the injured list to make room for receiver Kerry Smith. Import defensive end Marvin Davis and wide receiver Steve Akroyd were signed to contracts.

"I didn't want to make the changes but I felt they were necessary," Payne said.

Hamilton and Toronto Argonauts are fighting for the final playoff spot in the Eastern Conference. The Tiger-Cats have a one-point edge over Toronto in the standings and meet the Argos next weekend in the final game of the regular schedule.

Sunday's games include British Columbia Lions at Toronto, Saskatchewan Roughriders in Edmonton to play the Eskimos and Calgary in Winnipeg to take on the Blue Bombers.

The Calgary-Winnipeg contest is the first of a home-and home series to end the regular season. A Winnipeg victory Sunday would clinch home field advantage for the Blue Bombers in the Western Conference semi-final game.

But the Rough Riders have problems of their own to contend with. The team has dropped two of its last three games although the win was a 13-10 division title clincher against the Als.

The Riders dropped a 25-5 decision to Hamilton three weeks ago and last weekend lost 20-17 to the western Lions.

To snap them out of their mini-slump coach George Brancato has benched running back Richard Holmes and will start Art Green and Mike Murphy in the backfield.

Saturday's Hamilton at Ottawa game will be telecast on channel 8 at 11 a.m. Sunday's B.C.-Toronto game is on channels 2 and 6 at 11 a.m. with the Saskatchewan-Edmonton contest following on channel 8 at 1:30 p.m.

SKATE CANADA COMPETITION

Confidence Helps

VANCOUVER (CP) — Charles Tickner and Brian Pockar displayed the confidence of seasoned veterans Thursday as several favorites moved to the front in the opening day of the sixth annual Skate Canada competition.

Tickner, of the United States, and the current men's world figure skating champion, and Pockar, the 1978 Canadian champion, turned in steady performances during the compulsory figures for men and were in excellent position heading into tonight's short freestyle program.

Tickner, skating in competition for the first time since capturing the world crown in March, got first-place votes from all seven judges as he compiled 32.80 points for the three figures.

Pockar, of Calgary, put in one of his best efforts in figures and was in third place, slightly behind Scott Hamilton of the U.S.

Claudia Kristofics-Binders of Austria was the leader in the women's singles, but there are several talented free-skaters right behind her, including pre-event favorite Lisa-Marie Allen of the U.S.

The ice-dancing event went as expected with Krisztina Regoczy and Andras Sallay of Hungary, the third-ranked ice-dance pair in the world, moving into the lead after two of the three compulsory dances.

Lorna Wighton and John Dowding, the Canadian champions who are expected to give the Hungarian couple a fight for the gold medal were in second place.

Tickner, a 24-year-old university student, said he was nervous at the start of the competition but got stronger as the figures went on.

Tickner, who plans to remain an amateur at least until the 1980 Winter Olympics in Lake Placid, N.Y., said he felt a bit of pressure competing for the first time as a world champion.

Pockar, who finished 10th at the world championships in Ottawa, was pleased with his figures — where he has shown steady improvement.

Fumio Igarashi of Japan, was fourth heading into the short program after collecting 28.08 points in the figures.

Jim Szabo of Coquitlam was sixth with 27.52 points, just ahead of Vern Taylor of Toronto. Kevin Hicks of Windsor, Ont. was in 11th place.

Kristofics-Binders showed why she is considered one of the top figures skaters in the world, as she piled up 32.72 points and eight ordinals for the lead in the women's singles.

However, the 16-year-old who won the Vienna Cup in September, will be hard pressed to hold that lead with Allen close behind in third spot.

Allen, who finished second in last year's Skate Canada and was seventh at the 1978 world championships, was pleased with her figures mark, but "it could have been better; you can always do a bit better."

LA Goalie Ready After Four Years

By The Canadian Press

Four years ago, Los Angeles Kings' seventh choice in the National Hockey League draft was a goaltender named Mario Lessard.

Los Angeles already had Rogie Vachon and Gary Edwards on their roster, so their new acquisition was dispatched on a tour of the Kings' farm system that might have gone on indefinitely if Vachon had not become a free agent last summer and moved to Detroit.

Suddenly short of goaltenders, the Kings promoted Lessard from Springfield of the American League. The 24-year-old youngster sat on the bench and watched Ron Grahame, the one-time Victoria Cougar who had been acquired from Boston, handle the job for the team's first six games.

Grahame let in 19 goals on a three-game road trip and coach Bob Berry decided to give Lessard a chance Thursday as the Kings returned home to play Buffalo Sabres. His first NHL game was the fulfilment of every rookie's dream, a 6-0 shutout.

Meanwhile in Philadelphia, Bernie Parent was giving an equally unfriendly reception to Toronto Maple Leafs as the Flyers blanked them 5-0. It was shutout No. 52 for the 33-year-old netminder.

The Los Angeles defence, which had given Grahame little protection in an 8-4 loss at Montreal and a 7-2 trouncing at Atlanta, was kinder to Lessard. The Sabres were permitted only 18 shots at the youngster and could not get a single shot away in a two-minute stretch in the second period when the Kings were two men short.

Unable to beat Buffalo in five meetings last season, Los Angeles pumped four goals behind Don Edwards in the first period to sew up the game. Marcel Dionne had a goal and two assists.

At Philadelphia, where general manager Keith Allen had threatened to move out some Flyer veterans in favor of fresh talent from the farm system, the team responded with a solid effort against the Leafs.

Defenceman Behn Wilson, Philadelphia's first pick in last summer's amateur draft, scored the first two Flyer goals on power plays. Veteran Bill Barber had two goals and an assist and even Parent got on the score sheet as he started the play that gave Rick MacLeish a short-handed goal.

The Flyers' victory evened their record at three wins against three losses and two ties and gave them a share of third place in the Patrick Division with New York Islanders, who visit the division-leading Atlanta Flames tonght. Colorado Rockies entertain Detroit Red Wings in the only other game scheduled.

GUY STAYING WITH HABS

MONTREAL (CP) — Guy Lafleur, the National Hockey League scoring champion for the last three seasons, will remain with the Stanley Cup champion Montreal Canadiens for the forseeable future.

Lafleur, and his lawyer Gerry Petrie, apparently came to an agreement with the team on the way to Montreal from Toronto after the Canadiens had played the Maple Leafs to a 4-4 tie in NHL play on Wednesday night.

"Basically, everything was resolved to everyone's satisfaction," said Irving Grundman, managing director of the Canadiens.

"There will be no details given out by us or by Guy and his agent."

On Wednesday, a squabble arose between Lafleur and the team about the remuneration the right wing received for his contributions as a member of the three-time consecutive Stanley Cup-championship team. A story in a Montreal daily said that goaltender Ken Dryden was receiving an annual salary of $325,000, compared with an estimated $185,000 for Lafleur.

The story, along with one in Sports Illustrated magazine last summer which listed Lafleur as one of the most-underpaid athletes in North America in 1978, apparently had pushed the star right wing to push for the best contract on his team.

Lafleur had threatened to boycott play against the Leafs on Wednesday night, and only strong coaxing from his team-mates got Lafleur to board the plane for the Canadiens' game against the Flames in Atlanta last Friday night.

The four-time NHL all-star right-wing in the league's annual classic has had a poor season to date and most expert hockey observers have blamed his poor showing on the contract squabbles with the team.

When the agreement between Lafleur and the club was announced late Thursday, the spokesman for the Canadiens refused to give any details or the duration of the agreement, saying it was not the team's policy in that contracts are a private matter.

Some Good Spots Left In Slow Fishing Scene

Salmon fishing success has generally dropped off around Vancouver Island but the inevitable exceptions are producing some nice returns.

Fishermen working Secretary Island and The Bluffs off Sooke are hauling in winter chinooks to 13 pounds and a few coho to 16 by trolling hootchies, minnows, Wonder spoons and Tom Mack spoons close to the bottom. Drift-fishermen using Stingsildas are also connecting.

Chinooks to 13 pounds and coho to 12 form a fifty-fifty catch at Becher Bay with Church Rock and Bedford Island waters producing the top catches. Trollers are using just about everything at all depths and drift-fishermen use blue pearl Buzz Bombs with good results.

Several limit catches of chinooks to 20 pounds have turned up at Pedder Bay. Best catches were noted by trollers working from 60 to 70 feet in depth between Race Rocks and Church with pure white Squirts or Silver Harvest needlefish.

★ ★ ★

Drift-fishermen casting off the rocks and breakwater at Oak Bay are pulling in chinooks to 20 pounds and a few coho to 12 on both Pirkens and Buzz Bombs. Trollers using bait are scoring along the kelp beds near Trial Island.

Success off Sidney has declined drastically.

Deep Cove fishing was described as "spotty" with a few chinooks to nine pounds showing off Wain Rock, Coal Point and Moses Point. Krippled K's are the top choice for terminal gear.

In the middle part of Saanich Inlet, returns have tapered off slightly but are still rated "good" with chinooks to nine pounds and coho to eight showing between Shephard Point and Bamberton and blues turning up in Indian Bay. Most success was noted on blue and white, purple or green hootchies.

Returns in Finlayson Arm have picked up since the weekend with chinooks to 11 pounds and coho to 10 turning up off the White Lady, Chesterfield Rock and Hatch Point.

Further up-Island, coho and jacks are showing in Sansum Narrows with best returns on the ebb tide and bucktailers are nailing some nice coho to 15 pounds off Willy Island near Chemainus.

Coho fishing is still hot off Nanaimo with for those working the vicinity of Snake or Entrance islands during the last two hours before dusk. Trollers are using minnows, yellow and white flashtails and coronation or yellow and white bucktails. Buzz Bombs and Stingsildas are producing for drift-fishermen.

Similar catches were noted at Deep Bay.

Pill Point and Vernon Bay waters at the mouth of Alberni Inlet are yielding chinooks to eight pounds and a few to 12 pounds are grabbing bucktails in scattered spots off Campbell River.

Trout fishing has been good in a number of the smaller Vancouver Island lakes and sea-run cutthroat trout are starting to show around the mouths of the major salmon spawning streams.

All weekly winners also are eligible to compete in the season-ending Bowler-of-the-Year rolloffs.

Buna's Late Goal Helps Trios to Tie

Dave Buna created a tie that maintained a deadlock in the South Vancouver Island Junior "B" Hockey League.

Buna connected on a long looping shot at 17:52 of the third period Thursday night to give Oak Bay Trios a 5-5 tie with Fuller Lake Flyers at Oak Bay Recreation Centre.

The two teams are still tied with 5-2-1 records, three points behind leading Saanich Braves and one ahead of Esquimalt Legion Blues.

John Brown (2), Brad Pettinger and Rick Schievink connected for the other Oak Bay goals and Brian Brantjag (2), Ken Bell, Don Bodger and Keith Mazerenko countered for Flyers.

Shupe Plans Changes

Coach Jack Shupe will be doing a little line-juggling tonight while the Victoria Cougars visit Portland for a Western Hockey League game against the Winter Hawks.

Shupe announced Thursday that captain Geordie Robertson, suffering from a bruised tendon in his knee, will definitely miss the three-games-in-three-nights stint starting tonight and may not be ready to play until the Nov. 4-5 series against Seattle Breakers.

Cougars return home to face the Hawks again Saturday night at 8:30 in Memorial Arena and then travel to New Westminster to play the Bruins on Sunday.

"Geordie's out and it's about time the rest of our holdovers took up the slack," Shupe exclaimed.

"There may be some disappointed players but that's the way it has to be until we start scoring more goals."

Part of the problem has been an inability to connect on shots. Cougars scored only twice in 77 shots during their last game — a 5-2 loss to Billings Bighorns.

"We've been getting enough shots in the last few games but we're not getting the second and third chances at a goal and that's where we miss Geordie," added Shupe.

Sharpe Tops Battle Royal

Mike Sharpe emerged the winner of a nine-man, over-the-top-rope battle royal which formed the feature bout of a professional wrestling card Thursday night at Memorial Arena.

In other bouts, Jake Roberts beat The Outlaw on a disqualification, Sandor Novack outgrappled Ron Richie, Eric Froelich tripped The Alaskan on a disqualification, Goldie Rogers and Ed Moretti battled to a draw and Sharpe and Ivan Crncovic were both disqualified.

Monza's Future Still Not Settled

PARIS (Reuter) — Officials of the International Sporting Commission (CSI), motor sports ruling body, expressed surprise at a statement released earlier Thursday in London that Monza, site of last month's Italian Grand Prix, had been struck off next year's Formula One calendar.

The CSI's special committee investigating the opening-lap crash in the 1978 Italian Grand Prix that resulted in the death of Swedish driver Ronnie Peterson met here Thursday but reached no conclusions. A CSI spokesman said there would be other meetings and their decisions would be submitted to the CSI executive committee.

The London statement, issued by Bernie Ecclestone, president of the Formula One Constructors' Association, said the association and the Automobile Club of Bologna, Italy, agreed the Italian Grand Prix would be held on the Imola circuit the next three years.

However, the CSI said the Bologna club and constructors' association were not empowered to select a circuit. It was up to the Italian Automobile Club and its sporting commission to make a proposal to the international sporting commission which would make that decision, the CSI said.

The CSI added that so far as the Imola circuit has not been approved as a venue for Grand Prix events.

Dodgers Sign Veteran Hitter

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Pinch-hitting specialist Manny Mota has signed a one-year contract with Los Angeles Dodgers.

Mota, 39, a 17-year baseball veteran, has spent the last nine seasons with the Dodger. Mota is the second-leading major league pinch-hitter of all time with 132 hits. The record of 144 is held by Smokey Burgess.

Extra Joys For Off-Season Cruisers

AROUND OUR SHORES

Cruising at this time of year, providing you dress warmly, offers all kinds of bonanzas, not the least of which is an abundance of space in marinas that are chock-full all during the summer season.

Stopping overnight at Maple Bay Marina on the weekend, we also received an extra bonus in the form of the makings for a shrimp newburg feast.

Local fisherman Bob Harman had come in the day before and cooked his catch of shrimp in the stern of his fishboat Jacylyn VI. Marina operator John Bentzen is right when he says Bob is a master chef when it comes to cooking shrimp.

There was quite a queue of boaters lining up to buy some of Bob's catch as he brought it ashore.

Bob says he'll be fishing right up until Christmas Day so if you're up that way and fancy a taste treat keep an eye out for him.

The marina, one of the most popular on Vancouver Island, went into receivership in 1976 but in spite of its financial problems is still one of the best operations around.

The Royal Victoria Yacht Club, the longest-established sailing fraternity in this area, will hold its 87th annual general meeting at 8 p.m. Thursday in the Ripon Road clubhouse.

Thirty-seven boats with Pacific Handicap Racing Fleet ratings took part in the club's invitational 14-mile race on Sunday for the Whitehouse Trophy. The race, sailed in light northwesterlies, was won by Jack Woodward's Puff II. After her came Jan Olsen's Discretion, Jan Huibers' Sea Spell, Dan Syroid's Opo, George Cesarec's Galeb, Gerry Porter's Sunshine 12, Dick Readshaw's Massilia II, Trevor Hayward's Merry, Colin Crisp's Raven and Michael Balderston's Menox.

★ ★ ★

Gerry Howell-Jones' Sian was the over-all winner of International Offshore Rule boats sailing the same course in competition for the Lipton Cup. After her came Greg Oliver's The Distant Drummer, Steve Merriman's Country Style, Hugh Porter's Errigal and Murray Farmer's Seeker.

Many of the boats that raced Sunday will be out again this week to take part in the Turkey Head Sailing Association's two around-the-buoy races, to be held in waters off Oak Bay Marina on Sunday at 10 a.m. and 1:30 p.m.

★ ★ ★

RVYC dinghy sailors will have series racing again on Saturday at Cadboro Bay, the first race getting under way at 1:30 p.m. The Catalina 27 fleet also has a race scheduled for Saturday. Start time is 11 a.m.

★ ★ ★

The Esquimalt Squadron, Canadian Forces Sailing Association, will be racing out of Esquimalt Harbor on Sunday. The squadron's cruising class boats will be competing for the Gillard Trophy while the squadron's Sailerette crews will be out to win the Seddon Trophy. There will also be series racing for dinghy sailors, beginning at 1 p.m.

★ ★ ★

The Canoe Bay Sailing Club will have another 7½-miler in waters off Sidney on Sunday, beginning in the vicinity of the government wharf at 10 a.m.

Fifty boats turned out for Saturday's six-miler, which was won by Jim Morris' Madeline. Jim and his crew had an extra reason for celebrating because club member Barrie Camp had provided a bottle of rum so that the winners could suitably mark Trafalgar Day with a tot of Nelson's Blood.

Finishing after Madeline were Charlie Afford's Reefer, Larry Mofford's Main Brace, Holger Brix's Caliente, Gordie Inglis' Water Mellon, Bill Martin's Georgia Girl, Bill Hingley's Quintango, Steve Meredith's Solution, Daryl Foster's Tzonqua and Cam Thomson's Cal-Lorri.

SHORT TACKS — If you're a shorewatcher and are out on a drive on Sunday it would be well worth your while to take a look at Elk Lake . . . The rapidly growing Hobie Cat fleet will be holding two races there, following a skippers' meeting at 10:30 a.m. . . These colorful craft, even if you're not a sailor, can provide some pretty spectacular sightseeing.

U.S. Riders Dominate At Washington Show

LANDOVER, Md. (AP) — The gelding Tuscaloosa and the rider Dennis Murphy of the United States Thursday combined for their second victory in international open jumper competition at the Washington International Horse Show when they captured the Dwight D. Eisenhower competition.

Jumping last among six entries who advanced to a jumpoff, Tuscaloosa went faultlessly over 10 obstacles in the fastest time, 32.3 seconds.

The ride bumped Bulbuco, ridden by Conrad Homfeld of Houston, into second place after negotiating the course in 35.8 seconds.

Finishing third, also with a faultless ride and in 37.6 seconds, was Eden Vale of Canada, ridden by Terrance Millar, Milton, Ont.

The U.S. has a commanding lead (67-21) over Canada, Ireland (17) and Belgium (6) in the eight-day show which will winds up Sunday.

Simpson, riding Texas, and Terry Leibel of Toronto on Merchant of Venice were in a nine-way tie for seventh place in the Eisenhower event.

Course Alien But Not Tough

PENSACOLA, Fla. (AP) — "I'd like to know this golf course better," said Mac McLendon after shooting a seven-under-par 65 for the first-round lead in the Pensacola Open, the final event on the 1978 PGA tour.

He was serious since his first tour of the 7,133-yard Perdido Bay course was Wednesday, when he played in a pro-am preceding the 72-hole event.

I wasn't really sure where some of the bunkers were when I started," said McLendon. "I was playing probably the best golf I can remember for the first 15 holes."

Racing Secretary

TORONTO (CP) — Lou Cavalaris, one of the top trainers in Canada, has been appointed racing secretary for the Ontario Jockey Club's thoroughbred division and will assume his duties Jan. 1.

TEST AT ST. GEORGE'S

TORONTO (CP) — The 1980 Peter Jackson Classic, lone Canadian stop on the Ladies Professional Golf Association tour, will be held at St. George's Golf and Country.

"I didn't know I'd be in the tournament after shooting a 73 in the qualifying round Monday and ending as an alternate," Nielsen said. "I'm just coming back after pulling a back muscle last month. It's healed now and I hit more good shots than in a long time."

Randy Erskine, 30, on the verge of giving up the tour, shot a 67, along with Alan Tapie, who is having his best year on the tour, and Jim King.

The field got crowded after that. In all, 79 of the 150 starters shot par or better.

Canada Tennis Hopes 'No Worse Than Even'

Times News Services

Canada's chances in the opening round of the 1979 Davis Cup championship starting today in Mexico have increased dramatically with the announcement Thursday that world-ranked Raul Ramirez will not participate in singles matches.

Ramirez, currently one of the top 10 players in the world, has been suffering from the flu and unable to practise with the Mexican team, Terry McNally, executive director of Tennis Canada, has reported.

"The edge may have swung to the Canadians and they have no worse than an even chance," he said.

McNally said Ramirez now is ineligible for all singles matches but can play in Saturday's doubles if he recovers in time.

Rejean Genois of Quebec City and Greg Halder of Toronto will face Marcelo Lara and Emilio Montano of Mexico in singles matches.

Both Canada and Mexico received first round byes in the North American zone.

Meanwhile, in Tokyo, Yugoslavian-born Zeljko Franulovic, the No.7 seed, upset top-seeded Eddie Dibbs of the United States 6-3, 6-3 in the quarter-finals of the Fred Perry Open tournament.

Franulovic, who won the 1977 Munich Grand Prix tournament, will meet American Pat Dupre in the semi-finals.

Second-seeded Buster Mottram of Britain beat No.8 seed Nick Saviano of the United States 6-1, 6-2.

In Basel, Switzerland Rolf Gehring of West Germany, Victor Amaya of the United States and South Africa's Ray Moore moved into the quarter-finals of the $75,000 Swiss Indoor tennis championships.

The 22-year old Gehring provided the major upset of the second round when he ousted sixth-seeded Vijay Amritraj of India, 3-6, 6-1, 7-5.

Amaya, No. 5, turned back Italy's Gianni Ocleppo, 6-1, 6-2, while Moore overcame Ismael El Shafei of Egypt, 3-6, 6-4, 7-6.

In Stuttgart, West Germany Second-seeded Betty Stove of the Netherlands eliminated Sharon Walsh of the United States 6-3, 6-4 and reached the quarter-finals of the $35,000 Stuttgart Grand Prix tennis tournament.

Soviet Women Keep Crown

STRASBOURG, France (AP) — The Soviet Union retained its women's team medal at the world gymnastics championship Thursday, reaffirming its domination of the event.

The Soviet Union women scored 388.95 points, edging the Romanian team—including triple Olympic gold medalist Nadia Comaneci—which placed second with 384.25 points.

The Soviet Union women have only once lost the team crown since 1952—to Czechoslovakia in 1966.

Comaneci, 16, earned scores of 9.60, 9.70, 9.80 and 9.90 in Thursday's optional exercises—too little to bridge the near two-point margin held by the powerful Soviet Union squad after Tuesday's compulsory exercises.

The Soviet Union and Romanian girls performed simultaneously at opposite ends of Strasbourg's Rhenus Hall and the Soviet Union, led by Elena Mukhina and Natalia Shaposhnikova, drew consistently higher scores.

Mukhina, the reigning European champion, scored the highest individual total in the team event with 78.25 points. Nadia was in second place with 77.95. Shaposhnikova at first was placed third, but the judges improved her rating following a Soviet protest, leaving her tied in second place with the Romanian girl.

But Nadia was still the public's darling, drawing most of the cheers. As she approached her second exercise, the beam, the three other performing teams stopped their own exercises. Only the clicks of cameras could be heard while the Romanian girl mounted the four-inch-wide beam.

She performed beautifully, and then returned directly to her seat in a tumult of applause. A 9.90 score flashed on the screen, not quite the two perfect marks of 10 she achieved in the same event in the Montreal Olympics.

Tension mounted minutes later, after Nadia performed a fancy though unambitious floor exercise. The announcer said there was too large a difference among the judges' scores.

After a quick meeting, while the 8,000-strong crowd pounded its feet, the judges returned with their decision—a 9.60 score, Nadia's lowest of the day.

The Canadian women's team finished in eighth place with a total of 369.9 points.

The six Canadian girls scored a total of 185.5 in the optional exercises—vault, uneven bars, beam and floor exercises.

Elfi Schlegel of Toronto had the top mark among the Canadians with a score of 9.65 on the balance beam. The Commonwealth Games gold medalist said afterward: "I was a little bit cautious in that event but I thought I did all right."

Both Schlegel and Kelsall and Sherry Hawco of Cambridge, Ont., will advance to Saturday's finals.

Scores of the Canadians in Thursday's optionals: Diana Carnegie, Toronto, 36.40; Carmen Alie, Montreal, 36.35; Monica Goermann, Winnipeg, 36.65; Schlegel, 37.70; Hawco, 36.75; Kelsall, 37.30.

Please Don't Assume

OTTAWA (CP) — Sport Minister Iona Campagnolo said Thursday Vancouver and the British Columbia government should not assume federal assistance is available to finance a bid for the 1987 Pan-American Games.

Campagnolo told Art Lee (LI-Vancouver East) in the Commons she has not been advised of the bid nor has she had any request for federal aid. Lee was referring to published reports saying that the bid will be made and federal lottery revenues can be used to finance construction of necessary facilities.

Campagnolo said it would be impossible to use the federal lottery revenues until after December, 1979, when a new formula will be applied.

At present Quebec receives 82.5 per cent of Loto Canada revenues to help defray the Olympic debt, the other provinces receive 12.5 per cent and the federal share is about five per cent.

UVIC CROSS-COUNTRY RUNNERS HEADING FOR CALGARY

Seven men and four women will represent the University of Victoria at the Canada West University Athletic Association cross-country championships Saturday in Calgary.

Jon Smith, described by track coach Ron Bowker as "an exciting new star in distance running," and Randy Cox, who captured the 8,000-metre event in the British Columbia championship meet last weekend in Vancouver, head the men's contingent. Others on the men's team are Bob Noble, Sean Cochlan, Ron Trent, Doug Goodwin and Al Niezen.

Debbie Scott, who hasn't lost to a Canadian distance runner since 1976, is rated the top choice among the women's contingent, which is rounded out by Debbie Campbell, Anita Sobon and Laura Keziere.

"This is a young team," said Bowker, "but they are hard workers and I feel sure they will give a good account of themselves."

Target: Clean Water For the Youngsters

elizabeth forbes

Through programs of the United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF), the people of developing countries are given opportunities to solve their own problems and to become self-reliant.

As far as possible the programs are designed to show these countries how to use their own resources and to accept projects they can develop and maintain.

That, in brief, is the way it was explained by Joanna Miller, national president of UNICEF of Canada, when she was in Victoria on Monday.

Clean water for children in developing countries is a high priority with UNICEF, she said, as well as good nutrition and basic health and education programs "that will help these young people develop skills to meet living conditions in their own communities when they reach adult years."

Work of UNICEF in Canada is done by 35,000 volunteers across the country, she explained.

Mrs. Miller herself is a volunteer and part of her work as national president is to visit every province during her term of office, to encourage all those other willing workers and to help in publicizing fund drives.

When she was here it was the forthcoming Halloween door-to-door appeal, manned by volunteer school children, that she wished to talk about.

"Last Halloween more than a million children went the rounds in Canada and they came in with $1¼ million," she said.

Then she expressed confidence that this will be topped on Oct. 31.

The amount received in the annual Halloween effort (and in the annual sale of special Christmas cards) is "tremendously important to UNICEF of Canada," Mrs. Miller said.

"The total amount is matched, dollar for dollar, by the federal government, through CIDA (Canadian International Development Agency)."

She added that figures from international headquarters at the United Nations in New York show that last year Canada, one of 30 nations represented on the governing board, was third highest contributor to the UNICEF children's fund budget.

Going back to projects sponsored by UNICEF in developing countries, Mrs. Miller explained procedures that go with implementation of any such plan.

Taking health care as an example, she said, "if a country came to us with such a problem UNICEF would immediately consult with the United Nations World Health Organization (WHO) on the best ways to overcome the problem."

With a plan worked out to the smallest detail UNICEF would assume the responsibility of finding out what part the country concerned was prepared to assume in the project.

"In the case of health care, this might include providing a place in a particular village where young people could be trained as para-medics and nurse-midwives.

"The villagers might build and man such a place and find the young people to be trained."

Joanna Miller has a challenge

UNICEF's role would then be to provide teachers, either from those available in the area or by sending in qualified people, assume the expense of these teachers during the training period and to provide basic medical supplies to start clinics manned by the young people after they were trained.

For its part the developing country concerned would have to make a firm commitment to give continuing support to the project, once it was established, and to see that it was carried on.

"It's interesting to note," Mrs. Miller said, "that this sort of basic health service with simple, workable clinics, staffed by trained young people, could deal with over 80 per cent of the illnesses that attack children of the Third World."

Realizing this, UNICEF and WHO have set a goal — clean water for children of developing countries by 1990 and health care for all children of the Third World by the year 2000.

Born in Vancouver, she lived as a youngster at Wilson Creek near Sechelt on the Sunshine Coast.

When she was 14 the family moved to North Vancouver where she graduated from high school before going on to the University of British Columbia for her BA degree in 1948.

She taught school at Powell River before marriage to Leonard Miller and a move with him to live in the United States.

Twelve years later they came back to Canada and to Saskatoon where Miller is now head of the philosophy department at the University of Saskatchewan.

It was in 1963, in Saskatoon, that Mrs. Miller joined UNICEF as a volunteer.

Gradually "and quite willingly" as she puts it, she became more involved until earlier this year she was elected to the position she now holds.

More Boycotts Predicted

By JOSEPH ST. AMANT

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — David Horowitz, a consumerism specialist with a television audience of millions, blames big business, schools and consumers themselves for many complaints about goods and services.

Horowitz predicted there will be more unofficial boycotts such as brought down the price of beef, sugar and coffee at the retail level because of a relatively new consumer awareness.

At 41, a veteran newsman in the print and electronic media, Horowitz does not want to be labeled a consumer advocate or a follower of Ralph Nader. He prefers the term consumer ombudsman because he said he is not out to get big business but wants to improve goods and service through education.

To the consumer he says: Read the fine print in your sales and services contracts.

To educators he says: Teach the kids in school something about business in basic math classes — what a mortgage is, how a home is purchased, something about credit ratings and installment plans.

"A consumer ombudsman differs from an advocate," he said. "When a consumer is wrong, I tell him he's wrong. An advocate, on the other hand, pleads the case of the consumer. What I've been able to do is to go out and fight for the people who can't get problems resolved for themselves."

Horowitz gets 15,000-20,000 complaints a week from TV viewers. In many cases, he must tell them they haven't read the fine print on their installment buying contracts or insurance policies and he can do nothing. If he uncovers a legitimate beef he goes after the seller.

His half-hour show "Consumer Buyline" is syndicated by NBC and goes to about 50 TV outlets in the U.S., "all the big cities" — New York, Cleveland, Chicago, Madison, Wis., Portland, Ore., Seattle and of course at his home base in Los Angeles.

With a flair for showmanship, he tests commercials on his show with audience participation. Some advertisers have pressured him to lay off but he has a free hand as far as NBC is concerned, he said.

He faults the business community for not handling many consumer complaints and for not having a consumer affairs department to handle them.

He said most big companies are guilty of "indifference, apathy and ignorance" in dealing with consumer complaints.

A History of Craftsmanship

The Vilas Furniture Company is situated in Quebec's Eastern Townships, in the heart of country colonized by United Empire Loyalists from New England. These colonists came to Quebec as early as 1782, bringing with them a tradition of furniture-making based on fine workmanship and simplicity of design. They created a style of furniture that was informal in the best sense of the word... a style as warm and welcoming in today's homes as it was in the settler's homes of the 18th century.

DEAR ABBY: I am 24 and Larry is 29, and here is my story: We moved in with Larry's parents right after we got married. ("Only until we find a place of our own," he promised.) Well, it's been five years, and here I sit with two lovely children and a closet full of unused wedding presents.

My in-laws are very nice, and some people think I've got it easy with Larry's mother to do all the cooking, and a built-in babysitter for the kids, but I'm miserable. Larry's mother has her own way of doing things, and I help her as much as she lets me, but it's still her house, not mine.

Every time the subject of moving comes up, Larry's father says, "Why move and pay rent when you can live here for free? We have plenty of room." (It's true, but I would rather have a place of my own.) Larry has a good job and we can afford it.

The children are getting spoiled by their grandparents, and I'm getting fed up. Please help me.

TRAPPED

DEAR TRAPPED: Face it, your husband is reluctant to give up the comfort and security provided by his parents. But if you don't insist that he cut the cord and leave the nest, you will be living with them indefinitely. Start a campaign now for your independence. (A suggested slogan: "A place to call mine in '79!)

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I recently visited some out-of-town friends we hadn't seen in years. We wanted to stay at a motel but they wouldn't hear of it, so we ended up staying with them, which was a big mistake.

During our visit our hostess spent half her time doing housework and cleaning up. After every meal, out came the vacuum cleaner! She was constantly mopping, scrubbing or polishing. As soon as my husband dropped one ash in the ashtray, she'd grab it and clean it. She ran around with a mop or a dust cloth in her hand all the time we were there.

I realize that cleanliness is next to Godliness, but she wore us out just watching her clean up.

Her fussiness spoiled my vacation. Are such actions normal?

DIRTY DELORES

DEAR DELORES: No. Your hostess sounds like a compulsive cleaner-upper. Although she may be a meticulous housekeeper, that's not what hospitality is all about. Hospitality is the art of making one's guests feel genuinely comfortable.

DEAR ABBY: By looking at me you wouldn't think I had a problem in the world. I'm middle-aged, attractive and married to a beautiful guy (my age). He's handsome, good-natured and generous. We're both healthy, young at heart, and love a good time. We take fabulous vacations (Hawaii, Switzerland, cruises) and we get along great. I really love the guy and he loves me.

The problem: On weekends he takes me to dinner and then to a club for dancing. We both love to dance, but as soon as we get there he starts looking around for women without escorts. The pretty ones he asks to dance. (He says he feels sorry for them.)

Should I let him dance to his heart's content while I sit alone? Or should I give him a taste of his own medicine and pick up the stag men to dance with?

HUMILIATED

DEAR HUMILIATED: Don't pick up any stags to dance with or that will be the beginning of the end. Tell your "generous, good-natured" guy that charity begins at home. And let him know you mean business!

FOLD YOURSELF A DRINK

Anyone who spends a lot of time outdoors knows that the uses for a water receptacle can be as many and varied as the lack of such a container can be infuriating.

It's good, then, to know that a quick and temporarily serviceable paper cup can be whipped up from an ordinary 8- to 9-inch square of paper in just a few seconds.

Just (a) fold corner A over to the opposite corner as shown in the diagram, then (b) bend corner B to the position shown in step three in the diagram. Finally, (c) fold corner C to the position shown in step four, (d) turn down points D and E on opposite sides, and (e) spread the upper edges and your cup is completed.

Humble Frankfurter Needs Some Changes

BALTIMORE (UPI) — The shape of the hot dog, which allows the frankfurter to become lodged in someone's windpipe, is dangerous and should be changed, an associate professor at Johns Hopkins School of Public Health says.

Susan Baker called on hot dog producers to come up with a new shape for the frankfurter to prevent children from choking to death.

Mrs. Baker recommended such possible solutions as putting a hole down the frankfurter's centre, which would minimize the danger of asphyxiation by allowing the passage of air if a bite should become lodged in child's windpipe.

"I don't want to come off as critical of the hot dog industry, but I'd like to challenge the manufacturers to come up with a hot dog which, without being different from the traditional, beloved hot dog, might be less likely to asphyxiate children," she said.

Six of eight Maryland youngsters under 5 years old who choked to death on food between 1970 and 1977 died because of hot dogs, she said.

"Hot dogs are wonderful for the parent," said Mrs. Baker, who is also a researcher in the medical examiner's office. "It's a food that can be easily held by the infant. But each bite is going to be round and, if it isn't chewed thoroughly and the child inhales suddenly, it can be drawn into the windpipe."

DEAR MR. VICHERT: I am an 18-year-old guy. My problem is my parents. I know from my dad that my mom is going to move out soon and that they haven't talked to each other in over nine weeks.

Right now I have no girlfriends but I'm really getting desperate for one. Last week, I met a girl at school. I like her a lot and her parents are really nice too. Is it possible I'm trying to find happiness and love through girls? What can I do about my parents?

ANSWER: Of course it is possible that you are trying to find love and happiness through a girl. Hopefully you will meet a girl, fall in love, be happy together.

Not all relationships between men and women end up with as many problems as those your parents are having.

It does sound as if they are trying to solve their problems in a rather immature way and it is not working. However, they probably would not welcome any suggestion of counselling help. They will have to work it out themselves.

Your parents may have made mistakes in their relationship and with each other. It's to be hoped you have learned a lot that will help you form a relationship with a girl that will be loving and happy.

★ ★ ★

DEAR DR. COTTER: I am a Christian boy, 15 years old. While watching a religious show on TV I heard a man talk about "seeing God after death." He said people can go to Hell (Purgatory, he called it) and still have everlasting life in heaven. After you had been cleaned in Hell, he said, you could go to heaven because you had paid for your sins.

I never heard of anything like this. I always thought that once you had gone to Hell you were there forever. Please elaborate or clear this up for me — maybe I missed some of the show.

ANSWER: I am not sure that I can clear the matter up entirely without giving you a conducted tour of the places involved.

Some Christians have been aware of the mercy of god and, unwilling to believe that He would let souls suffer in Hell forever, they have also sensed that most persons who die are not ready to be in God's presence. So their imagination has provided a middle state in which the personality could grow towards God.

It is Christian teaching, however, that no one can pay for our sins but Jesus Christ, and that He did this on the Cross. In fact we do not have any knowledge of what becomes of souls after death. We have the faith that those who have loved God can continue to do so, and that they will take part in the Resurrection which began with Jesus. "Hell" and "Heaven" are used as images to describe life away from, and with, God.

DEAR DR. POWELL: I would like to know where I could go to obtain birth control pills without going to my doctor. I would like these pills just in case anything happens that shouldn't happen.

ANSWER: Birth control pills must be prescribed by a doctor so you will have to see a doctor somewhere. If you do not want to go to your family doctor, there are doctors who work in birth control clinics. Before starting the Pill the doctor at the clinic will want to talk to you and examine you to make sure you are healthy.

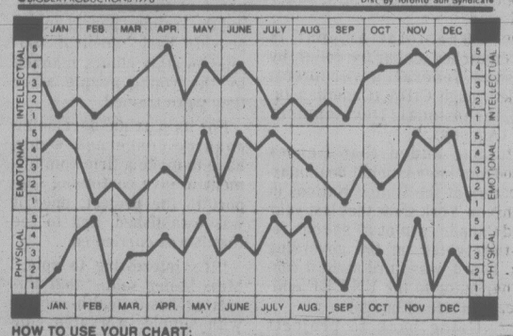

Your letter sounds as if you are not having intercourse but are worried that it might happen. I would suggest you and your boyfriend go to the clinic and talk about your relationship and why you want to start taking the pill.

There are counsellors in birth control clinics so discuss these feelings with the person whom you see at the clinic.

Bio-dex

Oct. 28/78 — By Ken J. Michaels — Your computerized biorhythm

HOW TO USE YOUR CHART:

BIO-DEX READOUT:

0-5 Negative Cycle- You may have been neglecting your home. Don't look for comfort when you have failed to earn it.

6-10 Neutral Cycle- An investment in gold, land or stocks may protect you from inflation, but doublecheck the figures.

11-15 Positive Cycle- This could be a special Saturday night! Look around you for the friendly smile that could change your life.

In many parts of the country this is the hunting season, and guns of all shapes and sizes are being cleaned and polished. Always remember that a gun is designed to kill, and it's up to you to point it the right way. A low Bio-dex level and a loaded gun could spell death to an innocent bystander and a lifetime of remorse for you. Think twice before you point the gun, and again before pressing the trigger.

Inns Are Good Places To Learn About Japan

One of the most rewarding experiences of travelling is getting the chance to experience life as it is lived in the country you are visiting. Japan offers a young visitor plenty of opportunities to do that, as I learned a couple of years back when I stayed in Japanese inns and in a monastery.

In an authentic Japanese inn, you are expected to live as the Japanese do. It's customary to sleep on a mattress on the floor with a corn husk pillow. That may sound uncomfortable but it's no more so than tenting in Canada — and a lot warmer. Tradition also includes the removal of your shoes before you enter an inn.

One of the traditions of authentic inns is the real Japanese bath. In the western-style hotels you get the usual bath or shower but in an inn you will find yourself in a tub resembling those of ancient Rome and built to handle from four to 40 people at once.

We discovered that by leaving the bottle in the bottom of the bath we could bring it to just the right temperature.

Although some of the public baths in Tokyo are not segregated, you'll find that in most inns there are men's and women's — or separate hours.

To stay in an inn, contact the Tourist Information Centres (TIC) when you arrive. They are staffed with English-speaking personnel and their service is free. Although making reservations is not an official TIC service, it is prepared to find out whether any particular lodging has vacancies and will help visitors make reservations.

These tourist centres also have a listing available of budget accommodations. In Tokyo try the ground floor, Kotani Building, 1-chome, Yurakucho, Chiyoda-Ku (tel 502-1461) or the International Arrivals Building, Tokyo International Airport (tel 747-0262). In Kyoto the ground floor, Kyoto Tower Building Higashi-Shiokojicho, Shimogyo-ku (tel 371-0480).

Monastries also open their doors to the traveller. The best way to find out about accommodation in them is to approach local tourist offices when you arrive. The best opportunities are usually in the Kyoto area.

Japanese "business" hotels are another way around the notoriously high rates charged in big-city Japan. These hotels are for the Japanese version of the travelling salesman. They're not fancy but simple and efficient, and usually located near the train or subway stations.

The Japanese are the greatest givers of gifts I have ever met. If you visit a family, a small, typically Canadian item would be a nice gesture. I also found in restaurants where the staff insisted that they would not accept tips, a Canadian coin as a gift for good service was accepted and appreciated.

Toe Work Helps Leg Cramps

Dr. L. L. COLEMAN

I am health chairperson for our Extension Club. We have been using your health columns as part of our monthly report. In our age group there seems to be many women who have painful spasms in the lower part of the leg. I would appreciate some enlightenment on this ailment so I can report to the group. — Mrs. D.A.

DEAR MRS. A:

It is, of course, flattering that you use my columns in your health discussion groups.

Many people are awakened at one time or another from a deep sleep by a sudden painful cramp in the leg. Other people will develop these spasms while walking. Cramps are caused by narowing or spasm of the arteries that bring nourishing blood and oxygen to the muscles of the legs.

In the elderly, arteriosclerosis is one of the major cause that impairs the normal flow of blood. There are some simple causes, too. Bed sheets that are too tightly bound down, tight garters that restrict circulation, and even improperly fitted shoes can cause these cramps.

When you are awakened by a painful cramp, don't slap, kick or bruise that painful leg. It has troubles of its own without that old wives' remedy.

The drug, quinine, has been used by some doctors to prevent the frequent repetition of in-bed cramps.

Try this method. I know it works for me. When you get a severe cramp, keep the leg immobile. Then point the toes back as hard as you can in the direction of your head, until the spasm disappears.

Is cirrhosis of the liver always a fatal disease? — Mr. J.T.

DEAR MR. T.:

There are many different types of cirrhosis of the liver. It is a mistaken notion that cirrhosis and alcoholism are an inseparable pair. They can be related, but there are other causes for cirrhosis.

There are now a great many highly sensitive tests and enzyme studies which bring early cirrhosis to the diagnostic attention of the doctor. When it is suspected and treated immediately, its causes eliminated, people in the early stages of cirrhosis can be expected to live out their normal span of years.

However, if cirrhosis is left untreated and its cause not eliminated, there comes a time when the liver disease may be irreversible.

The liver is a remarkable organ and a complex chemical factory. Despite cirrhotic changes, the liver can often function well and compensate for mild case of cirrhosis.

Dash salt
Dash pepper
½ teaspoon curry powder
½ cup olive or corn oil
2 teaspoons white vinegar

More Eating Fish

TORONTO (CP) — Canadians are consuming more fish, according to recent statistics, but the federal government would like them to eat even more.

As a result, the federal department of fisheries and Environment Canada have designated November as Canadian Fish and Seafood Month.

Besides being nutritious, fish meals may be cheaper than meat. Economists with the fisheries department suggest that consumers should take a harder look at frozen fish counters in their local supermarkets, because the variety of both domestic and imported fish products has increased.

If the product has been kept in storage too long, or stored at too high a temperature, it loses quality.

The economists say that freezing can hold in the good quality of a fishery product for an extended period but it can't improve it.

"Our best frozen-fish processors package their products tightly with moisture and vapor-proof wrappings, leaving little or no air space between the product and the wrappings," a department spokesman said. "But despite their efforts, moisture can escape."

Moisture and quality are lost when a product is thawed and then refrozen.

The presence of frost or ice crystals inside a package or bag is evidence that thawing has occurred.

When shopping, pick up the fish product just before going to the check-out counter. Take it directly home and store it in your freezer until you are ready to prepare it.

Brezhnev Unable To Bargain?

LONDON (AP) — The health of Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev has become so uncertain that Western observers believe he is no longer capable of serious negotiations, The Times reports.

The newspaper says this is one reason final stages of the Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty (SALT) talks between the Soviet Union and the United States are proving difficult. Correspondent Charles Douglas-Home wrote: "The Americans recognize that, while the Soviet leader is still able to stick closely to a brief, if the brief is on the table in front of him, he is virtually unable now to deviate from it, or show any spontaneous flexibility."

BREZHNEV
. . . failing health

Brezhnev's health has been the subject of speculation in the West for several months. Douglas-Home wrote that Brezhnev "has considerable difficulty with his speech and there are apparently symptoms of some cardiovascular weakness as well." He said Western observers seem confident the Soviet leader is not suffering from cancer.

Douglas-Home said any proposed summit meeting between Brezhnev and President Carter — which has been indirectly suggested by the Soviet side — would be little more than a formality, with nothing left to chance.

"In each stage of the SALT negotiations on the Soviet side it seems to be Mr. Gromyko who shoulders most of the burden alone, and then has to report back to Mr. Brezhnev stage by stage," wrote Douglas-Home.

The article said Western specialists in Soviet affairs do not expect Brezhnev's illness to have a very disruptive effect on the Soviet policy-making machine, at least in the short term. Although some inertia may be apparent with those decisions which need the highest endorsement, the men around Brezhnev appear content to let things stay, said Douglas-Home.

He added:

"One senior Western observer expects this situation to continue for at least two years, provided Mr. Brezhnev stays alive and well enough to make occasional public appearances."

CHEAP INSURANCE FOR SMOKE QUITTERS

NEW YORK (UPI) — Persons who have kicked the cigarette habit for more than a year will be able to buy the least costly type of life insurance at premium cuts as high as 12.5 per cent, the Manhattan Life Insurance Company announced Thursday.

The non-smoking discount on a $100,000 face amount annual renewable term policy for a male, 35, would cut $25 off a premium of $248. For a male 55, the same face value policy would cost $1,087 — with a $126 discount.

Within the last four years, Manhattan Life and 25 others among 1,800 insurance firms have given nonsmoker discounts on premiums for whole life or permanent insurance, much costlier than renewable term.

"It is time to stop penalizing nonsmokers for the shorter life expectancy of cigarette smokers," said Donald M. Fordyce, chairman of Manhattan Life.

Persons who smoke pipes or cigars have been getting the lower rates all along, he said.

Actuaries for the firm developed the discounts on renewable term policies after studying mortality data showing a greater life expectancy for a person who does not smoke cigarettes than a person who does.

Fordyce said a man of 25, for example, who smokes two packs of cigarettes per day can expect to live, on average, another 40 years or until he is 65. A nonsmoker of 25, on the other hand, has a life expectancy to age 73.

To be eligible for the nonsmoker's discount the only requirement is that an applicant must report he has not smoked cigaretes for at least a year.

What about persons who fib?

"By state law we have two years to make a confidential check of any applicant to verify statements about personal life and living and work styles," he said.

Celebrity Ghosts

AYLESBURY, England (CP) — Two celebrated ghosts are said to haunt the rooms and corridors of stately Claydon House, set amid the rolling hills and downs of rural Buckinghamshire.

Sir Edmund Verney, standard bearer for King Charles I during the civil war, was killed at the Battle of Edgehill. All that was found of him was his severed hand, still clutching the royal standard. His ghost has been reported to have appeared at Claydon House, the Verneys' ancestral home.

Florence Nightingale, the founder of modern nursing, stayed so often at the house that she had her own room there and visitors have reported seeing her likeness.

Sir Edmund Verney's descendant, Sir Harry Verney, married Parthenope Nightingale, the sister of Florence. Both sisters were courted by Sir Harry — but Florence was married to her profession.

"One of our visitors last April was a clairvoyant who said she saw Florence standing by the window of her room," said one of the staff at Claydon House. "She described her as wearing the old-fashioned nurse's uniform with a white bonnet tied under the chin. The ghost turned and looked at the visitor but did not speak."

Sir Edmund's ghost is said to have been seen in various parts of Claydon House, wearing the uniform of a royal standard bearer.

North Pacific Fisheries Meeting in Vancouver

TOKYO (AFP) — The United States, Canada and Japan will hold the 25th annual meeting of the International North Pacific Fisheries Commission in Vancouver from Oct. 30 to Nov. 3, the foreign ministry announced today.

The topics to be discussed at the Vancouver meeting include regulations on the fishing of salmon and trout in the north Pacific, the state of the resources of king and tanner crabs in the eastern Bering sea and the state of the resources of bottom fish in the Bering sea and the northeast Pacific Ocean, it said.

Israeli Moslems Make First Trek In 30 Years

By WILLIAM CLAIBORNE
Washington Post

JERUSALEM — For the first time since Israel was created 30 years ago, Israeli Moslems this week were permitted to participate in the Hajj — the pilgrimage to Mecca — that is one of the five commandments of Islam.

Thirty busloads of about 1,500 Israeli Arabs crossed the Allenby Bridge over the Jordan River on their way to Amman, the first stop on a journey to the holy city in Saudi Arabia.

For the Israeli Arabs, it was the fulfillment of a dream and the end of three decades of frustration at being able to observe only four of the five commandments of Islam.

Most of the passengers were elderly, reflecting in part a decline of religious observancy among the younger generation, but indicating also that to many of the Moslems the trip was a fleeting opportunity to visit the holy city at least once in their lifetimes, in accordance with the spiritual commandment.

Until now, Jordan and Saudi Arabia have refused Israeli citizens permission to travel to Mecca, saying that they were bound by decisions of the Arab League. There are approximately 550,000 Arabs with Israeli citizenship who are — or are descended from — Palestinians who chose to remain here after the war of independence in 1948.

Last year, a symbolic delegation of 31 Israeli Arab notables was permitted to travel to Amman to extend condolences to King Hussein following the death of Queen Alia. At the time, they handed the Saudi charge d'affairs a letter to King Khalid asking the Saudi monarch for permission to make the pilgrimage to Mecca.

That step coincided with efforts by U.S. Sen. Richard Stone, D-Fla., to allow the Israeli Arabs to join their fellow Moslems in Mecca. Stone gained an audience with Khalid and, following strict Saudi protocol, asked if he could petition the king for a "religious favor."

Later, Stone persuaded the Jordanian government to appeal to Khalid, and the long process of negotiating approval began.

Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin's adviser on Arab affairs, Moshe Sharon, said the pilgrims entered Jordan on a special permit issued by the Israeli Interior Ministry and that they were then issued Jordanian visas for the remainder of the trip.

CRASHING JET MISSES 30,000

TUCSON, Ariz. (Reuter) — A U.S. Air Force fighter pilot instructor escaped injury but one woman was killed and six other persons were injured when his jet narrowly missed hitting the buildings of two schools here.

Capt. Frederick Ashler, 28, ejected from his A-7-D Corsair seconds before the plane crashed Thursday in flames onto a street adjacent to the 30,000-student University of Arizona campus.

The plane struck one car, killing the driver, and injuring a passenger. The explosion and spreading flames injured six others, police said.

The plane sent thousands of students dashing for safety on the university grounds and at a nearby junior high school, before crashing near the university's football stadium and one-half block from a 17,000-gallon gasoline-storage area.

Air force officials declined to comment on the cause of the crash, but witnesses said the plane's engines appeared to have flamed out at about 75 metres above the ground.

Officials said the plane had been cleared for a landing at Davis-Monthan Air Base, about 16 kilometres away.

"It sounded like a big truck falling off a roof," said one woman student. "I saw two pieces fly apart, then we saw the parachute open and the plane kept swerving down to the ground."

The plane was assigned to the air base's training squadron and was returning here from Tinker Air Force Base in Oklahoma.

City Housing Value Rising

Victoria housing prices have risen between three and five per cent in the past year and a similar increase is likely during the next 12 months, Victoria Real Estate Board president Bev Highton said today.

"There is no truth to reports that Victoria housing prices have dropped."

Highton was commenting on a news report quoting an unnamed real estate agent that people with houses in the $70,000 range might have to cut $10,000 off the price in order to sell.

"That might happen in an isolated case where a house is overpriced but it is not a reflection of the Victoria real estate market," Highton said.

The market is stronger now that at the same time last year and prices have risen by moderate amounts.

A house worth $60,000 a year ago should be selling around $63,000 this year, an increase of five per cent.

A further increase in value to $65,000 or $66,000 could be expected by late 1979.

"There is a stable, orderly market in Victoria with prices moving up gradually. This is a good kind of market and the only thing that could hurt it is a lot of negative talk.

"Victoria real estate will always be a good investment because this is a desirable place to live."

Anyone buying a house this year can reasonably expect to make a profit on a resale within four years.

However, someone selling within six months should not expect to do better than get his money out.

"In this kind of market there are no sudden profits but value is there and people can buy with confidence."

Highton said comments about price drops are heard from time to time from people who have had negative experiences with one or two properties. Often this is caused by a listing price that is unreasonably high and the price must come down to a realistic level before the property will sell.

Highton said board figures show 290 properties were sold through the Multiple Listing Service in September, up from 246 in the same month one year ago.

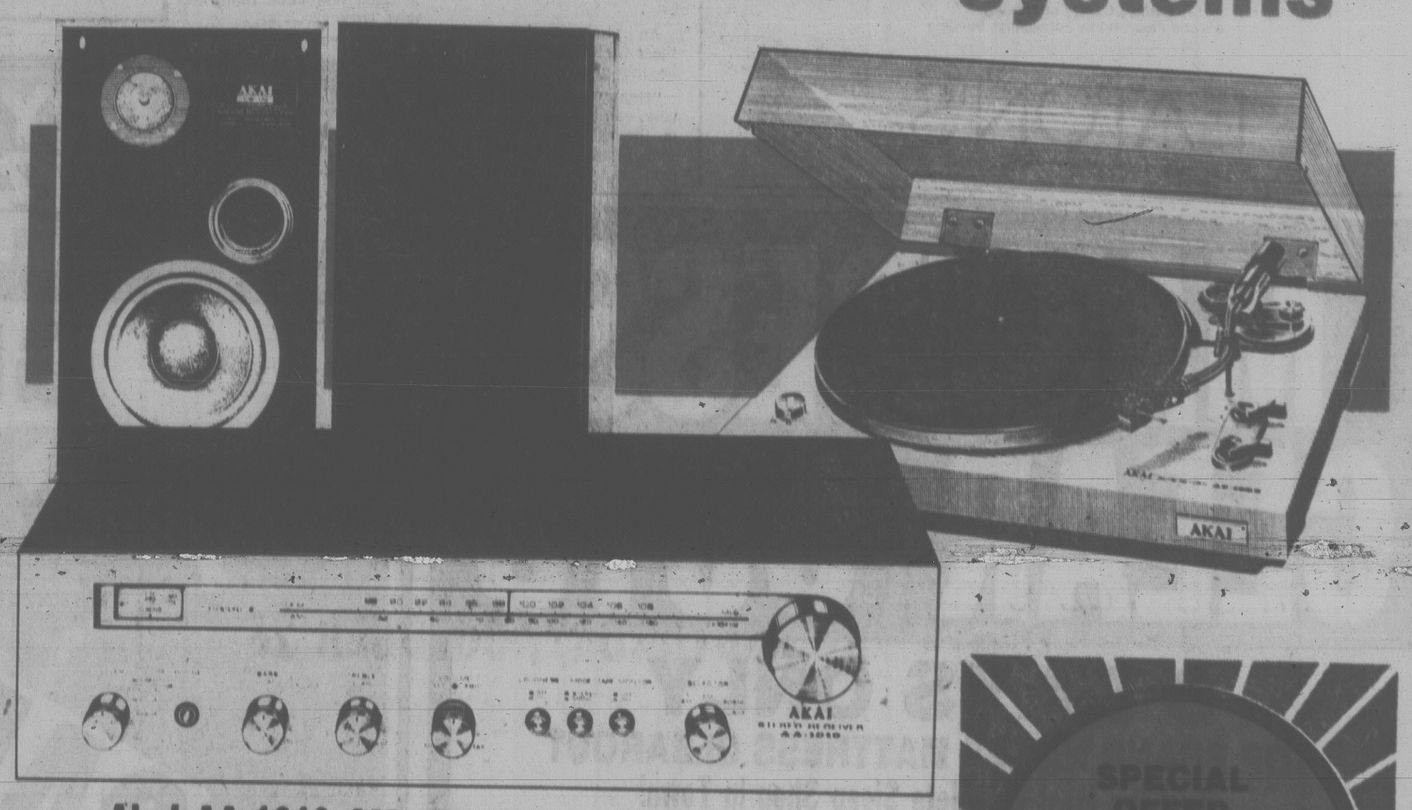

In all, 45 per cent of the 633 listed properties sold during the month. This compares with 36 per cent of 682 properties in the same month in 1977.

"This is evidence of gradually improving conditions in the Victoria real estate market."

VACCINE PROCEEDS FOR FATAL MALARIA

HONOLULU (Reuter) — Medical researchers at the University of Hawaii said Thursday that they have developed a vaccine against a deadly strain of malaria that has proved 100-per-cent successful in animals and now is believed safe for human trials.

Dr. Wasam Siddiqui, parasipologist with the university's medicial school, developed the vaccine against a strain of malaria caused by the parasite Plasmodium Falciparum. This strain has a 10-per-cent mortality rate.

The vaccine was first tested a year ago on monkeys but was not considered safe for human trial because of severe side effects — large lumps that formed under the skin.

A research team in Japan, which has been working in conjunction with the University of Hawaii, developed a synthetic substitute for the ingredient that caused the lumps.

The vaccine will be ready for human testing in about a year and will require two or three years of study, Siddiqui said.

Smoke 'Hurts' Teeth Sockets

ANAHEIM, Calif. (UPI) — Heavy smoking may slow down the healing of tooth sockets after extraction, the 119th annual convention of the American Dental Association was told Thursday.

The healing of a tooth socket after an extraction is a complex process involving many factors, said Dr. James A. Jackson of New York City.

An imbalance of any one of these factors can prolong the healing process, he said.

"Heavy smoking, conclusively, can be cited as a factor in the delay of healing of sockets and oral tissues," he said.

He said the mechanism is probably developed through a combined action of tar and nicotine. The negative oral pressure necessary to draw smoke into the mouth also was given as a possible factor.

Jackson suggested that dentists should advise their patients who are heavy smokers to stop smoking for at least one week following oral surgery.

Tests Begin on Drug Halting Cancer Growth

WASHINGTON (AP) — Doctors have begun human tests with a promising new anti-cancer drug that appears to work by confusing cancer cells and preventing them from reproducing.

A Food and Drug Administration (FDA) spokesman said Thursday the agency approved two limited licences to test the drug, thymidine, in as many as 50 patients.

Officials cautioned that it is too early to tell how effective thymidine will be in humans and that it is not now available for general use.

The National Cancer Institute received one of the Investigational New Drug (IND) licences and contracted with the Baltimore Cancer Research Centre to conduct tests. Three terminally-ill cancer patients are being treated at the centre.

Many cancer drugs are highly toxic to the body and have severe side effects, such as nausea and hair loss, at effective doses.

Rhodesia Calls Up Blacks

SALISBURY (Reuter) — Black Rhodesians were ordered today to register for national service for the war against nationalist guerrillas.

About 25,000 men are expected to be affected initially by the order which appeared today in the official newspaper of Rhodesia's biracial transitional government.

It is the first time in the country's history that conscription has involved blacks in any significant number.

The order said all black males between 18 and 25 who have completed three years of secondary school education or have signed a contract of industrial apprenticeship would be required to register by Dec. 1 for call-up early next year.

It advised those affected to start their service early because they would not be allowed to begin university or any other form of education or training until they have completed 12 months' duty.

Rhodesia's estimated 8,000-man regular forces now are 80 per cent black, all volunteers. About 35,000 reservists, aged between 18 and 50 and spending up to seven months of the year in military service, are white.

The only blacks called up until now have been a handful of doctors in government hospitals.

White Rhodesians for months have been demanding black conscription now that majority rule is on the way but many blacks have objected on grounds that the promise of power has not yet been fulfilled.

An increasing number of Rhodesians say they believe the majority rule target date of Dec. 31 cannot be met.

Black Manpower Minister Gibson Magaramombe told an interviewer two weeks ago that universal franchise elections, due to have been held early in December to allow a black government to take office next year, might be delayed for months by the war.

A $6,500 Smoking $Allergy

VAN NUYS, Calif. (AP) — A worker's compensation judge has awarded a woman $6,500 after she said that cigarette smoke in her movie studio office gave her migraine headaches.

Judge Carl Ringhoff said Thursday that the plaintiff, Jacqueline Scheck, 27, of Sherman Oaks, claimed she has been allergic to tobacco since childhood. Ringhoff said she has suffered bronchial problems from her allergy.

She presented medical evidence showing that cigarette smoking by a fellow worker at Warner Bros. studio in 1974 aggravated her allergy, Ringhoff said.

"In previous jobs, workers had always put out their cigarettes at her request, but even a fan did not help in this case," the judge said.

He said he signed the award papers after finding her to have a 20.5-per-cent disability.

BLOOD REFUSED, MAN STABS TRIO

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — A destitute man, rejected in his attempt to sell blood plasma for $8, faces charges in a bloody series of stabbings at a plasma donation centre that left two dead and one wounded, police said.

Omaha police said James Tulloch, 33, would appear at a bail hearing today on two counts of suspicion of first-degree murder and one count of cutting with intent to kill, wound or maim.

Police Lieut. Foster Burchard said authorities know of no motives for the stabbings at Blood Plasma Services Inc. in downtown Omaha Thursday.

But Burchard said witnesses told police that the assailant "all of a sudden started stabbing when they (employees) refused him." The lieutenant said Tulloch had no money when he was arrested, and was "obviously" at the centre to donate plasma for the $8 payment.

Richard Haines, 33, said he was sitting inside the donation centre when he saw one of the employees talking to a man. "All of a sudden he started stabbing her," Haines said. "He just started sticking her."

Dr. Paul Reichstadt, 62, came to the woman's aid, but Haines said: "He just turned on him. After that, he just went after all the people." Haines said he was donating blood when the attacks began, and "I just jerked the needle out and ran."

Killed were Dr. Reichstadt and Bernadette Fuller, 28, a donation centre worker, police said. The doctor was stabbed six times in the chest and abdomen, while Mrs. Fuller died of two stab wounds in the back, police said.

Albert Kaiser, 30, who was waiting to donate blood, was also stabbed, police said. He told police he dodged the assailant, but the man swung the knife and cut Kaiser's abdomen. Kaiser refused medical treatment.

Rick Williams, manager of the plasma centre, grabbed a shovel and chased the assailant out the door, police said.

Burchard said Tulloch, arrested some moments after the incident, was treated for a minor cut before being jailed.

Iran Violence Continues

TEHRAN (Reuter) — Demonstrators set buildings on fire and attacked the offices of the local governor-general in the west Iranian city of Kermanshah today in continuing anti-government violence, Radio Iran said.

The radio also reported further disturbances in the holy city of Qom, south of here, and Zanjan in the northwest, but said it had no detailed information.

More than 50 persons have died thas month in anti-government violence in provincial towns which followed imposition of martial law in Tehran and 11 other cities seven weeks ago.

4 Dead, 5 Injured In U.K. Rampage

WEST BROMWICH, England (AP) — A man believed to have shot four people to death and wounded five others in a bloody rampage was captured today after a high-speed car chase across northern England, police said.

The slaughter began on a quiet suburban street of West Bromwich on Thursday night when George Burkitt and his 20-year-old son Philip were working on their car in the driveway.

The gunman shot them to death and then shot dead Burkitt's wife, Iris, and seriously wounded his daughter, Gillian, 17, who was reported in serious condition in hospital.

The gunman also shot and wounded next-door neighbor Joseph Chambers, and critically wounded his wife, Judith. Another bullet from the killer's gun went through the window of a nearby house, wounding a seven-year-old girl.

An hour later at Nuneaton, the gunman drove into a service station and killed Elisabetta DiMaria, a woman in her 50s, and badly wounded her husband, Michael, 50.

The gunman's car was spotted this morning and police gave chase across hundreds of kilometres of northern England. As residents of the normally quiet town of Buxton, in picturesque Derbyshire County, did their morning shopping, the suspect's car screeched into the main shopping centre on the wrong side of the road and crashed.

The suspect, wielding a revolver, lunged into a police car and attempted to drive off, but police jumped in and disarmed him.

Police said he answers the description of the killer wanted for the shootings in West Bromwich and Nuneaton the previous night. Police earlier named a suspect wanted for questioning in connection with the slayings as Barry Williams, 36, of West Bromwich.

Labor Holds Two Seats In British Byelections

LONDON (Reuter) — The Labor government won two parliamentary byelections Friday.

The most significant victory was at the Scottish constituency of Berwick, a marginal seat the opposition Conservatives believed they would win.

And although the Labor candidate at the northern England constituency of Pontefract held the seat for his party with a reduced majority, there was a low turnout of voters.

The byelections, held due to the deaths of Labor members, gave no positive indication which way the country might vote in a general election.

But Labor was delighted to have held Berwick and its new member of Parliament, John Home Robertson, said: "It is a tremendous result for the government and a major endorsement of their policies."

The Conservatives, preparing for an attempt to oust Labor from office when Parliament resumes next Wednesday, came second in the two byelections.

The Labor government has an over-all minority of nine in Parliament and it could not afford to lose any seats.

The Conservatives are preparing an attempt to defeat the government on a no-confidence motion when Parliament resumes and need the support of minor parties to do it.

There is no indication so far that they will get that assistance, particularly from the Liberals, who fared disastrously in the two byelections.

'Death Promise Broadcast

ROME (Reuter) — A recording of a phone call in which the Red Brigades guerrilla group told the wife of kidnapped former premier Aldo Moro they would kill him was broadcast on radio and television today.

The recording was released by magistrates so that people might help investigations if they recognized the caller's voice.

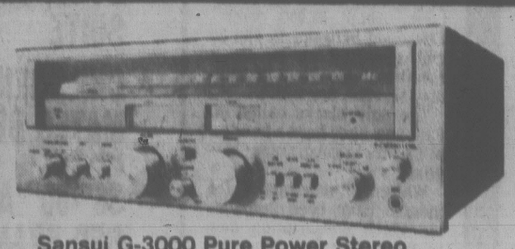

"We have made a decision," the caller told Mrs. Moro. "In the next hours we cannot do other than carry out what we said in communique number eight."

The eighth of their nine statements said Moro would be killed unless 13 named guerrillas were released from prison.

The Brigades communique number eight was released April 24 and their next statement, on May 5, contained the phrase: "We are concluding the battle begun on March 16, carrying out the (death) sentence to which Aldo Moro has been condemned." Four days later he was killed.

Moro was kidnapped March 16 and his body was found May 9.

Mickey Mouse Computer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Donald Duck and 29 of his cartoon colleagues recently slipped onto the U.S. federal payroll. And Donald's salary — $99,000 — sure wasn't Mickey Mouse.

Congressional investigators, exposing the "Walt Disney Affair" they engineered, say the incident points out the chaos in federal payroll procedures.

Donald, Mickey, his girlfriend Minnie, and 27 other cartoon creatures all went to work for the department of housing and urban development (HUD) in a test of the agency's payroll computer.

The computer flunked, the General Accounting Office (GAO) said Thursday.

GAO auditors told a House of Representatives subcommittee they were able to trick the HUD computer into making "clearly unreasonable payments to fictional individuals."

Even for a real person the idea of a $99,000 cheque was preposterous, GAO investigator John Cronin said.

Arms Sale to China Worry Soviet

MOSCOW (WP) — The Soviet Union has warned several Western European countries that selling arms to China is likely to cause "very big damage" to bilateral relations with Moscow and could even bring about unspecified retaliation, Soviet diplomatic sources said Thursday.

The sources, who are in a position to give an authoritative account of Moscow's policy and perspective on the Sino-Soviet dispute, did not go into detail about either the damage or the possible retaliation. "We will not set and idle," if the sales take place, an official said.

Informed Western diplomats doubt that the Soviet Union will be able to follow through on its threats. "In the end it will be all bluster," a Western official said.

France is reported to be in the final stages of a $350 million sale of anti-tank and anti-aircraft missiles and helicopters to Peking. Britain is considering the sale of several hundred vertical takeoff and landing Harrier fighter planes. The Chinese have also been shopping for arms in Italy.

Senior Soviet officials complained about these possible Peking arms deals during Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance's trip here earlier this week and voiced suspicion that the United States is fostering the sales in order to build up military pressure on Russia's eastern front. U.S. officials have denied the charge, saying Washington has a firm policy against arming China and is not encouraging the Europeans to do so either.

Despite the denials, "it is quite clear that appropriate circles in Washington are not against and even endorse the selling of arms to Peking by Western European countries," a Soviet official said.

The Soviets contend that military equipment sold to China may be used not only against the U.S.S.R. but against capitalist states in southern Asia and Western arms sales that strengthen China are being compared here to European arms deals with Hitler in the 1930s before Germany launched the Second World War.

In a display of acute sensitivity to the Communist rival, Soviet officials expressed concern over Chinese military pressure on Vietnam, which sought to have "a policy of equal distance" between the two Communist giants but was not permitted to do so by Peking. Despite the pressure, Vietnam's well-trained and well-equipped army of one million men makes it too costly for the Chinese to take military action, in this view.

ARABS REVALUE

BAHRAIN (Reuter) — Three Arab oil-producing countries Thursday revalued their currencies slightly against the U.S. dollar, following a similar move by Saudi Arabia Wednesday.

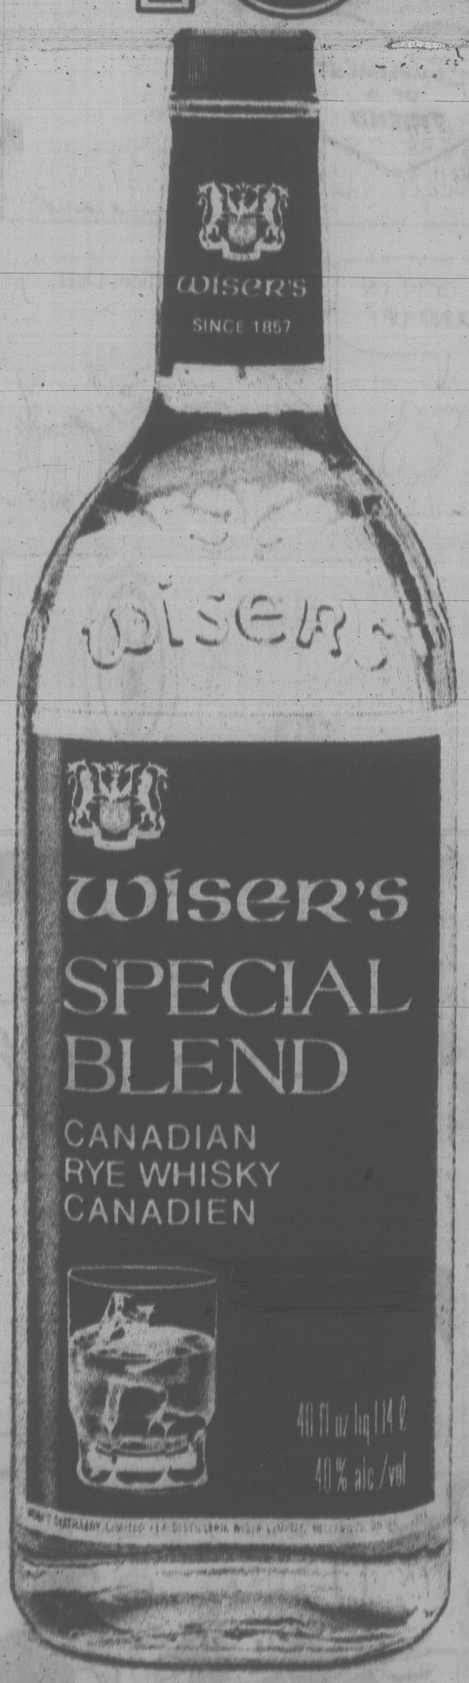

In a concerted move, the three gulf states — Bahrain, Qatar and the United Arab Emirates (UAE) — set the official selling price for the dollar at 0.384 for the Bahrain dinar and 3.84 for the Qatar rial and the UAE dirham.

The previous price was 0.386 Bahrain dinars and 3.86 rials or dirhams. It was set on Sept. 15.

All three currencies are formally linked to the International Monetary Fund's Special Drawing Rights.

The Bridge Expert

BY FRED KARPIN

The reader will not approve of North's bidding in today's deal. However, North had justification, as will be presented. The deal was played during the Fifth World Pair Olympiad, which was held this past June in New Orleans.

North-South vulnerable. South deals.

SOUTH

♣ 10 9 5 2

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	1 ♠	1 NT	4 ♠
Pass	Pass	5 ♡	Dble.
Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Ace of ♠.

North's one-no trump response "showed" about eight high-card points, with a stopper in the adversely bid spade suit. The purpose of his "psychic" call was to make it more difficult for a non-vulnerable East-West to sacrifice against South's eventual game contract (which North was going to bid at his next opportunity).

But East wasn't going to be slowed down — he promptly jumped to four spades, which contract would have suffered a one-trick set. Had East been able to restrain himself by passing (which nobody in the world would have done), the defenders would have been able to take the first nine tricks in the black suits.

When the bidding reverted to North, he showed his heart support by bidding five hearts (he had hoped that the bidding would develop more slowly, so that he would have been able to bid four hearts). East doubled the five-heart bid, which became the final contract.

Had East led a club, the five-heart contract would have been defeated by one trick. East would have cashed two top clubs and then led a third club. West would have trumped with the jack, for the setting trick.

But West, not being clairvoyant, opened the spade ace, which was ruffed in dummy. After the ace and king of trumps had picked up the outstanding pieces, South cashed the diamond ace. This was followed by a diamond to dummy's king, after which a third diamond was ruffed, West's queen falling. A spade was then ruffed, and on dummy's three diamonds South discarded three clubs. So he made an overtrick, his only loser being a club.

"I bought a few cheap mugs and saucers," said Kitty, unpacking the carton on the kitchen table. "Saucers 59 cents and mugs 97 cents, about nine bucks the lot."

Jack had a look. "We sure need them," he declared. "But it would be better if you had switched the numbers."

Kitty shook her head. "That would have cost me 76 cents more," she told him. "And anyway I took all they had."

How many of each did she buy?

Perennial Work

GARDENING
hilda beastall

Favorite fall flowering perennials still have a show of bloom though some are past their peak. As with earlier perennials, the faded flowers should be cut off leaving all green foliage to aid to providing nutrients to store in the roots over winter.

Michaelmas-daisies (perennial asters) have been long in bloom. Reluctantly the flowers are removed now so that the food made by remaining foliage goes into root storage.

Division of these roots can be left until early spring when new growths first show. An even better method of increasing a favorite variety of these asters is to take the first new shoots in earliest spring when only an inch or so in length. These cuttings will root in sandy loam in a slightly-heated porch or greenhouse. this provides an entirely new set of roots in place of the old woody section that inevitably remains when a plant is divided.

Not usually thought about or mentioned is the delicate honey perfume of these perennial asters. The bees know about it, flocking to the plants for his last chance of free nectar.

Blending with he beautifully muted colors of pink, blue, mauve, red, purple and white of Michaelmas-daisies, are yellow and bronze heleniums another group of hardy herbaceous perennials for the fall garden. The brownish-red variety Moerheim Beauty belongs only to late summer and fall, but a lovely orange-yellow blooms continually from June through October.

This latter one depends on prompt removal of each blossom as it fades, to produce the phenominal show. Buds appear from the axils of the stem leaves, as well as new stems growing from the plant base. The orange variety is Wyndley (Gold). Other varieties are in yellow, orange, and bronze colorings — all fine esy additions to the fall garden.

Seldom seen now is the Artemisia lactiflora, one of the few herbaceous members of the mostly shrubby family of Wormwoods which includes the herb Taraon. Southerwood, Mugwort, and the sagebrushes of the southwestern United States, one being the state flower of Nevada.

Artemisia lactiflora is a five-footer with attractive light-green leaves growing up all summer, finally erupting in mid September into loose spays of tiny milk-white tubular flowers (lacti-flora) with a faint scent of vanilla. The blooms of this plant remian presentable for weeks, even after fading, but now they have had to be cut off after browning with a few degrees of frost.

During early November the stems of all these fall perennials will be cut down to about three inches above soil level. I find this works well here, for the stems trap enough wayward tree and shrub leaves to form an airy protetive barrier for emerging new growth in a too-early spring.

Also loose snow partciles are traped by the combined stems and leaves and these together protect the plant crowns from freezing wind and deep frost.

When stems of perennials are cut level with the soil in fall, leaves that fall on them are wet and flat; frost will freeze them into solid mat of ice with loss of spring growth in many instances.

The tall flowering perennials will live happily during winter if given a little thoughtful care mow: they will grow up again in spring to once more add their long season of beauty to the fall garden.

A Fake Quake Bares Gaps

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

Saanich reeled under a major disaster Thursday.

An earthquake registering 7.6 on the Richter scale caused widespread death, injury and destruction.

Hospital emergency wards were filled to overflowing, homes toppled and hundreds of residents were left without water and other essential services.

You didn't see, hear or feel a thing?

It's not surprising because the whole nightmarish crisis existed only on paper — a training exercise for Saanich council members and administrative brass to prepare them for the real thing everyone hopes will never happen.

Lining the walls were maps, charts and military-like clipboards bearing such mystifying titles as Ops Central In and Ops Central Out.

If the participants had been wearing uniforms the scene could have been lifted straight out of a Second World War movie.

But instead of a cigar-puffing Winston Churchill there were shirtsleeved Mayor Mel Couvelier and sundry aldermen, listening to a steady stream of messages and situational reports from the police chief, fire chief and senior officials.

The colorful scenario included everything from a ruptured reservoir to an overturned tanker truck, and the operations team was required to deploy available resources to deal with each emergency situation as it arose.

Couvelier said the true value of the exercise — the first of its kind to be staged by a Greater Victoria municipality — was its exposure of the gaps and inadequacies in Saanich's emergency response procedures.

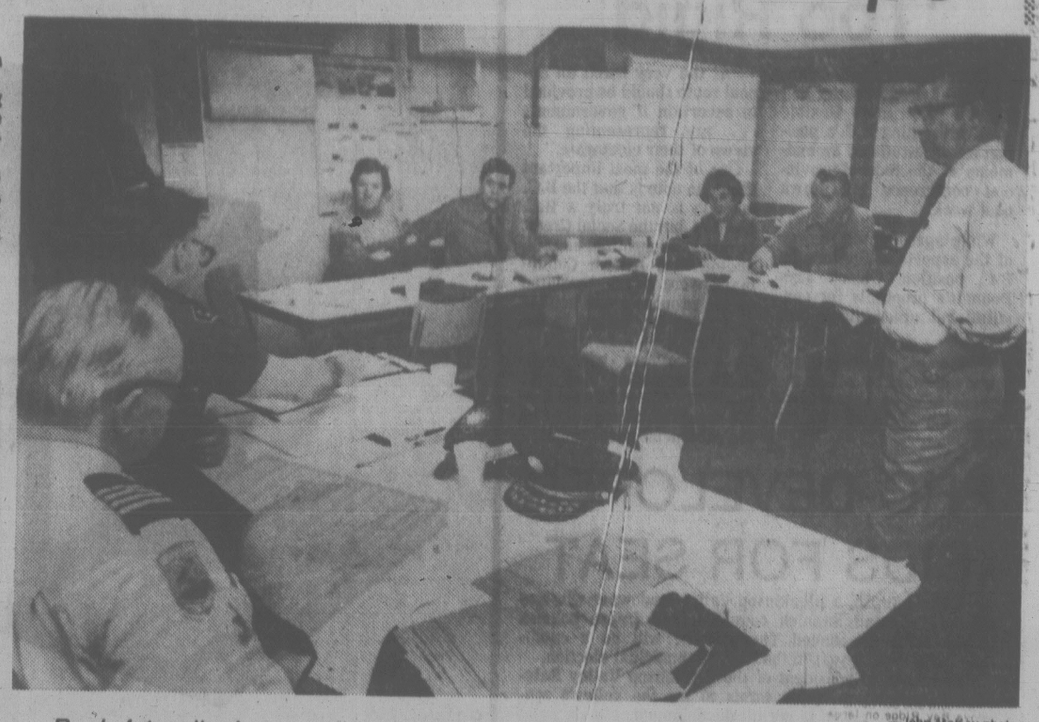

"It has clarified a major problem in my mind — the lack of communication and information that can thwart an operation like this," he said.

These shortcomings exist, he noted, despite the fact that Saanich has its own emergency program officer and specially-equipped emergency centre, including radio communications.

"Yet by the second day after the quake we still had not handled all the fatalities because everyone was too busy answering the phone. It emphasizes the need for one person to maintain an overview of the entire situation."

The simulated disaster was supervised and co-ordinated by Saanich emergency program officer Jack Bush and the school of public administration at the University of Victoria, which also plans to work on similar exercises with other local municipalities.

UVic student Greg Ramsay, who is doing his master's thesis on Greater Victoria emergency programs, conceded that while such individual exercises are a useful starting point the ultimate aim should be a comprehensive effort involving the emergency resources of all municipalities and agencies.

The UN agency said Sao Paolo, Brazil, will have 26 million people at the turn of the century and added that the populations of the capitals of Zaire and Nigeria are expected to quadruple.

Commune Renamed

TOKYO (AP) — A commune on the northwestern outskirts of Peking has been named the China-Japan Friendship People's Commune to mark the peace treaty formally ratified in Tokyo, Peking's official Hsinhua news agency reported.

It said more than 2,000 commune members celebrated the occasion Monday along with "200 Japanese friends."

Bennett's Plan 'Too Rigid'

Liberal leader Gordon Gibson has advised Premier Bill Bennett to be more flexible when presenting B.C.'s position on constitutional amendments at the federal-provincial conference in Ottawa next week.

While agreeing with many of the aspects of the lengthy B.C. position, Gibson says Bennett's proposals for constitutional amendments are too rigid.

They would require unanimous approval by all of the regions with no appeal process, the Liberal leader said.

"At the very least, an appeal route should be provided to ascertain if governments . . . are representing the views of their electorate."

One of the most important things to note is that the B.C. position is not truly a B.C. position, but the Social Credit government position, he said, adding that British Columbians were never consulted on the proposals and neither was there any debate in the legislature.

He disagrees with Bennett's suggestion that B.C. members of a reformed Senate should all be appointed by the provincial government.

PRO-DEVELOPER BIDS FOR SEAT

Donald Smith, a Blenkinsop Valley landowner who has strongly opposed Saanich council's land freeze policies in the area, announced Thursday he will be a candidate for a council seat in the Nov. 18 municipal election.

Smith, 48, is president of the Blenkinsop Valley Ratepayers Association which wants to see the valley's zoning restrictions eased to permit development.

He says he supports the proposal for an industrial park in the Royal Oak area, which council rejected last spring.

With only three days before nominations close Monday, five candidates, including two incumbents, have announced their plans to run for the four vacant council seats.

Downs No Easy Pushover

By DAN LEWIS

Never has Hugh Downs worked harder, earned less or enjoyed it more.

Once the dominant figure in early-morning television, when he was the host of the "Today" show, where he toiled every morning for nine years, and before that Jack Paar's sidekick on the "Tonight" show for five years, Downs now hosts a daily half-hour show on Public Broadcasting, "Over Easy."

"Over Easy" is a labor of love for Hugh Downs. He says his remuneration for the show is only one-tenth of what he normally gets for a half hour for his services on television, but he isn't complaining. In fact, he's hoping to continue doing the show for years to come.

"Over Easy" zeroes in on problems of the elderly. It is a service show funded by the government, now in reruns at the 254 PBS Stations that picked it up this past season. Downs explains with pride that the 254 stations are the largest lineup in television, larger than the affiliate rosters of the three commercial networks.

When he stepped down as host of the "Today" show five years ago, and gave up his hosting role, too, of the NBC network's daytime game show, "Concentration," and took up permanent residence outside Phoenix, people got the impression that Downs had gone into retirement.

"I don't know where they got the retirement idea," Downs exclaims. "I've been working harder than ever before. All I did was retire from the daily show on television. I had enough of that, all those years with Paar, the morning show, 'Concentration' and 11 years as an NBC staffer."

Today, he lives in a home on several acres near Phoenix in the serenity of the desert, writing, making guest appearances on television, and lecturing. At least, that's what he had been doing until a year ago, when he suddenly

Most Readers Take to Change

This is the third edition of Prevue with the new, expanded TV listing format.

Most readers appear to have taken to the change which brings a big increase in programming information, a longer programming period and much more up-to-date scheduling. (There are still bound to be occasional listing errors due to last-minute station program changes).

However, a surprisingly large number of readers have phoned to say they didn't like the new format, that they found it more difficult to follow than the old grid style of listings.

In one respect the grid was easier to follow since the only information given was the name of the program. It was more difficult, however, to get more detailed information about programs since readers had to search elsewhere in the Prevue section.

Now it is only necessary to look at, for instance, Monday Evening Programs, find the 9 0'clock time slot and programs are laid out with descriptions of major shows, specials and movies.

It takes a little getting used to but the value to TV fans of the increased program information should make it worth while. And we have a slight technical problem to solve after which we'll be able to bring readers the movie descriptions complete with quality ratings, from one star (poor) to four stars (outstanding).

Former Model CBC's Award Winning Producer

Nancy Archibald

Award-winning CBC-TV producer Nancy Archibald is a former model and Toronto schoolteacher who joined The Nature Of Things unit in the 60s and was appointed its Executive Producer in 1972.

●

She began her career in television as a researcher for CBC-TV and in that capacity worked on a documentary portrait of Charles Darwin and a series on the natural history of the Galapagos islands. Following this she worked on another major study, a biography of John James Audubon, and with this solid foundation moved on to become director and producer of nature films. Two programs in a series on four National Parks (Point Pelee, the Rockies, the Florida Everglades, and the Sonora Desert) won Columbus Awards.

●

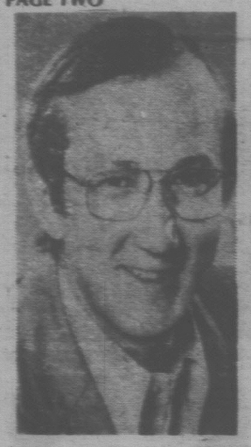

With the curator of ethology at the National Museum of Natural Sciences, Ottawa, she produced a film on the territoriality and courtship behaviour of various species of grouse, which won a Wilderness Award. Also in co-operation with the national museum she produced a film on International Biological Project sites in the High Arctic Islands, which won citations from the Wilderness Award committee.

●

Among the many other documentaries she has produced are films on major sea-bird colonies of the North Atlantic; on the trade in endangered species; on hierarchy in Rhesus Macaques colonies; a film with the late Dr. Jacob Bronowski based on his 1951 Prix Italia-winning book The Face of Violence; a film on the Orford String Quartet; and one on children's poetry.

●

Other one-hour special projects include: a study of land-and water-use along the north shores of the Great Lakes; and various ethnographic studies filmed in Papua, New Guinea, the Chalbi desert, northern frontier district of Kenya, and on the Lacandons of the southern Mexican rain forests. Her most recent venture in this field is a natural-history documentary filmed in Madagascar of the unique wildlife found there, to be telecast on CBC-TV next season.

International Emmy Bid By 5th Estate

TORONTO (CP) — An episode of CBC's Fifth Estate program, broadcast last March, has been nominated for an International Emmy award, the CBC announced Friday.

Four Women, a documentary special on breast cancer, has been nominated for an award in the non-fiction category, the network said in a news release.

The program, produced by John Kastner with Adrienne Clarkson as host, also has earned a Prix Italia nomination.

An episode in the CBC's The Newcomers series, 1847, has been nominated for an Emmy in the fiction category.

Award winners will be announced at a dinner in New York City Nov. 20.

Journalism takes many forms. It can be strictly factual, a mere matter of gathering information as it is disseminated by various sources. It can be entertaining, in the form of a review or a feature. However, a specialized form of reporting has created its own berth in the public view: Investigative journalism. An outstanding example of this is CBC's "The Fifth Estate," now entering its fourth season. withAdrienne Clarkson, Eric Malling and Ian Parker.

Current Canadian affairs are always in the spotlight of "The Fifth Estate." Examples of topics covered in the past are: The dangers of dioxin in jungeland weed spraying; the problems of newspaper carriers in Canada; the inadequacy of automobile insurance laws; the dismissal of Catholic school teachers in Newfoundland who married outside the church; the loser's game on the Vancouver Stock Exchange; and the more extraordinary ways in which lottery profits are spent in Ontario.

Occasionally, unusual and interesting people will become the central figures of "Fifth Estate" reports. Those in the past have included Sasquatch hunter Rene Dahinden, Richard Rohmer (who was accused of being Canada's worst writer), and the high-pitched pitchmen behind the many television record commercials.

Chris Robinson Right Choice For Hospital

Chris Robinson

Verna Pierce

By JOHN N. GOUDAS and STEVEN H. SCHEUER

The big man in trouble on "General Hospital" these days is none other than Chris Robinson's Dr. Rick Webber. First, his M.D. wife Leslie (Denise Alexander) was charged with and convicted of murder. Finally, authorities discover that his stepdaughter Laura is the real culprit.

Now, a normal man might run from such a situation, or turn to drink. But not stalwart, determined Rick. He's in there fighting to get his family back, cheered on by his lady followers.

At the moment, Webber is under fire at the hospital because of his women. Rick happens to be up for the post as head of the new cardiac wing. Normally he would be a shoo-in ... but the uneasy hospital board would prefer to choose some doctor not in the gory limelight of murder — a reasonable approach. In real life, the tainted Webber wouldn't stand a chance.

Thus, the embattled Rick appears to be the key to the return of "General Hospital" from oblivion in the world of soap. As the experienced Chris Robinson plays him, Rick is a believable hero, forgiving, and loyal, never deviating. Good old Rick won't let his loved ones down.

Gloria Monty knew what she was doing last winter after taking over the reins at "General Hospital." One of her early moves was to sign Chris Robinson. Get a strong, appealing actor on that screen in a hurry, then overhaul the show bit by bit. To Monty, Chris spelled insurance.

Robinson must come under the category of a workaholic. He simply can't sit still, or hang around the unemployment line trading gossip with fellow actors. If not in front of the camera, he writes, produces and directs documentaries and big screen features. As a director, Robinson has credits for "Baretta," "Cannon" and "Barnaby Jones."

CHANNEL CHATTER: Verna Pierce is the new actress who recently joined "Search for Tomorrow" in the role of the battered wife named Sharon Peterson. The character of Sharon will figure more importantly in the plotlines to come. Verna's background has been mostly in musical theatre and she welcomes the chance to do some heavy emoting ... Michael Zaslow (he's Roger Thorpe in "Guiding Light") has received rave notices for his performance in the musical "She Loves Me," currently playing at the Goodspeed Opera House in East Haddam, Conn. ... Dennis Cooney (Jay Stallings in "As the World Turns") left for an eight-day vacation cruise to the Caribbean on the Queen Elizabeth II. Dennis just wants to sit in the sun and relax ... Flash! It's not official yet but it looks like "Another World" will be the first soap opera to expand to 90 minutes daily in the very near future. Look for many of the other hour-long shows to follow suit.

No Easy Pushover

He taped 130 half-hour segments last season, and hopes to do twice that number for next season. Eventually, because of the timelessness of the shows, he will have a huge inventory that will permit a year-round programming.

It cost $2.7 million to produce the shows; and once the show gets past its second season, under PBS regulations, local stations will be able to buy the show on their own. That would bring in more money, for greater production, Downs explained.

Doing "Over Easy" has been a revelation in itself. Times and technology have changed television production. The computer has come into prominence since his days on the "Today" show. There is electronic editing and computerized insertions, and sophisticated techniques such as freeze frames, more intensified zoom lens, truer color.

"The state of the art has advanced," Downs said during a recent visit to New York, where he subbed for David Hartman for a week as co-host of ABC's "Good Morning, America."

He has some reservations about technological progress.

"The pace has changed. More information is pressed into shorter periods on television now because of these advances, and I'm wondering if that's not too good. In some instances, we're outstripping the public's ability to assimilate the digest. We just live faster today."

"Over Easy" originates in San Francisco, where it was created by the local PBS station. In that city it's seen three times a day, twice on PM and once on a Sunday. Many stations offer the show more than once a day.

Downs has some concern, however, over the government's desire to cut back on funding for the show. He claims there is pressure on the administration to take some $2.7 million and allocate it elsewhere in Public Broadcasting.

"... access to other ... as reported, but the effort to reduce government funding is based on lack of government interest in the elderly.

He's even sacrificed living in Phoenix full time for the show. He's taken an apartment in San Francisco because of the heavy production schedule. "It became full time," he said.

He relishes the idea of being on PBS where he doesn't have to be concerned about ratings.

"Once you're funded on PBS, you're there," Downs observed. "Ratings are no concern about the risk of failure. That's why commercial television, worrying about failure and poor ratings, is going for sex — the girl with the wet T-shirt — for ratings."

Downs claims there's a new broadcasting breed in commercial television. There is also great liberalization. "I sometimes regret the new set of values," he declared. "It can really be damaging to the young. So much is seen in the air that this generation believes you can solve problems with violence."

'Puff the Magic Dragon'

A Cartoon Based On Magic Song

By ROBERTA G. WAX

It was a hit in the 1960s for Peter, Paul and Mary and has since become a popular children's song, known around the world.

"The song has endured," said Peter Yarrow, who wrote the tune and has turned it into an animated television special to be shown at 8:30 p.m Oct. 30 on CBS.

"Puff was never just a children's song," he said. "It is also a song for adults, saying we miss the innocence of our childhood, the vulnerability of a belief in things, whether it is idealism or a sense of whimsy. That is what 'Puff' is about.

◆

"We need to believe in each other and in ourselves."

Yarrow and Leonard Lipton wrote the tune in 1959 between college exams. It was one of the first songs Yarrow wrote.

During the 1960s, when the song became a hit for the folksinging trio, the popular misconception was that Puff was about marijuana, an implication Yarrow emphatically denies.

It is, was and always has been about nothing more than a dragon and a boy, he insisted.

Yarrow said he was constantly approached through the years with offers to translate "Puff" to television, "but I wanted to do it myself. I wanted to wait until it could be done with the same sensitivity that is inherent in the song."

One evening at a party in Malibu, Yarrow sang "Puff." When he was done, he saw a large, burly man standing with tears in his eyes. He was animator Fred Wolf, who worked on the show with Charles Swenson.

Then Romeo Muller, who won a Peabody Award for the animated special "The Hobbit", and created "Rudolph, the Red-Nosed Reindeer," presented Yarrow with a two-page script that Yarrow said was "absolutely on target."

◆

Yarrow, of course, did the soundtrack. He said the show, which took 1 ½ years to create, incorporates the song but does not follow the story line exactly.

"It takes it another step."

Unlike the end of the song, when "Jackie Paper comes no more" and "Puff, that mighty dragon, sadly slipped into his cave," Yarrow said the presumption in the television show is "that something good might happen."

"Other children perhaps will play with Puff in other specials. The process continues. Perhaps adults will have some some contact with Puff. The end of this show is very touching. It's a moving happy ending."

Yarrow did not want to give away the ending, but did say the plot involves the dragon and two boys, a real Jackie Draper and a imaginary Jackie Paper, on adventures that bring them new understandings and help Jackie overcome his fears.

Puff's magic smoke allows them to see what what is and what might be, the soft-spoken Yarrow said.

He added, "It's not only an adventure story, but it has real content for us as adults."

$600,000 an Hour Budget

"No Pushups in Centennial"

By STEVE CASEY

HOLLYWOOD — One must be cautious about believing dollar figures in any way associated with the business of television. It is not altogether unknown for persons who provide such figures to cloak them in finespun deceit.

But, if we can believe printed reports of the cost of NBC's expansive and expensive limited series "Centennial," that project will run more per hour than "Battlestar Galactica."

The budget, said executive producer John Wilder, was drawn at $610,000 an hour. But television lives within its budget the way the rest of us do, and the bill for the 26 hours reportedly will top $30 million.

It was in March of last year that Wilder began adapting James Michener's masterful 1,100-page work into a 1,500-page shooting script; a script which, according to Wilder, met with Michener's unqualified approval.

Despite that, "Centennial" has begun on NBC, with Robert Conrad starring as fur trader Pasquinel in the first episodes.

The Michener novel is sweeping in scope, and rich in history. It is a powerful treatise on land and respect for the land, and for the Indian who lived by that respect. Set in Colorado, in the main, the Universal production was shot entirely on location.

For Conrad, as for most everyone associated with "Centennial," the work seems a source of personal and professional inspiration.

"I think it's the greatest role in my career, and my greatest performance. I'll put it up against anybody's anywhere."

Because of "Centennial," a departure from his usual Mike Macho roles, Conrad has become an ultra-hot property and is now, he said, the recipient of TV-movie offers from ABC and CBS and has been offered another series for NBC.

Having prospered in Hollywood for more than two decades, Conrad has earned a certain reputation. The words "ego" and "arrogance" and "hothead" are not total strangers to his name. All but single-handedly, he caused his serie "Baa Baa Black Sheep" to become born again after an NBC programmer killed it.

"I realized that Robert Conrad has a reputation of being a macho tough guy and all that," he said, "and I set out to prove Robert Conrad is as good an actor as there is in this country—and I proved it."

Fans Benefit From Marriage of Minds

By JOHN GOUDAS and STEVEN SCHEUER

Contrary to the belief of some of the soap opera fans, the actors do not make up their lines as they go along. The intricate plotting and the structure of the dialogue are carefully engineered and created by writers of no little talent.

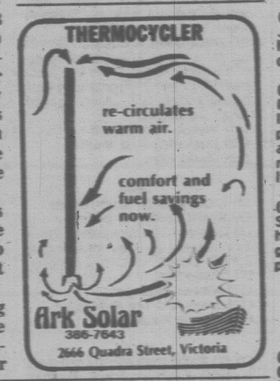

In the case of "Search for Tomorrow," for example, the head writers are the husband and wife team of John and Joyce Corrington, who fashion the intricacies and events which help to keep "Search for Tomorrow" one of the consistently high-rated soaps on the air.

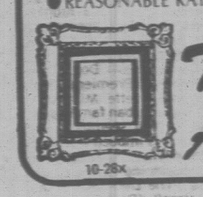

John is an author with an extensive and impressive list of novels and books of poetry to his credit, and he also happens to have been a lawyer before he turned to writing. His attractive wife Joyce (they've been married for 18 years and have four children) is a member of the department of chemistry at Xavier University in their home city of New Orleans, and has worked with her husband on screenplays such as "The Battle for the Planet of the Apes."

It may seem odd, but this film is what prompted the soap opera producers to sound out the couple about working on daytime serials.

"It was a long training period," Joyce said. "We were asked to do a six-months projection of plots for a soap currently on the air other than 'Search.' We chose 'Another World' and worked very closely with Raul Rauch, the show's executive producer. We actually had fun, reworking the situations which existed on the show when we began, and we learned how difficult a medium it is for soap opera. We encountered many built-in restraints."

"We took a hard look at 'Search,'" said John Corrington, "and decided the title wasn't dealing with tomorrow, it was dealing with yesterday. So we set out to alter the centre of gravity of the town in the show and confront the community with major issues, but only those which grew out of the story naturally. 'Search' has never been a theme show, it's definitely a character show, and that's the way we want to keep it."

AUCTION TIME ON CHANNEL 9

Spirits are high for the third annual KCTS/9 Auction, to be televised Saturday, Oct. 28 through Saturday, Nov. 4 on Channel 9. As in the past years, the event will be broadcast live from Doces Southcenter Warehouse in Tukwila. Four thousand items will be auctioned off during 71 hours of air time.

The auction raises a substantial portion of the station's operating budget. The first two KCTS auctions have raised more than $400,000. Merchandise to be sold includes: new items worth $25 or more; antiques; art; services; and one-of-a-kind opportunities such as lunch with a favorite celebrity. The auction also has established itself as a major community event, involving the enthusiastic efforts of thousands of Northwest residents who donate and purchase items, serve as auctioneers, and join the auction volunteer staff.

Adrienne Clarkson, a native of Hong Kong, first came to Canada at the age of three. After receiving her public school education in Ottawa, she attended Trinity College and graduated with honors in English Language and Literature. From there, she proceeded to Paris, where she stayed for two years.

While lecturing at the University of Toronto's Victoria College, Adrienne joined the CBC program "Take 30" as a literary critic. Before long, she became the co-host. By 1967, she had gained such popularity and acclaim that she served as Canadian co-host for the first world satellite broadcast.

In 1973, Adrienne received her first of four ACTRA awards for journalism, two of which have been for her "Fifth Estate" work.

Attractive Low-Profile Design

This strikingly handsome three bedroom contemporary design derives maximum function and convenience from its medium-sized floor area and is perfectly suited to the narrow to medium frontage lot. The exterior, finished in stucco and fieldstone with heavy shake roof, presents an appealingly low profile and great eye-appeal, which would be awelcome addition to any urban or rural neighbourhood.

The deeply weather-protected entrance leads into a small foyer, past the stone fireplace wall and down two rises to the convivial sunken living room. Straight ahead from the entrance takes you down two risers to the large kitchen-family room complex. The kitchen has a well-planned U-shaped configuration which separates from the large family room via snack-bar counter for casual family meals. The family room connects the rear patio via sliding glass doors, as does the formal dining room.

Off the family room is conveniently positioned the two-piece vanity bath, ample storage closets and the laundry facility with side-by-side washer-dryer configuration.

An enclosed two-car garage, with space for an internal workshop, and an attic storage overhead, completes the downstairs services of this home.

All three bedrooms are positioned around the central bath and linen storage area, and all have excellent natural lighting and generous closet storage. The large master has a full-width closet, with access to the attic storage, and a three-piece bathroom with tub.

TV MAILBAG

By THOM MEAD

HOLLYWOOD — The TV Mailbag:

Q. Will we be seeing more of Leif Garrett on television? Also, I know Garrett is a rock star but does he have much acting experience? — D. D. L., MARLBORO, N.Y.

A. With his popularity growing, you can expect to see plenty of Leif Garrett on television. He will appear frequently in a recurring role in ABC's popular series "Family" this season. He will play Zack, Kristy McNichol's boyfriend.

As for his acting background, Garrett began his acting career at five. His television credits so far include starring roles in the series "Three for the Road" and the television film "Peter Lundy and the Medicine Hat Stallion," plus guest appearances in "Gunsmoke," "Apple's Way," "Cannon" and "Family Affair."

Garrett also was featured in the motion picture "Bob and Carol and Ted and Alice," "Macon County Line," the three "Walking Tall" movies and most recently, "Skateboard."

It has only been in the past year that Garrett emerged as a rock star. He already has earned two gold singles for "Surfin' USA" and "Runaround Sue" and a gold album "Leif Garrett."

Q. I would like to know where I can write to Melissa Anderson of "Little House on the Prairie?" — B. S., Warsaw, Ohio

A. I would suggest you write in care of Paramount Studios, 5451 Marathon St., Los Angeles, Calif. 90038.

Q. You must tell me who designs the clothes for Mrs. Pynchon, the publisher, on "Lou Grant." Also, where do they buy them? I am unabe to read the credits because they go by so fast, so I'm left in the dark. — C.M.V. Keams Canyon, Ariz.

A. Leslie Hall is in charge of women's wardrobe for the series She says the clothes selected for Mrs. Pynchon, who is played by Nancy Marchand, are purchased at stores such as I. Magnin and Sak's Fifth Avenue.

Q. With the recent repeat of "Roots on ABC, I'm curious how the series did in the all-important ratings. I looked for it in my newspaper but found nothing. — P. C., Dublin, Calif.

A. "Roots" was an unqualified success in the ratings during its repeat showing. According to the Nielsen ratings, the five episodes placed in the top six spots. "The Miss America Beauty Pageant" finished second for that television week, spoiling a clean sweep by "Roots." The conclusion of the series was the most watched and captured first place in the ratings. "Roots, Part Two" came in as the third most popular show viewed that week, followed by "Roots, Part Three," "Roots, Part Four" and "Roots, Part One."

Q. When something good and enjoyable comes along on television, it never lasts. I'm referring to "America 2Night." What happened to it? — F. G., Pittsburgh, Penn.

A. Although "America 2Night" received decent ratings, Tandem Productions said the show was unprofitable and thus stopped producing the syndicated series.

BOOKS

Pat Barclay

If there's one thing that's certain about Canadian publishing, it's that John Morgan Gray died too soon. Anyone who reads the first volume of his memoirs (Fun Tomorrow: Learning to be a Publisher, and Much Else), will readily appreciate the loss.

John Gray became manager of Macmillan Publishing in 1946. He'd joined the company as a textbook salesman in 1930, when he was 23, and he remained with it until his retirement just five years ago. Fun Tomorrow covers the period from 1907 to 1946. It makes enormously informative and entertaining reading but, good as it is, it's not nearly enough. We needed volume two of John Gary's memoirs, and that's that. It's a measure of the man that one can feel the loss so keenly after only a few hours spent reading his book.

What's so special about it? Fun Tomorrow contains Gray's descriptions of his schooling, his youthful travels, the early years with Macmillan and the war. It ends with his return from overseas and appointment as manager of the firm. Because these rather ordinary-sounding events cannot be separated from the personality of the man who lived and recounted them, they become special in the way that Frank Pickersgill's letters, or Charles Ritchie's diaries, are both special and enduring. All three men share the precious secret which Samuel Pepys recognized in 1660: the only worthwhile way to write about oneself is honestly.

John Gray, as revealed in his book, was one of those rare souls who manage to strike the perfect balance betweeen pride and modesty. Perhaps it was partly the influence of his parents, whose backgrounds differed widely: his father's family had money and privileges; his mother's family kept a boarding house. "It was years before the Grays accepted (my mother) into the tribe," writes Gray. "The result made her by turns watchful and aggressive. . . .She could be quiet but she could not be put down."

Gray's portrait of his father is a highlight of his book. Fun Tomorrow contains many memorable anecdotes; one of the best describes what happened when John and his brother Bob persuaded their father to play a game of golf: "Almost from the first he was in trouble, chopping away at his ball in the deep grass. It was agony to watch. . . we began offering maddening hints. 'Dad, if you could just keep your head down. . . .' Chop. 'Dad, if you could go a little more slowly on the backswing. . . .' Chop. 'Dad. . . .' Sensing another helpful instruction coming, he turned on my brother. 'Dammit, boy,' he said bitterly, 'I was breaking golf clubs before you were born.'"

John Gray's formal education began at an English prep school in 1914. ("Inexorably we were taught to conform, in dress, in speech patterns, in control — even suppression — of all emotion." It continued at Lakefield, a small private school 10 miles from Peterborough. ("A hard school, and intended to be, but it was not cruel.") Next came Upper Canada College and two years at the University of Toronto, where he ingloriously flunked out. ("Boy Meets Life. . . though perhaps it should be Boy Misses Boat."

Gray's gregarious, sports-loving nature did not emerge as a noticeable career asset until 1929, when he met Hugh Eayrs, head of Macmillan in Canada. Eayrs offered Gray a job, explained a mutual friend, because "He likes the way you play bridge."

Successful publishers trust their instincts, as Gray soon learned for himself. As manager of Macmillan's Educational Department he began to develop a strong Canadian list, the response to which was "striking and heartening." (Compare the situation today, when the Book and Periodical Development Council can report that the average of Canadian books in school libraries is only two per cent, and of Canadian textbooks in schools, only three per cent! Whatever happened to good citizenship, let alone patriotism?)

Gray's wit, decency and understanding illuminate his attitudes to publishing, the Depression, the War and the Canada of his day. (Sample observation, on Hugh Eayrs' early death at 40: "I came in time to believe that the root cause was heart-breaking frustration; pulling at a dead weight in trying to publish imaginatively in the Canada of that day.")

Fun Tomorrrow's one real drawback is a reflection of its quality: it ends in 1946. One closes the book with genuine disappointment that there can be no sequel, nor summing up.

Sasquatch 'Evidence' Won't Replace Yarns

By TERRY DE MARCH

British Columbia's contribution to the world's legendary "monsters" is the Sasquatch. In recent years it has become almost as well-known as the Loch Ness Monster, and interest generated by its possible existence has grown dramatically.

In Sasquatch: The Apes Among Us, John Green has provided a complete catalogue of documented evidence supporting the case for its existence. By some this evidence will be deemed conclusive; by others a collection of interesting but imaginative stories which comprise an elaborate hoax.

To believers and non-believers alike, the Sasquatch is appealing for the air of mystery which surrounds it and the sense of fantasy it touches: a huge beast which roams the mountains of the West Coast unhindered and apparently unaffected by the encroachment of man. He is as intriguing as a criminal who continually evades capture; with the trail being more interesting than any subsequent capture may prove to be.

The roots of the Sasquatch are ages deep in our history. The West Coast Indians have an abundance of tales of the ape-like creature, which gives it a greater ring of authenticity, at least in heritage if not in actuality.

The explorer David Thompson recorded his thoughts after twice discovering what would now be called the tracks of a Sasquatch: "The sight of the track of that large beast staggered me, and I often thought of it yet never could bring myself to believe such an animal existed . . ."

John Green's Sasquatch grows from these early reports through seemingly endless sightings in virtually every corner of the United States and Canada. Descriptions are as diversified as the geography, and Green presents his cornucopia of information with often little regard for its relevance to the creature as we perceive it.

From "Big Foot" in the west to "Wildmen" in the east, Green lays forth his evidence in textbook fashion and well-armed with newspaper reports from such publications as the Daily Missoulian and the Anaconda Standard:

"A wild boy was lately captured near Austin, Texas. He was first discovered wallowing in a pond of shallow water, and when approached he broke like a quarter-horse, running about a mile before he could be overtaken by men on ponies . . ."

"There it stood: just three feet away, leaning almost on one of the cage posts and staring down at the frantic ducks, was a six-foot-tall, dark, hairy, ape-like creature . . ."

On the West Coast the sightings are not only more frequent, but backed by a collection of physical evidence that even the most ardent skeptic would admire for its consistency. Huge footprints have been plaster-cast in abundance, photographs presented, and at the pinnacle, a brief and now famous film clip taken by one Roger Peterson.

The film has been widely criticized for a variety of reasons, including the "misconception" Green refers to "that the film is too blurred to be of much use." He therefore provides diagrams and statistics to demonstrate how much use a blurred film can be. The judgment, however, is still in the eyes of those who have seen the Peterson film.

Controversy is the plight of all such Roger Petersons who proclaim the existence of monsters. But in this field the spoils go to the victor, and in this instance it will be the man who conclusively proves the existence of the Sasquatch. The spoils will be film rights, lecture tours, and the inevitable subsequent books on the discovery.

Green, rather appropriately, is the first to point out these economic possibilities, having now completed four books on the subject.

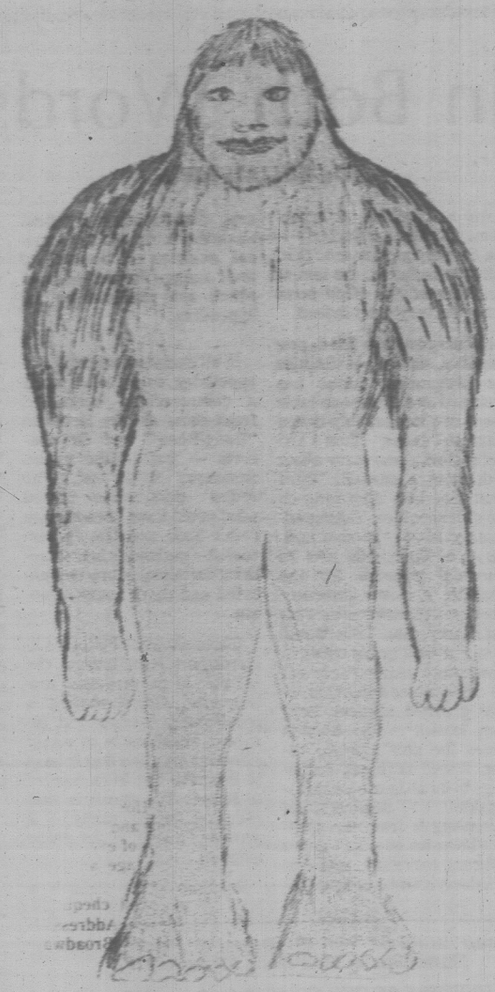

Obscured by the reports of men who have been carried off in their sleeping bags by the Sasquatch, or had their cars rocked by the creature, are those which may be given serious attention.

In 1971 a housewife in Bremerton, Wash., said she saw an eight-foot, dark-haired being peering into her kitchen window. She called her three children who also saw it.

Recently, a Washington police sergeant observed a seven to eight-foot animal with short body hair for several minutes with six others before it disappeared into the darkness.

Until the Sasquatch's existence is conclusively proven, however, its heart lies in favorite yarns passed from individual to individual. With any luck it will remain there in the future.

The Birds Of Mystery

By HAROLD HOSFORD

An acquaintance of mine has frequently expressed a desire to "take up" birdwatching. While her interest, I'm sure, is genuine, it is, at the same time, suspect; it never seems to get beyond "where can I go to see owls?"

I relate this simply because the young lady's particular fascination with owls is a reflection of a more general curiosity about these birds which, despite modern science's efforts to strip away their mystery, remain mysterious. Active for the most part at night, and being associated — certainly in the Old World — with tombs, cemeteries, church towers and the dark depths of deep forests, owls are still revered as beings of a nether world, often endowed with magical powers. Since the dawn of human awareness this mysterious magic has stimulated the human imagination and influenced our artistic expression.

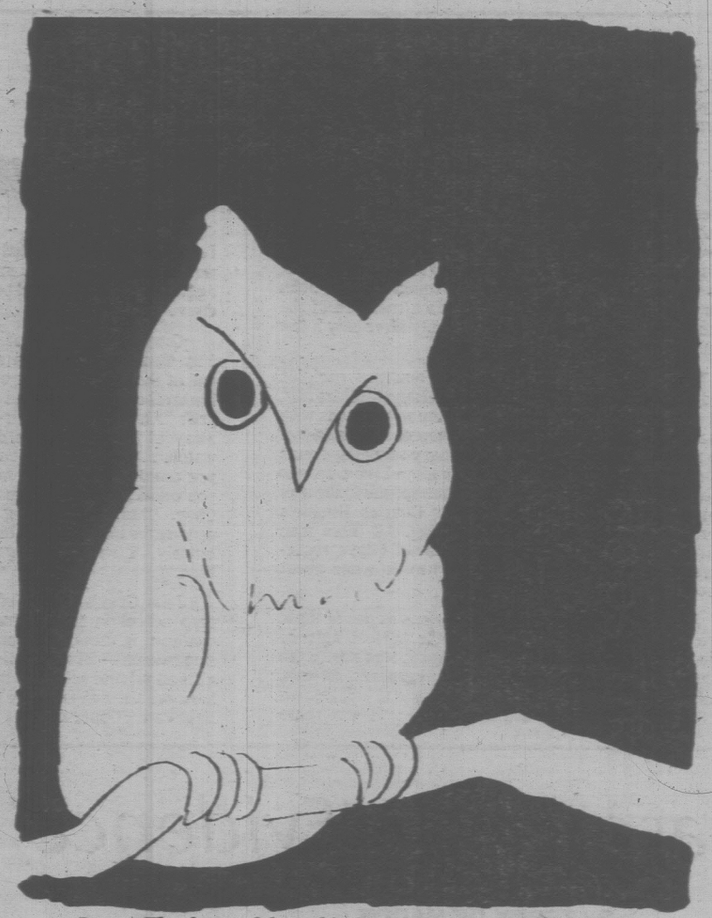

Taking his cue from this aspect of the human fact, Jozefa Stuart has in The Magic of Owls assembled an engaging and revealing account of man's association with owls and the part that association has played in the development of our artistic senses. The book is essentially a visual experience. Stuart provides only enough narrative to set the reader's own imagination to work; page after page of beautiful color and monochrome reproductions of the products of other human imaginations do the rest.

In a delightful pot-pourri of carvings, paintings, tapestries, sketches, coins, sculpture, and pottery, The Magic of Owls takes its reader on a 35,000-year journey through the imagination of man. From the Paleolithic paintings of owls in French caves to the work of modern artists and photographers, the reader finds just about every culture represented, at least every culture that had any experience with owls. There are stops in this odyssey to admire, among other things, a 17th-century German goblet in the form of a coconut but embellished, in silver, with the features of an owl; to speculate on the possible mystical significance of a 2,000-year old bronze jar in the form of a horned owl from the hands of an unknown Chinese artist; and to marvel at the intricate beauty of two little owls in bronze, encrusted with chips of colored stones, that were produced by Nepalese artists.

This preoccupation with owls is not just a function of the past. Even today artists still find in owls a fitting subject for their creative expression, sometimes delightfully whimsical and sometimes frighteningly ominous representations of these provocative birds. But the modern trend is to more truly representational work which shows owls for what they are — not birds of mystery but highly efficient and beautifully conceived products of avian evolution.

This trend is best exemplified in The Magic of Owls by the work of modern photographic artists like Ron Austing — particularly his treatments of Saw-whet Owls and Screech Owls. Even in these magnificent photographs, though, some of the mystery of owls survives, for few among us can deny a vague feeling of uneasiness under the baleful stare of an owl — even a photograph of an owl.

THE MAGIC OF OWLS, by Jozefa Stuart. Beaverbooks. $8.95 paper; $15.95 cloth.

Grotesque — in Both Words and Pictures

By JULIAN REID

"And what is the use," as Alice sat wondering shortly before she began her head long tumble down into Wonderland, "of a book without pictures or conversations?"

What, indeed? For we tend to forget that the great novels of Lewis Carroll's 19th century — the classic masterworks of Charles Dickens and his rivals — were customarily issued in lavishly illustrated editions, and that for the privileged readers who could afford them (as opposed to the cheap popular versions which were the then-equivalents of our modern newstand paperbacks), the illustrations were every bit as vital a part of the reading experience as was the text proper.

It is only in our own century that soaring production costs have succeeded in castrating the novel to such an extent that it is reduced to offering more and more conversations in lieu of the missing pictures. Television and the much-maligned comic-book surely has something to do with this sorry comedown.

At least one company, Britain's Pierrot Publishing, has finally decided to do something about thissituation. Brothers of the Head comes touted by them as "the first book in an exciting new series of full-color illustrated, original fiction which in itself is a new approach to fiction publishing."

"New," as I have just indicated, this approach certainly is not. Nevertheless, this large-format paperback, containing 44 watercolors and line-drawings by artist Ian Pollock, along with some 40,000 words of text by Brian W. Aldiss, deserves a hearty welcome as a streamlined new attempt to recapture something of that lost pictorial magic which, back in Alice's day (and in our own childhoods, for that matter), used to be such an integral accompaniment to the more abstract pleasures of reading.

In this particular case, admittedly, I found the pictures a bit off-putting — but that is probably just a matter of taste. In any case, for all the publisher's hoopla, they remain strictly subordinate to the text, which unlike them is perfectly capable of standing on its own feet.

The notion of integrating text and illustrations into a more or less seamless whole is certainly a promising one — but one that is only vaguely hinted at in the present volume. A clear sign of this is the fact that, as often as not, an illustration appears several pages away from its matching text.

But none of this, as it happens, matters particularly — for the very good reason that, taken in isolation, the text of Brothers of the Head turns out to be very good indeed.

Keeping one eye fixed, presumably, on the possibilities for illustration, Aldiss has dreamed up a grotesque fable about two inseparably-linked Siamese twins, Tom and Barry Howe, who carry about with them a parasitic third head that lolls dreaming on Barry's shoulder. Taking advantage of the "morbid curiosity" of the public and its perennial appetite for the freakish, a clever promoter sets about transforming Tom and Barry into "The Bang-Bang," a rock-group which in three short years traces out the inevitable hyperbola of "the greatest success story ever known". The novella traces the pair's public career from its bleak beginnings to its ultimate and inescapable degeneration, presenting it from the shifting viewpoint of a half-dozen different narrators, and embellishing it with such peripheral minutiae as a medical examiner's report and critical analyses of several of their songs (the full texts of which are included as an appendix).

It all sounds decidedly unappetizing, every bit as much a commercially concocted freak-show as the fictitious "Bang-Bang" and its concerts — but in the event, somehow, it is not. For Aldiss' gifts have turned what could have been a mere comic-book exercise in surrealistic pathology into something infinitely more complicated and more compassionate.

Thus, whereas Pollock's illustrations tend toward the far pole of dehumanized grotesquerie, Aldiss' writing is consistently human and involved, resulting in an eerily effective creation that is hard to describe but even harder to forget. The result is that once-in-a-decade rarity — a genuine tragedy of the grand guignol.

Brothers of the Head is a book calculated to horrify, fascinate, and haunt you. It is also, unexpectedly, one of the most moving and authentically humane stories that I have read in some time.

By contrast, we have to hand another specimen of Aldiss' protean talents — a science-fiction novella called Enemies of the System—and it demonstrates just how effectively this gifted author can function in the medium of conventional narrative, unadorned with pictures but with plenty of conversations. Conversations, however, that ring deliberately false — for, as its subtitle, "A Tale of Homo Uniformis," indicates, this is an anti-socialist dystopia in which all the characters posture woodenly and address themselves in that terribly stilted manner that seems to be the natural idiom of the kind of dehumanizingly "utopian" super-state which Aldiss is here engaged in satirizing.

The book is another novella — a rather short one, not much more than 30,000 words in length. It chronicles the misadventures of a bus-load of vacationing bureaucrats a million years hence, who find themselves cast away on Lysenka II, "a very primitive planet" where conditions approximate those that prevailed here on Earth during the long-ago Carboniferous Era — and which, thanks to the presence of devoluted descendants of a spaceship-load of U.S. colonists, can also claim the dubious distinction of being "the last refuge of capitalism" in a Marxist-Leninist universe.

A clever morality play, this is a tale told with considerable wit and ingenuity, and more than a touch of the same grotesquely telling imaginativeness which gave rise to the freakish twosome of the Bang-Bang. It is, nevertheless, a very different creation from Brothers of the Head.

For while the appeal of Brothers is mainly to the feelings, that of Enemies is mainly to the intellect. The one book is distinguished by its compassion, the other (as is only appropriate for a fable set in a world where compassion is ideologically unimaginable) is an intellectual psychodrama noteworthy for its coldly mordant wit.

Each tale, in its own way, is a considerable achievement. Taken together, the two comprise a striking demonstration of Brian Aldiss' remarkable range and prowess as a writer — a remarkable talent that is perfectly capable of functioning effectively both with and without the aid of another's pictures.

Canada's unity problem isn't helped By fatuous question-and-answer books

Barry Broadfoot started it when he picked a Canada Council grant into his hip-pocket and a tape recorder into his knapsack and set out across the land to gather memories of Canadians who had survived the Depression. His four coast-to-coast tours resulted in the publication five years ago of Ten Lost Years, an enormously successful book.

Broadfoot gave us a grass roots history of the Dirty Thirties, an era of greed and heroism and determination and despair. His was a worthwhile venture. It should have stopped there. But it didn't. Success breeds copycats, but the copycats have nothing in common with Broadfoot except the ability to wangle grants and hold a microphone.

For example, take Heather Menzies — and you're most welcome to her. She's a Quebec-born, Alberta-based freelance writer who got the idea of questioning Canadians about the national unity issue in general and the Quebec question in particular. It was clearly an idea whose time for financial assistance had come. The little lady not only tapped the Canada Council but also the Alberta Department of Culture, the Ontario Arts Council, and Pacific Western Airlines.

Well, why not?, you ask, and I'm glad you did. It simply doesn't make sense. While Broadfoot performed a service by recording a slice of social history for posterity, Heather Menzies is dealing with an intangible which only time will resolve. In effect, she offers us a non-statistical opinion poll between hard covers and, as you might expect, the opinions merely reflect the disunity we know exists.

The book's title, The Railroad's Not Enough, is a clear statement of the obvious. By implication, Canadians can only be positive about a negative. At least, that's what I gathered from this non-book, which demands a non-review, which is what it's going to receive.

The first thing to note is that Miss M is a bad interviewer, which is a drawback when that is all you have to sell. Interviewing is a fine art. To combat self-consciousness and gain a person's confidence it is necessary to make him or her forget "the interview." Having relaxed them with small talk, you cajole them into answering your questions without arousing suspicion. Oh, it's deceitful alright, but it's the only way to gain a truthful response.

Miss M takes the head-on approach, as employed by the uninspired questioner on CBC's Cross-Country Check-up. Her formula is, "What does Canada mean to you?" Naturally, most of her victims evaded the question and rambled on about their own problems and had to be brought back to the point. Having got an answer, however ill-considered, she appears to have thankfully punched the 'stop' button and moved on to her next victim. "And what does Canada mean to you?"

She posed the question to the most unlikely people, including a young down-trodden, under-nourished abandoned wife who could think of nothing but how she was going to find enough money to feed her kids. "Canada's just a name I guess," said the poor frantic creature, and Miss M uses that as evidence that to become a nation we've got to smarten up.

Apart from the asininity of the project, the book has a most depressing effect on the reader because the formula question invariably evinced the formula answer, "It (Canada) doesn't mean anything to me." There were variations of course, such as "It's okay I guess, but . . . "; "I never think about Canada"; and "To me, Canada is merely a question of dollars."

The "I'm in it for me" attitude exists everywhere if you're willing to believe this absurd book. In the Maritimes, where unemployment is rampant, people think only of themselves. Affluent Albertans talk about affluent Alberta, period. In B.C. it's every man for himself. Everywhere it seems the pay-cheque is the only reality and Canada is abstract.

The signal exception to the rule is Quebec, where our reporter found a lot of thinking people who talked to her intelligently about politics, economics, the arts, and of course the 'French fact'. The contrast between Quebecers and the rest of us is so marked that one dares to wonder whether the tilt in the book is deliberate. I don't think it is. It just seems so, perhaps because Quebecers are at this moment more conscious of Canada than people elsewhere in the country, but more likely because our itinerant reporter talked to the wrong people in English-speaking Canada.

At all events, should this book fall into the hands of a foreigner he will gain the impression that, apart from the intellectual enclave of Quebec, Canada is a non-nation of parochial bigots who worship no other god than the Buck, and that the only time all provincial barriers are lowered and the nation is united is when Team Canada plays against the Soviet Union.

In one section of the book devoted to her own thoughts, la Menzies tells us she found the public to be frustrated, cynical and apathetic and that "if we are to achieve the dream of Canada as a 'mutual aid' society, we must all commit ourselves, feel responsible and get involved. Otherwise, decentralization, balkanization and separatism will become historical inevitabilities." There!

The thought, which is neither profound nor original, represents the hysterical approach and is patent nonsense. The achievement of unity takes time, a long time, and it takes more than wishing to make it so. Canada really is a young country and we should not forget that. A week or so ago I was talking to an elderly lady whose father lived and worked in Victoria before Confederation. That's how young we are.

In due course national unity will come about naturally and imperceptibly by the unifying process of the arts. At the moment this country lacks its own schools of music, painting and literature, those subtle forces that provide a nation with a distinctive flavor. It will come, given time. The concern should be whether sufficient time is available.

One thing is certain: unity cannot be imposed, and fatuous books like the one under discussion serve only to increase regional resentments and therefore to delay the very unity they profess to encourage. In short, in trying to be helpful the misguided Heather Menzies is in fact being destructive.

Achieving national unity in a bilingual country is not easy, as any Belgian or Yugoslav will attest, but while we await the coming of our own Wagner, Elgar, Sibelius or Gershwin, to say nothing of that elusive Great Canadian Novel, we might make a humble start with some distinctive popular songs. This desperate need provides me with an opportunity to end this piece on a lighter note.

In 1965 Premier W.A.C. Bennett led a trade mission to Japan. All went well until the final evening when the premier and his cabinet colleagues were guests of their Japanese opposite numbers at a formal-informal dinner party at which a full bevy of geisha girls was present.

After the meal, the girls entertained with dances and songs and then the Japanese ministers sang a popular national song — and then they invited their guests to reciprocate, explaining that it was a custom of the country. What happened then was retailed to me by a reporter friend who witnessed it.

Bennett and his ministers were on the spot. They didn't know what to do but they were fearful of offending their hosts. They went into an undignified huddle and someone suggested 'Alouette', but that was vetoed because it was hardly British Columbian, and anyway no one knew the words! The ministers, flustered by the glassy gaze of their inscrutable hosts, searched frantically for a song — any song — they all knew and eventually, and with no little embarrassment, they gave a half-hearted, off-key rendering of that great 'Canadian' folk classic 'Home on the Range'!

So, certainly the railroad's not enough. Neither is "economic nationalism (whatever that means) more important than any number of O Canada's", as Heather Menzies suggests. If we're out for unity, then for starters what we need is a rousing folk song for our politicians to sing when abroad. That'll be the day!

Gimmicks, Cliches Pale Beside Novel of the 'Ordinary'

By WALT KELLYTHORNE

These two novels demand to be read — for entirely different reasons. And the reasons why one reads each book are, perhaps, the reasons why one will live in its readers' hearts long after the other has disappeared from the airport paperback racks it will soon undoubtedly grace.

Thomas Gifford's The Glendower Legacy is the thriller. The complicated, exciting plot is centered around, if you will, an elaborate game being played by the head of the Soviet secret police on his American counterpart. A string of killings by a pair of psychotics working for both sides follows, along with chases, commando actions and plenty of Boston street directions to lend the whole thing versimilitude.

Gifford's novel is so replete with gimmickry and cliched characters its truth — which seems to be that once the madmen in charge decide to play, everyone suffers — is at best obscured, at worst nonexistent for the reader ensnared in the unfolding chaos.

And, of course, there's romance, too, in the form of a sidereal dance conducted by a dashing Harvard professor and a beautiful news reporter (female) that lends a nice touch of sanity to the games going on. Or does it? Attempts at sophisticated humor end up as cloying coyness too often, and in the end the bed — object of so much silly manouevering (or at least ground for the real object) — might as well remain empty for all the interest its erstwhile occupants manage to generate.

Read The Glendower Legacy in the bath. Both your muscles and your mind will relax.

While the bed — or beds — in Mystical Union are definitely part of the scene, it's the relationship between the characters, and the characters themselves, that provide the basis of the truth so abundant in Don Robertson's novel.

Mystical Union (the title is from a Biblical celebration of marriage) follows the people of Paradise Falls, Ohio in their decades-long attempts to come to terms with their partners — and, ultimately, with themselves.

Though the cast of characters and situations is a large one, and the chapters are extremely short, two characters provide the focus in Mystical Union.

Don Pilgrim and Barbara Sellers, married twice to each other and divorced twice, seem to exemplify a problem encountered by many couples: finding the balance between the public and the personal, between marriage and the social existence it demands and one's own solitary life and its solitary rewards. And though Don Pilgrim and Barbara Sellers might be viewed as examples (or archetypes), both are rendered in such simple, human terms — she with her buck teeth and brilliant smile (silver braces!), he with his passion for trains — that they become people one suspects one might know oneself if one could only see them as clearly.

What emerges clearly as we follow Don and Barbara and all the other characters in Mystical Union through their days is the idea that marriage, even if — or perhaps especially if — it's founded in love, can't survive, and its partners grow, if that's all there is.

People, Robertson seems to be saying, need more: they need a clear strong sense of themselves and they need a form of work, or task, that challenges their energy and spirit in the outside world. Without those, the union will probably fail — even if, technically, it lasts. It's no accident that Robertson's novel is full of dying people, and the terse descriptions of their struggles are graphic symbols of marriage's power to kill.

Finally, a most pleasing feature of Mystical Union is its vivid portrayal of women.

Unlike so many male writers, Don Robertson seems unafraid to present women fully as strong — in their laughter, pain, intelligence and will — as men. Barbara, Dotty, Daisy, Mrs. Ridpath and others are at least as alive as the men they know, and it's to Robertson's credit that his subtle presentation of their special problems aptly enhances their power and strength.

Or maybe the credit should go to the people themselves: ordinary people living ordinary lives. Caught here so well, they're extraordinary, and will always be so.

SADAT BEGIN

Nobel Prize For Sadat, Begin

OSLO (Reuter) — President Anwar Sadat of Egypt and Prime Minister Menachem Begin of Israel will share the 1978 Nobel Peace Prize, the Norwegian Nobel Committee announced here today.

The two Middle East leaders, for 11 months engaged in an often-difficult drive to end 30 years of Arab-Israeli hostility, had been prominently mentioned as likely candidates for the prize.

This year's prize carries a cash award of $165,000.

Ironically, the prize was awarded at a time when Israel and Egypt have once again hit a snag in their peace-treaty negotiations and prospects are uncertain for a treaty by mid-December, the deadline Sadat and Begin promised to meet after their summit conference at Camp David, Md., with U.S. President Carter in September.

The Nobel Committee said in its citation that by awarding the Peace Prize to Begin and Sadat "the committee wishes not only to honor actions already performed in the service of peace, but also encourage further efforts to work out practical solutions which can give reality to those hopes of a lasting peace as they have been kindled by the agreements."

Committee head Aase Lionaes issued a statement saying that "with the historic visit of [illegible] Jerusalem last Nov. 19-21, 1977, a breach was forced in the psychological wall which for a whole generation has blocked understanding and human contact between Egypt and Israel."

Sadat, 59, and Begin, who will be 65 Nov. 18, are the first Arab and Israeli citizens to win the Peace Prize. Sadat is the second winner from the African continent. South African black leader Albert Luthuli won the prize in 1960.

Last year's Peace Prize winner was Amnesty International, the London-based human rights organization. Mairead Corrigan and Betty Williams, founders of the Peace People organization in Northern Ireland, won the 1976 prize, which was awarded a year late.

TALKS MOOTED

JERUSALEM (Reuter) — Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin may meet with U.S. President Carter in Washington next week to try to heal a widening rift between their two countries concerning Israeli settlements on occupied Arab land, Israeli government sources said today.

Begin is due to make unofficial appearances in the United States on his way to Canada for an official visit starting Nov. 6.

No Jail Terms For Defaulters

Persons unable to pay fines will not have to go to jail in default under a new program being set up by the attorney-general's ministry.

Called the Fine Option program, it will be launched as a pilot project this January in five Vancouver Island communities — Victoria, Duncan, Nanaimo, Courtenay and Campbell River.

Under the program judges will be able to sentence persons to community service work instead of jail in cases where there has been a default in paying a fine.

John Proudfoot, a program analyst for the corrections branch, said the program is modelled partly after similar schemes that have been operating in Alberta and Saskatchewan for several years.

He said the John Howard Society of Vancouver Island will run the program in the Nanaimo area while community service order officers will run it in the other locations, both on a trial basis to determine which is the more effective approach.

In Saskatchewan the program is exclusively run by community organizations.

Proudfoot said if the program is successful after nine months it will likely be expanded to other centres throughout the province.

'Judicial Pickup' Probed

VANCOUVER (CP) — Lawrence Doulet, British Columbia's chief provincial court judge, has ordered an investigation into a claim that a judge picked up a prostitute in Vancouver last week.

Making the claim is George Peden a downtown hotel security manager, who said he witnessed the pick-up while accompanied by two Canada Immigration officials who were watching for United States prostitutes operating in Canada illegally.

The officers refused to discuss the incident.

Asked how he knew the woman to be a prostitute and the man to be a judge, Peden replied that he has seen the judge in court and that the woman told him she was a prostitute.

Under the Provincial Court Act, the chief judge either dismisses the complaint or recommends an official inquiry by the Judicial Council which can recommend to the provincial government that the judge be removed from the bench.

Peden said he felt obliged to bring the matter to the chief judge's attention because of the high moral regard citizens must have for the judiciary system.

"I feel an incident like this could hamper the decisions that this particular judge could bring against a prostitute," he said.

RESEARCHER LETS SECRET OUT

'Most UIC Recipients Likely Don't Need It'

VANCOUVER (CP) — Surveys by Employment and Immigration Canada say up to 90 per cent of Canadians collecting unemployment insurance might not need it, researcher Michael Walker said Thursday.

Walker, of the privately-funded Fraser Institute in Vancouver, said the government figures, which have not been made public, show that most recipients of unemployment insurance do not need the money to survive.

The figures also show that a planned tightening of unemployment benefits will not put a heavy load on provincial welfare departments, Walker said.

The disclosure follows a report Wednesday by Auditor-General J. J. Macdonell which estimates that $142 million in unemployment insurance benefits were overpayed to Canadians under the current system in 1977.

A federal-provincial study group was established following an announcement last month that the federal government plans to cut the cost of the program by $580 million next year by making it harder to qualify and reducing payments to those who do.

"The task force has admitted that government figures show that only 10 per cent of people who become disentitled from unemployment insurance show up on the welfare roles," said Walker.

"That gives you a pretty good clue as to how many people need the benefits. They can go one of three ways when their unemployment runs out. They can go on welfare, they can find a job, or they find they didn't need the benefits at all.

"If you consider that the unemployment insurance benefits were their only source of income (which it usually must be to qualify), then clearly up to 90 per cent of those people were able to get along without it or they would have to go on welfare."

Walker said many unreleased studies have shown that most recipients are not in need but the studies have not been released because they put the federal government in a bad light.

"And as well they weaken the case for provincial ministers such as Bill Vander Zalm (provincial human resources minister) because they have been arguing that the cutbacks in the program will be a burden to the provinces' welfare plans.

Georgio Gaudet, provincial chairman of the study group, said in an interview from New Brunswick that

Trade Surplus $631M

OTTAWA (CP) — The merchandise trade surplus for September was $631 million, the best monthly showing since March, Statistics Canada reported today.

It brought the merchandise trade surplus for the third quarter of the year to $751 million — a 12-per-cent increase from the second quarter surplus of $674 million, but only about half the $1.5 billion surplus recorded in the first quarter of 1978.

News of the surplus caused a jump in the Canadian dollar of nearly half a cent at New York this morning and took it over the 85-cent mark for the first time in weeks. At the same time the U.S. dollar declined further on news of a continuation in the American trade deficit.

The Canadian merchandise trade surplus for the first nine months of the year now stands at $2.88 billion. At the same time last year it was $1.81 billion.

The federal agency says the third-quarter showing, while small by comparison with the surplus for the January-to-April period is exceptional for this time of year by historical standards.

Both exports and imports rose sharply in September from August. Exports were up by 20 per cent to $4.7 billion and imports increased by 9.5 per cent to $3.9 billion.

The cumulative merchandise trade surplus for the year at the end of September was 60 per cent higher than the total for the first three quarters of 1977.

September's large surplus is attributed by the federal agency to increases in exports of motor vehicles and parts, especially trucks, forestry products, metals and machinery.

There were more imports of industrial materials, trucks, automotive parts, machinery and other equipment in September than in the previous month. Most of the imports were from the United States.

There was a drop last month in the import of passenger cars from above-aver-

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau said today he will not permit the McDonald royal commission to sift through confidential cabinet documents "in the hopes they are going to find some illegality."

But Trudeau told the Commons in reply to New Democrat Leader Ed Broadbent that he would permit publication of any cabinet document that shows evidence that cabinet ministers knew Mounties were breaking the law.

Trudeau was under pressure from opposition members to explain why government lawyers had refused to allow the McDonald commission on RCMP wrongdoing to see four confidential government documents.

The lawyer for retired RCMP commission W. L. Higgitt had argued Thursday the documents would back up Higgitt's statements earlier this week that former solicitors-general had been aware that Mounties were breaking the law in the course of their duties. (See also story on page 9).

Trudeau said the government lawyers had not received any specific instructions from him to withhold the documents from the commission. They had objected because Pierre Lamontagne, Higgitt's lawyer, had not given any advance notice that he wanted to produce the documents.

He said goyernment lawyers had been "caught by surprise."

Pressed by Opposition leader Joe Clark for a "categorical assurance" that every government document would be made available to the McDonald commission, regardless of a secret or confidential classification, Trudeau said this had already been given "in a general way."

But he insisted that there could never be release "of any and all minutes" of cabinet discussions. The secrecy of cabinet discussions had to be maintained.

Higgitt, who has maintained that Warren Allmand and Jean-Pierre Goyer were told the force had opened mail, had his credibility called into question at the hearings Thursday.

A spokesman said Canadian officials who requested the resumption say they will not be able to accept mail from the United States before that date because of the backlog caused by the walkout of postal workers that ended Thursday.

SHADBOLT

Shadbolt Charged For Tax

BURNABY (CP) — Jack Shadbolt, an internationally-known Canadian artist, has been charged with six criminal offences of evading taxes and filing false income tax statements.

The charges, relating to the taxation years 1970 to 1974, involve the alleged undeclared receipt of almost $42,000, mainly from the sale of paintings, and the alleged evasion of about $13,000 in federal taxes, says Crown counsel Michael Slater.

The six counts — one of evasion and five of filing false statements — each carry a maximum fine of double the tax owed, and a maximum two-year jail sentence.

Shadbolt, 69, is pleading not guilty to all six counts in a provincial court trial that began this week.

A resident of this Vancouver suburb, Shadbolt has represented Canada in exhibitions around the world and his commissioned works include murals in Edmonton International Airport and the CBC building in Vancouver.

Ottawa Cuts Pension Index

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government introduced legislation Thursday that would put limits on cost-of-living increases in the pensions of former federal employees and their survivors in an attempt to get costs of the controversial plan under control.

Under terms of the legislation, introduced by Treasury Board President Robert Andras, pension increases for all former employees and their survivors, including the military, the RCMP and MPs, would no longer be indexed to rise automatically with the cost of living as they have since 1974.

Instead, increases to offset the effects of inflation on pensions would be given on an ad hoc basis beginning Jan. 1, 1979.

The size of the increase would be tied to earnings on the pension plan contributions made by the former employees as well as to the size of a special indexing fund to which all employees now contribute.

They say next year's increase will fall below the nine-per-cent that would have been received Jan. 1 by about 200,000 former employees and their survivors under the existing formula. Officials say best estimates are that the increases will be about eight per cent.

The increases now are received at age 55, when employees with 30 years' service can retire. The legislation would gradually raise to 60 the age at which the increases are received.

Beginning in 1979, ad hoc increases would begin at age 56 and be stepped up each year, reaching age 60 by 1983.

Another section of the bill would close a loophole in the pension plan that allowed an employee to retire Dec. 31 and collect his or her pension along with a full year's cost-of-living increase the next day.

The increases to help offset inflation now will be prorated by months of retirement. An employee retiring in June would get a six-month adjustment while the employee retiring Dec. 31 would get nothing.

Volunteers Can Strike It Rich

By CAROL SPELLER
Times Staff

Volunteers.

The do-gooders. Selfless individuals. Helpers for the helpless. Sensitive and caring people. Altruists.

Not necessarily so, says Dot Roberts, executive director of the Victoria Volunteer Bureau.

"There's more to it than that."

The reasons for volunteering are as varied as the volunteers themselves, and many discover the work pays off richly in a variety of ways.

"All kinds of people volunteer," Roberts says waving both arms. "Men, women children, transients, professionals, unskilled laborers, the unemployed.

Many people do volunteer work to get job experience.

"There's heavy competition for jobs and this gives an extra edge over a person who has never volunteered. Employers now are putting a space on application forms for volunteer work."

And for people who have graduated from university and still don't know what they want to do, volunteering is a way of sampling possible careers.

There's a choice of about 30 different areas in which to work, so people who visit the bureau and say: "Well, I'd just like to volunteer," will have their memories prodded and probably rediscover a long-forgotten interest or skill.

She says volunteering is also a good way to meet people; to get to know the community and to establish a place in life.

☆

Projects co-ordinator Margaux Finlayson agrees.

"In volunteering you get a mix of people, whereas in a job you tend to gravitate toward people who are like you."

"The increase in self-esteem and self-worth is a real payoff.

"People come in here and say they feel guilty and selfish because they want to get something out of volunteering."

About 25 per cent of Victorians are active volunteers and a study done in 1976 shows that half the people in Canada have done volunteer work.

About 700 people a year visit the bureau's home at suite 204 in the aging Central Building on View Street.

And Roberts says that's only the tip of the iceberg because most people go directly to the agency they're interested in working for.

But the bureau's attitude is everyone has something to offer and for those who aren't sure where their talents lie, the staff will find them.

With only a paid staff of three — Roberts, Finlayson and office manager Lynne Shields — the bureau acts as a referral agency and information centre.

Volunteers work with the physically or metally handicapped, help with after-school programs, provide transportation, work in day care centres, organize recreational programs, assist the elderly, lend needed hands at hospitals, act as community group directors and planners, sponsor probationers or prisoners, become foster-grandparents for single-parent families, assist physiotherapists, help with environmental programs and become Big Brothers or Sisters, just to name a few.

☆

Finlayson says emphasis is placed on communication skills which are important when dealing with other people.

The group also discusses volunteering, share experiences, are shown slides on different agencies who use volunteers and "they get to meet other people to see what they're doing."

About 80 per cent of the bureau's funds come from the human resources ministry, the rest from United Way and donations.

When 21-year-old Barb Hetherington visited the bureau three years ago she wanted to work with children.

"But there were so many jobs. I didn't believe all the different things you can do."

She volunteers at the volunteer bureau doing promotion and public relations work, supervises social evenings at Laurel House for the Canadian Mental Health Association, is a part-time psychology student at Camosun College and holds down two part-time jobs.

She has also worked for the United Way and the Crisis Line.

She volunteered because "I was dissatisfied with groups and organizations when I was in college. I wanted to do something different."

Will she keep on volunteering?

"Definitely. I enjoy the things I've been doing so much."

Everybody has something to offer says executive director Dot Roberts

Residents' Suit Seeks To Disqualify Paterson

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

A petition was filed in B.C. Supreme Court Thursday seeking a declaration that Saanich Ald. David Paterson should be removed from office for disqualification through an alleged conflict of interest.

The petition is part of a legal action by the Cadboro Bay Residents Association designed to overturn the recent Saanich council decision approving the Minnie Mountain residential development project at Ten Mile Point.

Paterson has seven days in which to indicate his intentions in the case.

He said today he cannot comment on his plans until he has had an opportunity to obtain legal advice.

The alderman voted in favor of the development proposal by Broadmead Farms Ltd., following last month's public hearing and when council gave the bylaw final approval earlier this week.

On both occasions the vote margin of approval was 5-4. If the Cadboro Bay association's legal fight succeeds the Broadmead project would be killed.

The alleged conflict of interest involves Paterson's position as an alderman in relation to his professional role as an employee of a firm associated with solicitors Pearlman and Lindholm, which has acted for the developers.

Paterson said earlier he was satisfied, from legal advice he had received, that there was no reason why he should have been disqualified from voting on the Minnie Mountain issue.

Accompanying the petition filed Thursday are affidavits signed by several members of the residents' association.

They seek a declaration that Paterson be "disqualified from continuing in office as an alderman" and that he be "removed from office as an alderman . . . by reason of his having become disqualified from holding office as an alderman for the corporation of the district of Saanich since his election to that office."

Federal Environment Minister Len Marchand made it official today: the weatherships Quadra and Vancouver will be in business after next April 19.

Marchand said the two ships will stay in service at least until April, 1981, because he has not been convinced that an adequate alternative service can be provided.

The minister said the weather data provided by the two ships is vital to West Coast mariners and fishermen.

The two ships were to have been phased out next April as part of the federal government's cost-cutting measures.

Are Legs Being Polled?

All fall there were rumors of a phantom election and now a phantom province-wide political poll is making the rounds.

Or are they perhaps related?

Opposition leader Dave Barrett feels they are.

A secretive outfit calling itself the Canadian Polling Institute carried out an intensive opinion survey of B.C. householders asking a series of questions about taxation and the efficiency of the provincial government.

The Canadian Polling Institute, however, doesn't seem to exist. No company of that name is registered in Canada and no one has ever heard of it before.

None of the province's four main political parties will admit to commissioning any poll under any name.

Barrett, however, says he is convinced the poll was conducted by the Social Credit government of Premier Bill Bennett and the results were so disastrous for his party that he dropped all thought of a fall election.

Then there was that gathering the other night to officially launch the new NDP association in the proposed new provincial riding of Esquimalt-Port Renfrew.

You remember — that's the one where hometown policeman Sgt. Frank Mitchell and his supporters are calmly carving up the faction that's trying to parachute in party bigwig Andy Brewin as the candidate in the next provincial election.

At the meeting, the Brewin backers proposed a new-look executive to the faithful and saw their slate rejected by a more than 2-1 margin.

A cog must have slipped in the University of Victoria Computing and Systems Newsletter.

Ordinarily the publication is merely hard to understand, being filled with stuff like, "regression model validation" . . . "expanded batch execution" . . . "STATLIB EXEC procedure," and "the simplistic interface."

The latest edition looked more bizzare than usual and we really puzzled over contributions made by A.C. Bre::, D.C. Gille:: and D. S:o:hard, in phrases consisting of:

"new da:a :o :est . . . :he : se:s have similar s:a:is:ical proper:ies . . . files crea:ed during ba:ch execu:ion and the :yping of excerp:s from :he console log . . ."

Then we realized the print-out equipment on which the newsletter is run off is just as fallible as the old fashioned mimeograph when the "t" gets clogged.

There's something Catch 22-ish about that scheme approved Thursday by Victoria aldermen.

The two-bus free downtown shuttle system is to become a temporary one-bus affair.

The idea is to increase the number of passengers using the service.

By using only one bus, the city will save cash.

The money saved will be used to advertise the bus service and hopefully, attract new passengers.

Ald. Bill McElroy, chairman of council's transportation committee, says the whole exercise is self defeating and one of the silliest things he's ever heard.

The name's Jim Mainguy and civil servants in the know say that's just what he was for most of his 37 years as a provincial civil servant.

Mainguy calls his lengthy career quits at the end of this month and his knowledge and quiet expertise will be missed around the legislature, particularly in the health department.

Mainguy, who bows out with the rank of deputy health minister, grew up in Duncan and attended the University of B.C. before joining the government.

In 1972 he became assistant deputy minister in charge of hospital insurance and in 1975 he was appointed deputy minister of the ministry.

Only the computer knows for sure and so far, it ain't telling.

Seems Victoria General Hospital expects a year-end deficit of $500,000 and the board's finance committee reports the deficit is hidden somewhere in the hospital's new computer system.

TOWN TALK

The indications are however, the deficit is beyond the hospital's control.

Reasons for the deficit could be rising costs in areas such as energy, medical and surgical supplies.

The talk at the University of Victoria these days is all about how the the campus will be the site of B.C.'s second medical school.

As the demand for more B.C.-trained doctors grows, UVic will be the logical choice because it has enough space for a medical school to complement existing facilities at the University of B.C. That's the optimistic reasoning.

But when?

Maybe next spring, maybe five years from now, says Fairclough. Petch, however, is not as optimistic.

Ald. Bill McElroy's traffic committee on city council has been warning of the accident hazard posed by utility poles placed too near the curb on city streets — and has worked to improve some streets, especially the Bay-Cook intersection.

Somebody should write a doctoral thesis on the love-hat relationship between elected officials and headgear. Seems politicians are always trying on Indian war bonnets, Stetsons or as in this case, a fireman's hat. Premier Bill Bennett became the latest to succumb when he was made an honorary Saanich fire chief. He is shown shaking hands with Fire Chief Art Fryer while Saanich Mayor Mel Couvelier, right, seems to think whole thing's hilarious
